LONGBOAT THE SOLDIER.

Sportsmen's Battalion Due for Medal if They Train Runner.

TORONTO, Feb. 21. — The Sportsmen's Battalion leaders have a job on their hands. Tom Longboat is transferring to that overseas unit and the man who makes a real soldier out of the elusive Thomas is entitled to retire on a pension on completion of the job and to the hearty thanks of all concerned but the Indian himself, who will be the most surprised man of the lot. When the wily Redskin was seen on the street in his new uniform recently before he acquired the hair trim in regulation military style, someone bet the other fellow that Captain Tom Flanagan would once again resign gracefully in the course of the next month (his second it may be his third) attempt to control the erratic Longboat. In former days the Marathoner's idea of obeying instructions was delightfully vague and uproariously funny. If told to meet the Mayor at the City Hall at a definite hour nothing tickled Tom so much as the hour for the appointment drew near as to be idling around the Humber and arrive very late, if at all, a huge joke on the Mayor. Now, if you can once get his point of view it is easy to imagine what will happen when he is ordered to "right turn." If he is in the mood for a joke just then, he will fool the instructor by turning to the left or not turning at all, and, provided the drill sergeant feels that way too, they will have a heap of fun. His democratic spirit was strongly manifested in meeting Lieut.-Col. R. H. Greer for the first time, he remarked, "I know we will get on well together for, even though I have been seven years longer in the army than you have, I am always willing to give you the benefit of my advice." Tom is nothing if not democratic.

OVERSHADOWS ALL OTHERS FOR PURITY AND FLAVOR

Was Troubled With BOILS
ALL OVER HIS BODY.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms manifesting themselves are a breaking out on some part of the body of various sorts of bad blood troubles, such as boils, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, etc.

How many times have you met a friend with a handkerchief tied around his neck, and have asked him; "What is the matter with you?" "Oh! I have a boil on the back of my neck! I guess I will have to take something for my blood."

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, and the speediest and most thorough method of expelling all the useless and corrupt matter from the blood is to use this old and well tried remedy that has been on the market for the past forty years.

Mr. W. E. Cockerill, Golden, B.C., writes: "I was troubled with boils all over my body, and my blood was very bad. I tried all kinds of medicines and salves, but got no relief. I had to quit work, as I could not stoop to do anything. My boss told me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, after I had told him I had tried nearly everything else. I got one bottle of B.B.B., and before I had finished it the boils were all gone. It is the best blood cleanser I have ever taken. I have told several others who were suffering with boils, and they all say it is great medicine. I am forty-seven years of age, but I feel like sixteen since I got rid of the boils."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Girl Who Drove the Cows to Pasture

A Story For St. Valentine's Day

By SARAH BAXTER

"Grandpa, won't you tell us a valentine story?" said a miss of fourteen. "You told us a story for Christmas, and I think you might do the same now that St. Valentine's day has come around."

"St. Valentine's day has changed from what it was when I was a youngster. It is now a day for little children to send and receive valentines.

"I see no reason why the sending of valentines when they are in good taste should not be observed today among those of the mating age. The only objection is the abuse of the custom, but I admit that it is a serious objection. There are special cases where a valentine may bring two persons together in a happy marriage. For instance, suppose a young man admires a girl he does not know and has no means of knowing."

"Never mind all that, grandpa. We want the story."

"I would not consider 'all that' essential had it not been for the change that has come over the custom of sending valentines, warping it from its original purity. However, I have no more to say by way of preface and will begin:

"There was once upon a time a young fellow—we'll call him Jim—who lived in the country. He had never had anything to do with girls and knew nothing about them. He was red headed and freckled, and when he looked in the glass it seemed to him he was so homely that he would have to live all his life without a wife or children to love him, for no girl would have him. So he said to himself, 'I'll always keep away from girls, because I might fall in love with one of them, and in that case I might die of a broken heart.' It seemed hardly necessary to make such a resolution, for Jim was never thrown in with girls, and if he had been he was too bashful to become at all companionable with any of them.

"What was Jim's surprise one day to receive a valentine. It came in an envelope—the same as you children use now—covered with Cupids and arrows piercing hearts and was addressed to him in a girl's handwriting. He stared at the outside, for a time not realizing that it was for him and wondering if there was not some mistake about it. Since he did not know a girl how could a girl send him a valentine? But there was his name written out in full, with his usual address at the village, a mile away from the farm. Still doubting, he opened the envelope and took out the prettiest valentine you ever saw. In its center was a colored picture of a young man and a girl sitting in a bower, and the very sight of it made Jim's finger tips tingle. In each of the four corners was a Cupid with a bow and arrow, and every arrow was aimed at the couple in the bower. Jim has seen many a valentine since, but they have no such effect as this first and only valentine he ever received when he was young and was conscious that with all his red hair and freckles and ungainly farm walk there was a girl in the world who thought enough of him to send him a valentine. Today valentines are to him nothing more than cheap stamped pieces of paper with colored pictures."

"How do you know how he feels about the valentines, grandpa?" asked a little girl.

"How do I know it? Because— If you care to hear the end of the story you mustn't interrupt me."

"Jim, who had made a resolution that he would have nothing to do with any girl for fear he might fall in love and die of a broken heart, found himself all of a sudden dwelling continually on a girl he had never seen. He formed a great many mental pictures of her, which gradually settled down to one that remained always the same—a girl with golden hair, blue eyes, rosy cheeks, a dimple in each, and a sweet smile. If he was following the plow this girl walked beside him. If he was milking she was milking another cow near him. When he ate his meals she sat opposite him at table. Indeed, wherever he was, whatever he was doing, she was with him.

"One thing Jim couldn't understand. If there was a girl in the world who fancied him, with all his red hair and freckles, why didn't she put something on the valentine to give him a clew to whom she was? Not knowing anything about girls, he was ignorant of the fact that a girl's great delight is to bother any young fellow she happens to fancy, and the more she fancies him the more she likes to tease him.

"Of course there were girls in that part of the country, though Jim didn't know any of them, else how could he have received a valentine? After its receipt every girl he met he looked at to see if she showed any preference for him. He was too unused to them to understand their tricks and their manners and did not know that the girl who fancied him would be sure to try to make him think she didn't or if she showed a preference one day keenly at the impassive face of the oriental, "I wish to ask you a few questions concerning the last hours of your late master, Mr. Burdick."

"Yes, honorable," returned the man, but Day fancied that the impassivity of his face was broken by a quiver of surprise.

"Did Mr. Burdick appear to be particularly concerned about any matter? Was he troubled in mind?"

"He had that appearance," returned Hatsu cautiously, after long thought.

"In what way?" asked Day sharply.

"He talked much to himself, and he was usually a silent man," said Hatsu thoughtfully. "One day, the very day he passed out into the hands of the gods, I found him wandering about the rooms, looking into hole and corner, and he was muttering words."

"What words?"

"I could not make for sure, honorable," returned the man after another interval of thought, "but it seemed that he wished to hide something, for he said over and over that he must conceal it, yet it must be found. 'Hidden and found, hidden and found,' those were his words.

"I was alarmed at his behavior, and I ran out for help. When I returned he was stretched on the floor of this room senseless, and it was later in the day that he died without a word."

"And you found nothing in the room—the thing that he might have tried to conceal?" questioned Day.

"Nothing, excellency," returned Hatsu.

Day dismissed him, and later in the evening when all the servants had retired to their quarters John Day made an exhaustive search of the house. He left the library till the last, and it was long after midnight when he turned into that dimly lighted room.

He looked around.

Where would he conceal a large diamond as big as a hazel nut if he had been minded to conceal such a gem?

Under the rugs? Within the vases? In a niche of the carving? Within that grinning idol?

There were a score of places to choose from.

He began with the rugs, groping carefully over every inch of their surface for the missing stone.

The rugs refused to divulge the secret.

Then the innumerable curios. The grinning idol when shaken gave back a dust of sandalwood and a smell of joss sticks. The ivory elephant refused to offer any hiding place.

The Kokuro vase on the mantelpiece—

John Day looked at its graceful outlines. There was a gray surface traced with delicate cherry boughs and flying birds. The neck was very small. He took it down and examined it. The missing diamond would never have entered that tiny orifice, yet it must be somewhere.

Suddenly in the silent house there came a sound.

Into the darkened room came a bent form holding a lighted lantern. The glow of the light showed the tense features of—Hatsu, the house boy.

He looked furtively around, and then his feet led him swiftly to the mantelpiece, where he took down the Kokuro vase. He glanced over his shoulder into the dusky corners, turned the vase upside down and shook it vigorously. Just as he replaced it there came the sound of another step in the room, and there was the evil countenance of the gardener peering in.

Hatsu turned, saw him, and instantly the two men leaped for each other's throat.

They wrestled silently, each one struggling for a death hold. John Day, standing there behind the screen, marveled at the deadly struggle.

What was it that each one desired—the Kokuro vase?

He stepped forward, removed the vase from its place and slipped it in his pocket. Then as the forms remained silent on the floor he glanced once at them, and, convinced that they would fight it out between them, he went upstairs to his own bedroom and locked every door and window.

He wrapped the vase in a cloth and then shattered it against the edge of his trunk. When he unwrapped the broken pieces there fell into his hands an envelope rolled into a tube. In one end was something round and hard. The envelope was sealed with Burdick's private seal, and on the outside it was addressed to the firm of jewelers in New York of which John Day was now a member.

He slipped the sealed envelope into his inner pocket, and then, his search ended, he went to the library to discover that the fighting servants had vanished. He never saw either of them again.

John Day's trip around the world ended there and then. He took the next steamer for San Francisco, and six weeks later he stepped into the private office of his firm with Henry Burdick's confession and the missing diamond.

Why the guilty man had deferred his confession until the day of his death and why he had never had the courage to use his ill gotten gains no one ever knew. The great diamond had been a curse to him, and its possession had undoubtedly shortened his miserable life.

Now that he was vindicated in the eyes of his fellow men John Day married the girl he loved and retired from business. But he directed that the house in Tokyo be sold, and so the lovely house in the garden by the lane of bamboos has passed into other hands.

As for the shattered Kokuro vase, John Day treasures it highly. He has had it repaired, and it occupies the place of honor in his library.

"ANURIC!"

THE NEWEST DISCOVERY IN CHEMISTRY

This is a recent discovery of Doctor Pierce, who is head of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N.Y. Experiments at Doctor Pierce's Hospital for several years proved that there is no other eliminator of uric acid that can be compared to it. For those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation—as backache, scalding urine and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, it is simply wonderful how surely "Anuric" acts. The best of results are always obtained in cases of acute rheumatism in the joints, in gravel and gout, and invariably the pains and stiffness which so frequently and persistently accompany the disease rapidly disappear.

Go to your nearest drug store and simply ask for a 50-cent package of "Anuric," manufactured by Dr. Pierce, or send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce for a large trial package. If you suspect kidney or bladder trouble send him a sample of your water and describe symptoms. Doctor Pierce's chemist will examine it, then Dr. Pierce will report to you, without fee or charge.

NOTE:—French scientists affirm that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in eliminating uric acid, and is a harmless but reliable chemical compound that may be safely given to children, but should be used only by grown-ups who actually wish to restore their kidneys to perfect health, by conscientiously using one box—or more in extreme cases—as "Anuric" (thanks to Doctor Pierce's achievement) is by far the most perfect kidney and bladder corrector obtainable.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the original little Liver Pills. One little Pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic.

WIND NATURES ORCHESTRA; WHY DOES IT WHISTLE

Did you ever notice that, although you may feel the force of the wind when yo uare out in it, you do not hear it whistle unless you are close to a building? This is because the sound is produced according to the same principles as apply to the production of the tones of a pipe organ or any instrument on which the tones are produced by blowing.

In order to make the whistling sounds we hear from the wind, it is necessary for it to blow against something. That is why we hear it when we are in the house of some other biulding.

The whisthing is caused by the wind blowing past the sharp edge of some obstacle in its path or finding its way through small openings offering some sharp-edged resistance.

If you blow through a long tube or pipe, you will produce no sound, but if there is an opening with a sharp edge near the end where you blow, the blowing will cause a distinct sound. It is on this principle that all small whistles, organ pipes and wind instruments of an orchestra are made.

Another way in which the wind produces sounds is by blowing against objects which vibrate. A curious illustration of this is the humming volume of sound produced by the wind blowing through a group of telegraph wires, and which may be noted, even when there is not a great force of wind, by placing the ear against a telegraph pole.

When the kidneys get ill the back gives out. But the back is not to blame. The ache comes from the kidneys, which lie under the small of the back.

Therefore, dull pain in the back, or sharp, quick twinges, are warnings of sick kidneys—warnings of kidney trouble.

Plasters and liniments will not cure the bad back, for they cannot reach the kidneys which cause it.

Doan's Kidney Pills reach the kidneys themselves. They are a special kidney and bladder medicine. They heal the diseased surface of the kidneys and bladder, and help them to act freely and naturally.

Miss Mary A. Northrop, Cole's Island, N.B., writes: "I have been a sufferer from kidney trouble for two years. I tried quite a number of remedies, but they did me no good. My mother got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they did me so much good that I got the second one, and when I had taken that I was completely cured."

Doan's Kidney Pills, are the original kidney pills. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is on every box. Price, 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

French Aviation Authorities Study The Reasons for German Efficiency in the air

PARIS, Feb. 20 (Correspondence of Associated Press).—French aviation authorities agree that Germany has been able to change its aviation service entirely since the war began, making improvements of a most important character, while it possessed certain advantages over the French flying corps at the outset.

The reasons for the superiority of the Germans in what was considered before the war a French specialty will perhaps become public in the parliamentary debate that is imminent. One aviator attributes the difference to the fact that while the French followed aviation as a sport, the Germans took it up seriously for practical application to the requirements of the army. He points out that the Germans were flying at night long before the war began, while the French began night flying only after the war was several months old.

The same authority warns against the assumption that the results obtained by the French flying corps are negligible. Whatever may be the foundation for criticism of this branch of the service, he says, the results obtained in some ways have been far more appreciable than what the Germans have done. He recalls that during the battle of the Marne, 5th September, 1914, aviators destroyed half of the artillery of the 16th German Army Corps in the region of Triaucourt.

The French stuck to the monoplane until they had captured enough of the German biplanes to give them proof that they were superior for most kinds of air work. At the beginning there was a marked difference in the tactics employed by the German and French airmen. The Germans appeared to avoid contact with the French flyers, either with a view of concentrating their efforts upon other objects than individual combats or with the idea that the encounter might not be equal. The explanation now given by a competent authority is that the Germans lost their best aviators at the outset of the war. As early as 12th September, 1914, the Germans had lost Furstenair, Neumann, Dallurg, Beaulieu, Gresch, Jahnow, Koch, Blutgen, Heyden, and Baudissin.

This seems to explain the French claim that with less efficient material French aviators accomplished more tangible results, such as the destruction of artillery, the blowing up of ammunition depots, destruction of Zeppelins and Zeppelin sheds, and damage to the enemy's field works. The French Army is said to have ample proof to this effect in orders of the day issued from the German General Headquarters, impressing upon the officers and men carefully studied ways of avoiding dangerous arms of the French flying corps.

There seems to be more esprit de corps among the airmen than in any other branch of the service, and greater courtesy between officers of the different armies. The most recent manifestation of it was the dropping by Corporal Kandulski of the German flying corps of a wreath upon the spot where he had brought the celebrated Pegoud to earth, bearing this inscription: "To Pegoud, our enemy, who died like a hero."

In September, 1914, a German pilot established this precedent by dropping in the French lines a courteous notice to the effect that Lieutenant Fouret had been made prisoner at the camp of Chalons. Later on a German aviator dropped behind the French lines a letter from the pilot Senouque, who had been captured by the Germans. In May of this year (1915) when Thauron and Blancpain were brought down by the German artillery, a German aviator flew over the lines and dropped a note giving the circumstances, ending with these words: "Thauron and Blancpain died the death of the brave. Military honours were accorded to them."

When the artist Daniel de Losques was killed in an aerial combat while his squadron was returning from the attack upon Sarrebruck, one of the enemy's flotilla dropped a notice saying: "De Losques and his pilot fought bravely. They are buried at Harburg near Diamont. Their papers will be sent back to France by way of Switzerland."

The present crisis in French aviation is said to be a simple conflict of individual preferences on the part of leading officials of the service. It does not mean, they say, that the flying corps is not in shape to continue efficient work. The question is as to further development and strengthening of the service, so as to do much better work.

WHY WOMEN WRITE LETTERS

To Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

Women who are well often ask "Are the letters which the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. are continually publishing, genuine?" "Are they truthful?" "Why do women write such letters?"

In answer we say that never have we published a fictitious letter or name. Never, knowingly, have we published an untruthful letter, or one without the full and written consent of the woman who wrote it.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and suffering.

It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, nervousness, weakness, stomach troubles and from the blues.

It is impossible for any woman who is well and who has never suffered to realize how these poor, suffering women feel when restored to health; their keen desire to help other women who are suffering as they did.

CALLOUS CRUELTY OF GERMAN PRISONS

Harry M. Field, Former Toronto Musician, Writes of His Experiences in Germany—Men Go Insane and Commit Suicide From Hardships

Some interesting sidelights on the inhuman treatment accorded prisoners of war in Germany, especially the civilians, are given in a letter from Mr. Harry M. Field, the former Toronto musician, and well known in Peterborough, and latterly a professor of music in Germany, who was released from an internment camp by the military authorities in Germany and now resident in England.

The letter was written to friends in the city.

"The Ruhleben experience has once and for all defined my position and attitude toward Germany," he declares. "When we arrived at Ruhleben we were alloted our respective barracks. I walked with my bag to mud and slush almost knee deep to barracks or horse stall No. 5, and trudged up the wooden steps to the loft where I was told I should stay. To my amazement I was told I must sleep on a stray sack, that is a bag filled with damp straw and wedged in a division with five other men so that our bodies actually touched. I had fortunately brought my bed things with me and this helped me to make the most of a gruesome situation. It seemed to me that we were thrown into this infernal place like a lot of animals, and told to shift for ourselves.

Sleep on Straw.

"This was bad enough, but the experience of those who came first in November was ten times as bad. Four fellows I knew from Dresden were given a box from which a moment before a horse had been taken. They were told to clean the box out and were given an armful of straw to sleep on. There was no heating, and the poor chaps did not take their clothes off for two weeks."

Mr. Field further describes how all classes of men were herded together, "criminals were accorded the same treatment as professional gentlemen," he says.

Insufficient Food.

"The German Government allotted six men one wash basin, one towel, one bowl, and if you had no blanket you were allotted once," cantinues Mr Field. "Each man was given 65 pfennings (16 1-11c) worth of food, which consisted of bad coffee in the morning, a tin of soup at noon, which we were obliged to bring from the kitchen, some distance away, and in all kinds of weather. The barracks lined up in order to fetch the food in military fashion. In the evening we were given a piece of sausage, another time bad tea and so on. A loaf of bread was divided among six men, and fellows would often come and ask if you had any bread to spare. There was a canteen where we could buy things, and those who had money could manage to get along, but gradually the supply had been diminishing, and before I left there was no butter, eggs, milk or sugar. Meat was out of the question.

Hardships Affect Prisoners.

"You can easily see from these conditions it is impossible for the prisoners to keep in proper or good health, and it is visibly affecting them. Those who receive parcels from England and the colonies fare better. There are two parcel lists posted up every day, one is German and the other is English. If your name is in either you line up in front of a large window, where a soldier stands inside; a constable stands in front of the window and roars out the names in turn, and the soldiers cuts your parcel open, examines it to see if there is anything disallowed and then passes it on to you. It has frequently happeneed that everything in the parcel has been confiscated and the poor prisoner goes off with empty hands.

Men Go Insane.

"The mental condition of the camp is now not of the best, the men are losing their memories; some are on the verge of lunacy. Two came away with us in that state. The day before I arrived in Ruhleben one man cut his throat. Several have been sent to asylums and sanitoriums. The callousness, indifference and cruelty of the German authorities make one absolutely shudder. It is a fact that they have thrown off the mask, and now show themselves as they are, nothing but fiends. The so-called "kulture" is a cloak. I cannot tell you here all the dreadful and terrible things they have done. No doubt you have read about Wittenberg, where they shot the British down for sport one evening when the British asked to be separated from the Russians, who were communicating a virulent type of typhus.

"They were told that these were their allies, and they should get to know them better. The result was two hundred British soldiers and several civil prisoners died. The German doctor left the camp with nobody to attend to them. They lay there helpless.

Get Solitary Confinement.

"Upon the slightest pretext or complaint of a soldier we got in Ruhleben twelve, twenty-four, forty-eight of seventy-two hours' solitary confinement on bread and water, and a hard bench to lie on.

"There are some talented fellows interned, all kinds—violinists, pianists, composers, conductors, actors, poets, Cambridge and Oxford men, Harrow, Rugby and Clifton School boys, correspondents, engineers, sea captains, sailors, niggers, pickpockets, lots of rats, and, last but not least, the Earl of Perth, whom we called the 'Pearl of the Earth.'

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortroad, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

Krupp Clerks Are Complaining

Say They Are Ill-Paid and Threaten a Walkout.

Discontent among the clerical employes of the Krupp works at Essen has reached such a state that, despite the risk incurred through such talk, there are rumours of an impending walk-out unless the gun-making firm consents to improve the working conditions of its bookkeepers and clerks, according to reports redited to the Berliner Vorwarts reaching this country by way of London.

The columns of the German press were filled in November last with unstinted praise of the great armament concern, because its annual report showed that, of the extra profit of $13,750,000 made during the year, some $6,080,000 had been devoted to special war charities. The Kaiser sent a telegram congratulating the company upon "this renewed evidence of noble-minded patriotic feeling."

"Great discontent prevails among the clerical staff at Krupp's, in Essen; so great, indeed, that unless the firm agrees at least to some of the very reasonable demands for a betterment of the situation these men will certainly abandon work rather than be exploited any longer as unscrupulously as they are being exploited at present.

"Surely something can be done to avoid such a contingency, which would be only a degree less disastrous to the prosecution of the war than a strike of the workmen. Whereas the latter have received an increase of wages in view of the dearness of living, the clerks and bookkeepers have to manage as best they may on their salary of $37.50 a month. Of this sum $3.75 a month is deducted for all sorts of funds and insurance. Moreover no extra allowance is given for overtime, even though the men are sometimes kept at work until past midnight.

"Even in normal times a salary of $37.50 a month for married men with families is none too generous, and in the existing conditions it is not even sufficient to pay for the barest necessities.

"Reports are continually being circulated as to the establishment of sundry institutions which are supposed to demonstrate the firm's generous disposition. The clerical workers are therefore all the more amazed that, of all the financial blessings which have fallen to the share of the firm, not a penny can be spared for them."

SOLDIERS ARE EAGER TO SPEND

PARIS, Feb. 21. — So much has been said about the way the soldiers are robbed by hucksters who manage to circulate just behind the Front and offer a miscellany of goods for sale that the Chamber has sent commissaires to the Front to investigate the question. These hucksters are generally residents in the military zone and obtain permission to carry on a trade in objects ranging from a piece of soap as a recompense for the losses they have suffered.

A newspaper man who had left the army from illness determined to become a huckster for a day to see what there was in the business. His experiment seems to show that at the bottom, the fault, if it exists, is due as much to the inherent desire felt by human nature to buy something when the opportunity has not occurred for some time.

About 6.30 one morning he laid out his little stock on the steps of a church in a little village of some thirty houses, four or five of which were still intact. To his right he placed the soaps, of many colours, and the perfumes to the left, letter paper, collections of songs and in the middle knitted goods, socks, etc., under which were hidden a few bottles —not bottles containing alcohol, the risk of prison would have been too great—but of coca wine, quinquina, and such aperitifs of legal degree of spirit.

Like Young Boys.

It was a little mirror sold at two cents in Paris, but it was taken at ten times the price without an attempt to bargain.

Ten cents for a glass of coca wine about as big as a thimble, yet the bottle was emptied in five minutes! Five cents, a sheet of paper with Joffre's portrait. An automobilist paid eight francs ($1.60) for a bottle of eau de Cologne and offered two five-franc bills. He refused to take change and was delighted with a child's trumpet to make up the remaining 40 cents. He at once began to blow it and himself to dance to his music.

For men who had just come back from six days' burial in the trenches to buy sometimes meant civilization and life. The mirror was soon cleared of all his goods that had cost him $10 and cleared $45.20, a profit of more than 400 per cent.

Before leaving the village the amateur huckster handed over the $45.20 to the captain of the section to be used to add some delicacies to the men's rations.

The officer smiled and invited the donor to lunch, adding a few words which showed that officers are no more free than men from the desire to buy something: "If you have anything left we will buy it."

Doctor's Orders.

Doctor—"You must go away for a long rest."

Doctor—"Well then you must stop advertising."

British Women Take Jobs Left By Men In Army

LONDON, Feb. 21—England has not yet reached the stage of enlisting fighting Amazons in the army, but she has in the last few months added to her regular military forces several thousands of women who are doing the noncombatant work that has hitherto been the exclusive task of men, and thereby releasing able-bodied men for the fighting line.

Until recently the only women regularly enrolled in the army were the members of the Queen Alexandra Imperial Nursing service, which is carried on the army list as a regiment, whose members are all officers.

That is to say, the military nurses rank as officers and receive officers' pay and allowances.

The male orderlies of the Royal Army Medical corps are under their orders when employed in the hospitals, and in matters of discipline, and organization, they are entirely independent of the military doctors, whose only authority over them is in connection with their nursing duties.

"Slackers" Worked in Hospitals.

In the old days—a month or so ago—all the heavy work of the home military hospitals, including the cleaning and scrubbing, and most of the difficult attendance on patients, was done by the male orderlies of the R. A. M. C., which had become a refuge for able-bodied young men, who wanted to escape being called "slackers" but who were "too proud to fight."

They all have been cleared out now and over 5,000 women orderlies have been employed. These women, who are of the able bodied workhouse or asylum attendant type, are doing their work much better than the men.

They do not require so much leave and when they do go out they return on time, and they always come back sober.

Women are Making Good.

These women are now engaged on six months' trial, at the end of which, if they prove satisfactory, they will be regularly enlisted and given a uniform. The matron of one of the biggest military hospitals in London says that there is no doubt about their proving satisfactory.

She only wished that the regulations would allow her to enlist them permanently at once. Of course, a few of the male orderlies have been retained in all the hospitals for stretcher bearing and the other duties that could not well be peformed by women.

Women have also invaded several other branches of the army hospital administration. The male dispensers who were formerly noncommissioned officers of the R. A. M. C. have been sent to combatant duties, or at any rate to somewhere where they can be more useful than behind a dispensing desk, and their places have been taken by women.

Girls Work in War Office.

There are now over a hundred women dispensers in the army, while there are nearly 200 women X-ray operators and surgical assistants, and over 500 clerks.

The war office, which has never even admitted a girl typist, has now had to submit to the feminine invasion, and generals who used to have a grizzled old quartermaster or sergeant major who had accompanied them on many campaigns running their typewriters—and in some cases writing their reports—now have to put up with girls fresh from business college, who think an echelon is some new kind of cigrette, and that a glacis is something good to eat in the ice cream line.

Even the camps have been invaded by women. When Kitchener began to build his great army the complaints about the food by the young men fresh from home and mother's cooking, were loud and long. The food was all right, but it was spoiled in the cooking by the young men themselves.

Women Cook for Soldiers.

An army of 1#0,000, like Britain's old regular army, had not skilled army cooks enough to go round for an army that was reckoned in millions and each company had to draw its good food from the quartermaster and see one of its members spoil it over the fire.

Now the women have stepped in, and the army, in the home camps at least, declares that the food is equal to mother's.

Many women have been employed as motor car drivers in connection with hospitals and the various home headquarters. Generals are to be seen dashing about the camps in cars with a girl in khaki at the wheel, and in London girls are now a common sight driving ambulances from the railway stations to the hospitals.

Most of these girls belong to the Women's Legion, a semi-official organization, and to special bodies organized by the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

Arrangements are now being made for the employment of women in the army pay and record offices and in the army postal service. Before many months are over we will have an army almost exclusively composed of fighting men with the supply and noncombatant corps manned by women.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside-bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, sallow complexion, others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach or constipation are amazed at the pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

To Overcome Winter Complexion Troubles

If the chill air causes your skin to dry and scale or become unduly red or spotted before you go to bed spread a thin layer of ordinary mercolized wax over your entire face. Remove the next morning with warm water. This is the ideal complexion treatment for the winter girl. The wax gently absorbs the dead particles of surface skin, so gradually there's no discomfort. This gives the underlying skin a chance to breathe and to show itself. In a week or so the new and younger skin is wholly in evidence and you have a really matchless complexion. Naturally all its defects disappear with the discarded cuticle—as chaps, roughness, blotches, pimples, freckles, blackheads. Usually an ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any druggists, is enough to rejuvenate even the worst complexion.

Wrinkles need bother you no more if you'll use this simple face wash: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pint. Just one application will affect even the deepest lines.

A Scotch gardener was hammering away at the bottom of his wheelbarrow on a Sunday, when his wife hurried out to him.

"Hoo, noo!" she exclaimed, "you are making a dreadful clatter. What will the neebours say?"

"Never mind the neebours," returned her husband. "I maun get ma barrow mended."

"Oh, but Donal', it's verra wrang to work on the Sabbath," protested the good woman. "Ye ought to use screws!"—Ex change.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaker or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is musty and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

A Most Extraordinary Cure of Epileptic Fits

Mother Had Appealed to Three Doctors in Vain—Cured Four Months Ago By Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

This letter from Mrs. Noxel is endorsed by Mrs. H. J. Mahaffy, druggist, Port Colborne, Ont., as being true and correct. While it reports a most remarkable cure of epileptic fits by use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, it only goes to corroborate similar cures reported by others.

Mrs. Hamilton M. Noxel, R.R. No. 1, Humberstone, Ont., writes: "I cannot help writing to you, as I want you to know what a blessing Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills have been to my boy. He was taken with very violent fits, would twitch all over, his eyes would turn towards his nose, his jaws set and his lips turn almost purple. He would clench his fists tightly, become unconscious and then go into a long sleep. After several hours he would wake up sighing and so weak he could not stand. I was afraid he would die and took him to the doctor, who pronounced his case epilepsy. As his medicine was not effective and the fits continued, I took him to another doctor at Fonthill, but his medicine seemed to make him worse.

"As the boy's nerves were in such a state he could not sit down or lie down, and the fits continued, I took him to a third doctor, who said that he would not undertake to cure epilepsy, as no doctor could cure it. That night I went home very much discouraged, and when I took my dose of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I gave my boy a dose, and that was the first night in weeks that he slept well. I kept on giving him the Nerve Food three times a day and occasionally a Kidney-Liver Pill to keep the kidneys and bowels active. I can, with a clear conscience, say that he has not had even one fit since beginning his treatment. I give him no other medicine. He looks and feels well, and as there have been no returns of the old trouble for four months, I believe he has been cured. I can never cease to be grateful to the manufacturers of these medicines, for I am sure I would have lost my boy if it had not been for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

Mr. H. J. Mahaffy, druggist, Port Colborne, Ont., writes: "This is to certify that I am acquainted with Mrs. Henrietta M. Noxel, and believe that the statement she has made in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is true and correct."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESSING SACQUE.

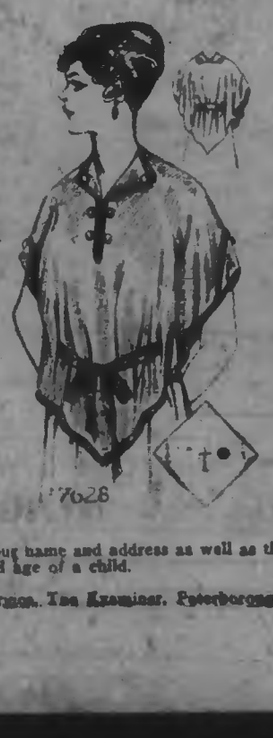
By Anabel Worthington.

This garment is a decided novelty. It is a one piece sacque and is cut from a perfectly square piece of material of 36 inch width. In the centre is cut a T shaped slash, and this marks the position of the neck. The two small upper corners of this cut are turned backward and form revers or collar pieces at the back of the neck. The points in front form little trimming revers, and the balance of the opening is fastened with loops and buttons.

At the points of the piece of material are placed in the front and back they pass below the waist line and are held in place by ribbons passed through slashes in the goods. The other two points overhang the arms, and by turning back the corners we have a little pointed cuff on the outer side of each arm.

This is a pretty design for crêpe de Chine, cotton crêpe, lawn and other sheer cotton fabrics, as well as for challie, cashmere and the like.

The sacque pattern, No. 7,628, is cut in one size only. To make it will require 1 yard of material 36 or 40 inches wide, 4½ yards of ribbon to bind and 1½ yards of ribbon for sash.



This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

ENEMY LAUNCHES HEAVY ATTACK ON A FIFTEEN MILE FRONT AT VERDUN

Entire German Battalions Were Annihilated in a Fierce Struggle---French Have Re-occupied Laureswood and Have Re-captured Several of the Trenches Lost to the Germans in Their Sudden Attack on Monday Night Last.

PARIS, Feb. 23.—The Germans have launched a heavy offensive around Verdun from the right bank of the Meuse to the Herbe Woods, the War Office announced this afternoon. They are attacking with many infantry regiments on a fifteen-mile front.

Entire German battalions have been annihilated in the fierce struggle, according to German prisoners. The French have evacuated Haumont forest, but have reoccupied Caures wood, which was evacuated yesterday. Violent fighting also occurred in Givenchy woods near Soucher. The French have recaptured several of the trenches occupied by the Germans in their sudden offensive of Monday night.

The violent onslaught of the Crown Prince's army was preceded by a rolling fire of artillery that began Sunday morning and continued throughout Monday and Monday night. The French replied vigirously to this bombardment and brought up reserves to meet the expected attack. Heavy German infantry attacks were launched yesterday followed up last night by the inauguration of a general offensive movement designed to throw back the whole French front around Verdun. The attack was met by a terrific fire from the French guns inflicting enormous losses on the advancing Germans.

THE GRENFELL APPEAL

There are a number of the best friends of the Deep Sea Mission whose subscriptions have not yet come in. This is certainly only a matter of procrastination, and those who have every year "done their bit" for Dr. Grenfell would be very sorry if the amount went forward to the treasurer without their portion. The sum subscribed this year is very much smaller than that of any other season, and the ministers of the city, (who commend this interest to the public), are convinced that no citizen would be willing to hear that the "Peterborough Cot" in the Grenfell hospital is a thing of the past. It is also their conviction that the members of their churches would be exceedingly sorry to learn that "other means" had to be resorted to to provide the small amount expected from this city. If the Christian people of Peterborough are anxious that this worthy cause shall be supported with a "function" this is their opportunity.—Leave your gifts at either The Examiner or Review. This is the last word for this year.

BIG CAMPAIGN NOW UNDER WAY

Canvass For the Belgian Relief Fund Started This Morning—Committee Gathered Last Night and Arranged Plans.

ARE WORKING HARD

DRIVER MORRIS MONTGOMERY

It really seemed like coming home to nearly all the men who entered the room. Seemed as if they had only stepped out of the place on the evening of December 10th last, to drop in again. On practically the same errand. The same getting together on a good mission and a good work, only even more so. Last time they were were working for those who, while they had gone from among us to fight our battles they were now settling down to make the effort in aid of those practically destitute. And the greater the privation the greater the need.

It was a gathering of the Belgian Relief Association. Not all the friends, but a very good assortment. Many sent regrets, detained by pressing engagements. They would be with the men further on. Did not matter so much so long that the work counted in the general round up. And it will.

If you ask who is doing the work that is to be done in this city, in all these public efforts, and you care to make a list you will find that it repeats itself, every time. At the most, for continued effort and activity there are not more than thirty, at the most. These give time, energy, attention and some perplexity to solving the problems. Most of them solved. In our own way. The balance of the public are willing to assist, but have to be showed. This is as true as preaching, that is, most preaching. Nearly all the thrifty were there last night and brought friends—willing to help. Just what was needed.

After friendly greetings, all fell to and absorbed a substantial lunch—a great heartner and provocative of good works.

As usual, there were a few speeches. Nothing depressing. Just enthusers. That of Mayor Duffus was right in line. Having done a part of his duty in securing from the Council a substantial grant to the fund he said he proposed to catch hold and lift. Told of the inception and progress of the movement in this city, growing out of the first meeting, a trio, of himself and Mrs. Morris and Miss Peck. He paid a high compliment to these ladies, and to others for the assistance given. Largely the effort being made had come up in the last month but it was most meretorious in its object. When we had done our utmost we would have done nothing more than we should.

Being an experienced man, Adjt. McElhiney undertook to tell how not to do it. His ideas of meeting objections. His belief in the argument that should be put forward to convince the reluctant. Being concerned in such predatory enterprises for twenty years has made the Adjutant well skilled. In fact, a Past Master in the art of collection. So what he said had good sense behind it. He did emphasize this, that no man in this city had any claim to cry hard times. The city was prosperous. This was borne out by the facts. No place was in equal shape with Peterborough, by and large, between Montreal and Windsor.

Mr. Killaley, who has done a heap of work in an administrative way, in getting things into shape, reported. He explained that lists of names had been consulted, recorded, winnowed and threshed to give the best possible canvassing list obtainable. With these the city had been divided into districts. Ten of these. The numbered districts would be placed in a hat, shook up, each team cap-

93rd BATTALION WILL HOLD A BIG ASSAULT-AT-ARMS

Programme of Wrestling, Boxing, etc., to Be Given at the Armouries---Lieut. Harold Wallis, Back From the Front, Will Be in Peterboro' To-morrow---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

An assault at arms with boxing, wrestling, bayonet fighting, etc., on the programme, is an event that the 93rd Battalion will hold in the armouries in the near future. A committee composed of Capt. Widdifield, Lieut. Gillham and Lieut. Matthews, who were the big three in connection with the 93rd hockey team which provided the fans with some good sport this winter, will manage the affair and at present the details are being arranged by Lieut. Gillham, who is going to make the affair one that will be remembered. There are a number of clever boxers in the ranks of the 93rd and some good bouts may be looked for. A number of novel and amusing features will be introduced into the programme.

Lieut. Harold Wallis, a well known ex-Peterborough boy who was with the 1st Canadian contingent, and who was wounded last spring, will arrive in the city to-morrow from Montreal and will be the guest of his aunt, Mrs. W. A. Roger, 309 Park street. Lieut. Wallis, who will be remembered by hockey fans as a member of the Chieftain hockey club which a few years ago under Jack Thirnbeck's supervision, used to trim everything in sight, enlisted at the outbreak of the war as a private and he and his brother Hugh who also went in as a private, were both given commissions at the front. Lieut. Wallis is home on Furlough and will be given a warm welcome by his many friends.

THE HUNS HAVE GREAT RESPECT FOR CANUCK SOLDIERS

Driver Morris Montgomery of the 2nd Canadian Divisional Ammunition Column Says Canadian Infantry Have Been Doing Great Work

AN INTERESTING LETTER

A member of the Examiner staff has received the following letter from Driver Morris Montgomery, who is in France with the Divisional Ammunition Column, 2nd Canadian Division. Driver Montgomery was a contestant in the Examiner road race for several years. He says:

France, Feb. 3, 1916.

I now take the pleasure in writing you a few lines. I was up at the front a few days ago, although we are always out on the road, day and night, so you can guess we don't get much time to ourselves. We have been so busy lately we don't get time to clean our harness as the Imperial fellows keep their harness so clean but I tell you the truth, when there is any fighting to be done, the Canadians are right on the job, and the Imperial fellows give our boys a good name for their bravery. Since I have been here the Huns have got all they can handle when they get the Canadian boys after them, and they know it. As one Hun said to one of our infantry fellows: "When will the war be over?" and the boys said "We don't know. They said to the Hun, "What is your opinion?" He says, "When you Canadians go back to Canada," so they are tired and fed up on it. I guess you will know all about the good work our infantry boys have been doing; they certainly have been doing some great work, and I think our boys would go through them if they would let them, as the boys are mad to get at them. I never saw or heard the like of it. I have seen a lot of Peterborough boys. I saw the Leal boys I used to board all get it as there is a big body of Ian Howard, also "Fat" Giroux. He is not far from us and he looks well. My brother that is in the same battalion as the Leal boys and Hanlon Howard is on pass in England, and most of us are getting a pass. Of course it will be some time before we all get it, as there is a big body of men here now. Well there have been a couple of days heavy bombardment, and it kept us busy. You would think we had killed every Hun there was, the way we were sending the shells

RUSSIANS WINNING ALL ALONG THE LINE

Special to The Examiner.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 23.—The announcement of fresh successes in Caucasus which brought enthusiastic demonstrations at the opening of the Duma, was followed by the official statement to-day that Slavs have won skirmishes with the Austro-Germans on nearly every sector of the front from the Baltic to Rumania.

"Northwest of Lake Sventon one of our regiments," said the statement, "made successful reconnaisance annihilating the occupants of a German trench, 150 men and two officers. Our forces repulsed a counter-attack by the enemy reserves, and returned to their own lines taking many prisoners. In Smorgen district we penetrated enemy entanglements bayonetting some of the trench occupants and forcing others to flee.

"On the Upper Stripa the Austrians tried to approach our trenches but were repulsed with heavy losses. We took a number of prisoners.

"Near Buczasz, in Galicia, an enemy aeroplane dropped flaming rags at the Village of Khmolieka without effect. We exploded a group of mines successfully near Boyana northeast of Czernowitz, destroying Austrian positions and occupying mine craters."

MORE TECHNICALITIES IN SUBMARINE DISPUTE

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—Whether England has broken faith with the United States in questions affecting the arming of merchantmen was the new question raised to-day in the submarine warfare dispute with Germany.

An examination of State Department archives disclosed a British pledge directly bearing on the Teutonic-American controversy. If the officials believe this pledge has been broken, a protest to England is probable.

The British promise was that England would not permit merchantmen to take the offensive against submarines. Against this Germany is maintaining copies of alleged secret orders of the British Admiralty to English merchantmen vessels to sink the submarines of the Central Powers whenever possible, and under any conditions.

Ill Feeling Against Germans in Bulgaria

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—Salonika despatches to the London papers to-day brought reports of chaotic conditions in Bulgaria arising out of the alleged ill-feeling of the Bulgarian people toward the Germans. This information it was stated was obtained from confidential sources.

A free-for-all fight between Germans and Bulgarians occurred at a village near Phillippopolis, because the Germans mistreated a peasant girl. Several deaths resulted.

The Bulgarians freely admit that they would submit joyously to Russian invasion said another Salonika despatch. Their country has been drained of cattle and grain in exchange for German paper. The people generally are most pessimistic over the outcome of the war.

Financial Crashes Likely in Germany

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 23.—A despatch from Geneva says: A banker who has just returned here after spending several months in Germany, says that the principal banks in the chief town on the Rhine, and also in Munich and Dresden, are in serious financial difficulties, and some big crashes may be expected within the next three months.

The losses involved will be at least a billion dollars the banker added, and if the war continued another nine months Germany would be ruined financially.

Allies Have Conquered 730,000 Miles Of Territory

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 23.—Allies have conquered 730,000 square miles of German territory in Africa since the outbreak of the war, it was announced in the Commons this afternoon.

BODY OF MISSING MEMBER FOUND IN FIRE RUINS

Remains of B. B. Law Representative of Yarmouth, Are Discovered by Workmen in the Debris of Parliament Buildings

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 23.—All that remains of Bowman B. Law, M.P. for Yarmouth, after the great fire had passed over him was discovered in the ruins of the Parliament Buildings by workmen this morning. Only a portion of the thigh bone and a few other smaller bones were left and even these were badly charred. The remains were found in the easternmost corner of the Commons downstairs between the debates rooms and the chamber. It is thought that Mr. Law may have come out of the telephone booth and gone to his locker in an endeavour to get out his coat and hat.

OTTAWA, Feb. 23.—In the Parliament building fire investigation this afternoon W. G. Weichel, M. P. for North Waterloo, testified that on Tuesday before the fire he, with Col Lochead of the 118th Battalion, while standing at the newspaper rack in room 118, smoking cigars and reading Berlin papers, had noticed a flame about the size of two hands in the papers on the lower shelf, which they extinguished.

E. M. MacDonald of Pictou had heard two explosions and told of seeing a peculiar looking man near the lobby door, who was restless, and regarded the witness intently. On the second meeting with the stranger Mr. MacDonald thought of calling a policeman's attention, but postponed it.

W. B. Northrup also had seen a peculiar looking man though not the same one, by description.

WHAT WILL PEEL SAY.

Tomorrow will decide whether the electors of Peel will elect to be governed by the ethics of the "horse trader" plus the spirit of the spoils system, or by the principles of honesty and fair dealing we are shedding rivers of blood and billions of money to uphold and preserve. A vote for Fallis will be a vote for the spirit of German Kultur.

THE SPOILS OF POWER.

The Borden Government has largely lost its zeal for investigation. It seems hard to bring it to the point of probing the munitions supply scandal in connection with the late unlamented, but lamentable, shells committee, when there is prima facie evidence that such an investigation would be justified. And it wouldn't cost about $130,000 either. The Government went into two investigations "on spec," which, even if they had been warranted, would only amount to "flogging a dead horse," and they cost about $130,000. After being firmly seated in power with national, or rather, Nationalist, approval, the Borden Government harked back and investigated the Transcontinental, in order to get a post-mortem, whack at the already politically dead Laurier government. Then another investigation into the charge of the alienation of western lands was held and the commissioner has just presented his report and his bill—the latter the most important matter—to the public treasury, and the commissioner. It amounts to $84,-731. The avoidance of round numbers shows how loth the official spoilsman was to surrender any part of his perquisites. In compiling the total he had to cling to the final dollar. It would have been a breach of principle to have substituted a cypher for the "1" at the end of the bill. Here we have had two inquests and post mortem examinations on a defunct government which amount to nothing, but the cost and the spoils to a partisan; and lead to nothing. Mere waste of public money and costly concession to the spirit of spoil.

A WAR OF WORDS.

When Noah Webster got his great American dictionary together, he little thought that he was establishing a munitions factory. We all know that the United States is shy on military and naval preparedness. She has no army, as modern armies go, much above the dignity of a corporal's guard; her navy is unready and her supply of ammunition goes overseas for the use of other nations. But she has a plentiful supply of one kind of ammunition. President Wilson, commander-in-chief, and Mr. Lansing second in command, are using immense quantities of the ammunition to be found in the dictionary—mere words. If President Wilson prefers to fight with his mouth he would do better if he had a Roosevelt set of teeth, with a little of the direct, positive, cut-and-thrust Roosevelt spirit behind them. Then Uncle Sam wouldn't have had his flag converted into a door-mat for the use of sheeky German ambassadors. It's a long time between whoops. It's a long time since Uncle Sam has been jumping into the air, cracking his heels together and announcing his ability to "lick all creation." Uncle Sam, however, as represented by his people at large, is sound at heart, and does some tall winking at the efforts of his politicians to steer south by north on the eve of a presidential election. After all we don't blame the United States for keeping out of open and declared war—it's not all beer and skittles. Uncle Sam, while intermittently neutral, is in reality deep into the fight on the side of Britain and her allies. His supplies of munitions, and the at-heart sympathy of the great mass of his people make the United States a much more valuable ally of the Entente nations than if she had put the drill sergeant at work. Our good neighbours are our good neighbours still; their loyalty and deep-down friendliness and sympathy with rights and human right are not materially impaired by the periodical political insanity of her politicians. The little tricks and by-play of the parties to win a presidential election won't shake the solid basis of principle and right upon which the Republic rests.

FOOLING THE PEOPLE.

Germany's successes in this war have been few, and none of them of permanent character, except one, and that only partially so. But she has achieved one striking success. While she has failed to make the world believe in her lying and deceit, she has admirably succeeded in befooling the German people as a whole. By virtue of monumental lying she has fed the people on false victories and fostered their credulity to the point of concealing reverses or minifying them. Apart from the state of semi-starvation that exists in the country the people are made to believe that Germany is still winning victories and that her apparent defeats don't amount to anything. For instance the Germans, while admitting that the Turks have had a little set back at the hands of the Russians, offsets the admission with the statement that the sweeping successes of Grand Duke Nicholas in Asia Minor have no military importance whatever. There are few battles in this complicated war, except the important battle of the Marne, which brought Germany up standing in her way to Calais and Paris, that have greater military significance than that which resulted from the fall of Erzerum. This event shatters the Kaiser's wooly dream of Oriental Empire. It closes the gateway to the East and kills the expedition to Egypt. It removes the keystone of German power in the Balkans. It helps the allied cause in a most important and sensible way. This victory practically eliminates the terrible Turk as a factor in the war. Turkey, instead of being an instrument in the hands of Germany of the conquest of India and Egypt, has become a burden, a synonym of Sinbad's "Old Man of the Sea." If the German people could only see without looking through the Kaiser's crooked spectacles they would see the great military significance of the Turkish defeat; they would also see how vastly the war has gone against Germany. They would see the terrible meaning of the German navy sealed up in home ports; they would see that with the exception of hanging on by her eyelids to a little corner of German East Africa, Germany has lost all her colonial possessions. Germany may disparage the Russian success in Asia Minor, but we are rather proud of it. It strengthens our determination and increases our admiration for the Russians' splendid capacity for coming back, and gives new confidence in her efficiency as an ally in bringing final and lasting victory.

SHAME!

Toronto at present is divided into two hostile camps, some contending for the short and some for the long "y" in Dynasty. A nasty dyn, so to speak.—The Globe.

A "STANDSTILL"

Some people are going around wondering why the war is at a standstill on the western front, with millions of men in the rival forces facing each other. And yet it is estimated that in the past two weeks the enemy casualties on that front have been between 75,000 and 100,000.—Toronto Star.

DIVINE AID.

As the days go by and the news comes straggling in the solemnity of the grand duke's first telegram announcing the great success, his recognition of God's help, becomes increasingly insignificant. Erzerum is found to be a first-class modern fortress full of Krupp guns, and was manned by a great army under a German general of the utmost distinction. Always a hard nut to crack even in olden times, Erzerum now falls to a bayonet and frontal attack after five days' fighting! The thing is most sensational. Contrast it with the prolonger siege of Przemysl and its amazing character is obvious. The Siberian troops were so wonderful, the grand duke so signally outgeneralled his German antagonist, that truly it may seem that God also fought with Russia in the conquest of Erzerum, for the relief and avenging of slaughtered Armenia.—London Advertiser.

A MINISTER'S AND KING'S COUNSELS VIEWS ON MERITS OF THE J. R. FALLIS MATTER

The Attorney-General of Ontario, Hon. I. B. Lucas, was quoted by Mr. J. R. Fallis at a meeting held on Saturday night at Port Credit as having found no fault with Mr. Fallis' conduct in the Peel horse-trading case. Mr. Lucas is represented as stating that the farmers of his own county of Grey might well say: "Mr. Lucas, you as a member of the local Cabinet, and Dr. Sproule, the Speaker of the House at Ottawa, the two of you put together are not as good to the farmers as Fallis has been in Peel, where thousands of dollars have gone to the farmers."

Was Fallis good to the farmers of Peel? In taking a rake-off on the sale of horses to the Government amounting to almost $3,000, was he merely paying himself in an irregular but not an illegal way for the services he had rendered the farmers of the county? As against the offhand opinion of the Attorney-General of Ontario, that Fallis, in buying the horses of the farmers of Peel after they had been passed by the Government inspectors and when there was no financial risk in the transaction, was "good" to the farmers of Peel, the electors should set the views of Mr. John Thompson, K.C., the counsel for the Borden Government who conducted the examination of Fallis, and knows more about the case than any other person who was present at the inquiry. Mr. Thompson says:

"After Fallis had been re-examined at Toronto and after the observations made by Sir Charles Davidson, Fallis came into the robing room to further explain that he had 'a perfect right' to sell the 653 horses. We had an argument as to whether he was a vendor or not, my contention being that he was not a vendor, but an intervener between the Government and the farmers, and as a result of his intervention either the farmers received too little of the Government paid too much. He asked me whether he had done wrong. I asked him what he meant by 'wrong', my view being that he probably could not be sued and made to return his profits, nor could he be indicted for his action, but that his intervention was improper. This was entirely my own view is private discussion with Mr. Fallis brought on by him. I spoke, not as counsel, and without being in any way aware of the finding of the Commissioner."

"Fallis' intervention was improper" says the son of Sir John Thompson, a former Conservative Premier. "Fallis was good to the farmers of Peel," says the Attorney-General of Ontario. How can the standard of public morals be raised in Canada when men like Mr. Lucas—men personally honorable, who would scorn to be mixed up in an improper rake-off transaction—are prepared to condone an offence so flagrant as that of Mr. Fallis, and pretend that it is no offence at all? Mr. Thompson has no doubt as to the impropriety of Fallis' conduct. As a result of the member's intervention, either the farmers received too little for their horses or the Government paid too much. In plain English, Fallis did nothing at all warranting the taking of the rake-off he made, and the money which he calls a legitimate profit was money that did not properly belong to him. He was not guilty of fraud in any legal sense, but morally he was guilty of improper intervention between the Government and the bona fide vendors of horses.

Mr. Thompson is mercifully silent as to the unwarranted use made by Mr. Fallis in his earlier advertisements of the title "Purchasing Agent." It was false and misleading, and whether calculated to deceive or not, it must have had that effect. An agent must represent a principal, and the farmers of Peel doubtless believed that Fallis was the accredited agent of the Militia Department. He himself is witness that he did not officially represent the Government until three months after he had published the false advertisement. If Peel, knowing the facts, is content to entrust Mr. Fallis with the honorable office of representing it in the Provincial Legislature, the Assembly will have to submit, but he will be no more welcome to untainted Conservative members than Evanturel is to Liberals. If, however, Mr. Lucas represents the official party point of view, Fallis will not be excluded as Evanturel has been from the party caucus, but will be admitted to all party gatherings.

There must be a lot of Conservatives in Peel who would view such a glorification of the Fallis rake-off with unfeigned disgust. They, and they alone, can prevent it by accepting Mr. Thompson's view that what Fallis did was improper, and by voting against him on Thursday.—The Globe.

ECONOMY CANADA'S URGENT NEED.

The war credits asked for by Mr. Asquith in the British House of Commons must sober the most thoughtless. The war is now costing the British Government almost $35,000,000 a day. Britain's total expenditure up to April 1 will have been about $8,640,000,000. Of this a considerable sum—perhaps over an eighth in all—has been loaned to Britain's Allies and overseas Dominions, and will not ultimately become a charge upon the taxpayers of the United Kingdom, except, perhaps, in the case of advances to Belgium and Serbia.

Another year of war will mean that the net British national debt on which interest must be paid will not be less than fifteen billions of dollars, involving an interest charge of almost $700,000,000 a year. With so colossal a tax burden piled on top of the expenditure for the ordinary services of the country, Great Britain will hereafter accumulate capital much less rapidly than in the past. Canada, which has in recent years borrowed a greater proportion of Britain's surplus earnings than any other debtor nation, may as well face the facts. The British reservoir will no longer be available, and unless the Dominion is to sink into a condition of financial dependence on the United States, every legitimate effort must be made to cultivate at home the habit of thrift. Canadian savings must hereafter provide the great bulk of the capital required for the development of the country. It will be a stiff battle at first, and the "movies" may seem to win against thrift, but everyone in a position to influence the rising generation should see to it that young Canada in the next quarter century shall not be so prodigal as in the past.—The Globe.

Strange Blast Kills 3 at Sea

RIO JANEIRO, Feb. 23. — The steamship Tennyson of the Lamport & Holt line, bound from the Rio de la Plata for New York, has put into the port of Maranhao because of serious damage caused by an explosion in her bunkers on the morning of February 18. Three men were killed, an American, a British subject, and a Dutch subject, believed to have belonged to the crew.

The explosion is attributed by some to an infernal machine, and by others to a projectile fired by a German warship.

The Tennyson, after making necessary repairs at Maranhao, will proceed to Para, where she will be docked.

JURY FINES HIM ONE CENT, THEN PAYS COURT COSTS.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Feb. 23.—Charles Stafford, who whipped a man who abused Mrs. Stafford to leave him, was found guilty by a jury and fined 1 cent. The jury paid the fine, contributed its expenses and paid the court costs.

BIG CAMPAIGN NOW UNDER WAY

tain drew, found his fate, learned his territory and was satisfied. All hands called for the hat, and, amid a silence broken only by the suppressed washing of dishes in the smuggery, lots were drawn. It was a critical moment. But justice reigned supreme.

Some eminent person laid down a maxim for all time when he said that it was not for mortals to command success, but he'd do better, he'd deserve it. So the fat goes with the lean and while one team may have a few slim prospects others of affluence will even things up.

This morning, bright and early, a start was made. By noon notes will be compared. The factories and shops are, by special act of improvidence left to the financial care of Adjt. McElhiney and one other. We know who it is, but dasn't tell. The Adjutant knows his constituency, and the electorate know him. So the collection and subscription from the working men will be most creditable.

Meeting at the rooms to-night. Do not forget. Come on in while the prospects are fine. Even if you can't take a hand your display of interest will encourage. The teams and committee will lunch at 6 o'clock, and fight their battles over again. Plan for to-morrow's execution. Exchange prospects. And do other things not otherwise provided for in such cases made and provided.

The list of teams were closed up last night and each man received his commission. If he wears a badge—pay up. If he does not have a badge and looks like a friend of the cause, pay at any rate. But pay.

Frozen to Rigging Men Are Rescued

Captain, Mate and Crew of the Schooner Anna Lord Taken Off Shipwreck in Cold.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Feb. 23.—All of them partly frozen, Captain A. B. Merriam, of New York; Mate C. H. Smyth, of Parrsboro, N. S., and their crew of four men were taken from the rigging of the water logged three masted schooner Anna Lord, of New York, off Eastern Point and were landed here by the Flora L. Oliver, a fishing schooner.

Captain Antone Brown, of the Flora L. Oliver, of this port, and a crew of Portuguese were bound for the Fishing Banks when they sighted the Anna Lord flying distress signals and her deckload of lumber awash in high seas. The weather was bitterly cold, the thermometer being below zero, and a high northeasterly gale was blowing.

Volunteer crews from the fishing schooner went out in dories and rescued the freezing men. Then the Oliver turned about and put back to this port. She tried to tow the Anna Lord, but the hawser parted three times and the lumber schooner was abandoned. Later the Coast Guard cutter Gresham picked up the schooner and reported she was towing her to Provincetown.

The rescued men, who were bound from Halifax for New York with 300,000 feet of lumber, were sent to a hospital here. They will recover in a few days. Captain Merriam has left here for Boston, partly recovered.

Beaten by high seas, the lumber cargo shifted on Saturday and the vessel began to leak. The crew were driven into the rigging, where they remained all night and most of the next day, the spray freezing them to the masts so their rescuers had to cut them out. The four men of the crew rescued were Harry Barrow, cook, whose condition is most serious, and Harry Jorgsen, Vincent Curry and Martin Johnson, seamen, all of New York.

Under the decree on modern fashions we cannot call their abominationables unlookables.

Campbellford Blanked Havelock In The Trent Valley League Play-off

Tommy Moffatt's Braves Won handily By Six Goals to Nil From Railroaders in Sudden Death Game at Brock Street Rink

LOSER'S GOALER WEAK

Campbellford had not much difficulty in winning the Trent Valley League sudden death play-off game at Brock St. Rink last night. Tommy Moffatt's braves triumphing over the Railroaders by 6 goals to nothing. They were in front 1 to 0 at the end of the first period, and 5 to nil at the end of the second. While undoubtedly the better team won there was not the margin between the two that the score indicates. The weakness of Puffer in goal for Havelock accounts for the big figure. Four of the goals were scored on the easiest kind of shots, the rubber lobbing into the nets while the Havelock goal guardian was trying to untangle his feet. Puffer has played good hockey all season, but had a bad night off last night, especially in the second period.

Campbellford, who trotted out most of the players who represented them in the O.H.A. series, were faster and showed better stick-handling and shooting ability, and earned their victory, although the score hardly does justice to the Railroaders who tried hard all the way. The checking was close and hard, and the fact that the players bunched a lot added to this feature. At that both teams must be given credit for consistent attempts to play combination which is more than has been said about some of the Peterborough teams this season.

For Campbellford Clements and Christensen were perhaps the most conspicuous, although Lott, the auburn-haired right wing, did a lot of useful work. Farrell was good on the defence, and Betts in goal took care of everything that came his way.

For Havelock Quinlan at rover, and Barnett, the youngster who plays for the Bachelors in the local City League, were the best, while Curry was good in spots. Both defence men did some effective checking.

Both teams were well represented in the crowd, Campbellford bringing out a contingent of lusty-lunged rooters on a special train, while Havelock had sixty supporters who came up on the regular afternoon train. Among them were a good representation from the Havelock platoon of the 93rd Battalion.

Harvey Sproule was imported from Toronto to handle the bell, and he got away without any trouble.

The teams were as follows:

Campbellford.	Havelock
Goal
Betts	Puffer
Defence
Shannon	Hagerman
Farrell	Barlow
Rover
Clements	Quinlan
Centre
Christensen	Barnett
Right Wing
Lott	Matheson
Left Wing
Nesbitt	Curry

Play was very even in the first period. Havelock started out strong and for the first few minutes the Railroaders had their rivals penned up in their own end of the rink. The marksmanship of the blue shirts was wild and weak, however, and the defence men stopped most of them before they even got as far as the goalkeeper. Then Campbellford started to come down, and although the Havelock defence kept them out in good style Christensen finally, after sixteen minutes' playing, drifted a long shot from the side past Puffer and Tommy Moffatt's team were in front. The period ended 1-0.

The second period was all Campbellford. They pressed from the face-off and after losing a couple of opportunities by off-side passing, the Campbellford line got away together, and on a combination rush Lott pushed an easy one into the corner of the net. That left it 2 to 0, and a minute after Clements lobbed a long shot from the side that barely slid into the nets. Nesbitt repeated a few minutes after with another soft brave from twenty yards out, and Clements followed it up with another counter in 30 seconds, when he went behind the Havelock nets and swept the rubber round the post before Puffer could blink. That made it 5 to 0, and the figure remained unchanged to the end of the period.

Havelock came back stronger in the last period, and had as much of the play as the winners, but they could not find the nets. It was up and down hockey for the period, and Campbellford got the only goal when Nesbitt beat Puffer from close in. The players were mixing it up pretty well at the finish, and the crowd howled when Quinlan dumped Christensen and the Campbellford centre retaliated by batting Quinlan off his feet. Referee Sproule apparently missed both episodes as neither man was punished.

The summary:

First Period.

1—Campbellford, Christensen, 16 mins.

Second Period.

2—Campbellford, Lott, 6 mins.
3—Campbellford, Clements, 1 min.
4—Campbellford, Nesbitt, 3 mins.
5—Campbellford, Clements, 30 secs.

Third Period.

6—Campbellford, Nesbitt, 15 mins.

HELP THE BELGIANS AND SEE A GOOD GAME

The announcement that the 93rd Battalion and Electrics were to clash on Friday night in a game for the Belgian Relief Fund, has aroused much interest among the fans. Every game between the two has been a hard fight and there is every reason to expect that Friday's match will be of the same calibre, as both teams are keen for another crack at their rivals. The proceeds are for a good cause and hockey fans should remember they will be assisting the Belgians by turning out to see a good game of hockey.

BELLEVILLE DEFEATED OSHAWA LAST NIGHT

OSHAWA, Feb. 22.—Belleville defeated Oshawa here to-night in the first of a series of home-and-home games in the O. H. A. intermediate semi-finals. It was a clean, interesting and exciting game, especially for the first two periods. Both teams played good hockey, but the exhibition was not as fast as should be for championship hockey. From all appearances neither team is fast enough to go into the finals. Score, 6 to 4 The teams:

Toronto, Feb. 23.—All the prominent athletes are flocking to the Sportsmen's Battalion. Champions in every line of sporting endeavour have joined the 180th and Tom Longboat says that the man who beats him into Berlin will have to travel some. Williams, the well-known physical instructor; Lieut. McDonald, of Dunlop road race fame; Lieut. O'Donaghue, Metropolitan Bank hockey team, Bank League champions; Lieut. McLaren, of the T. A. and A. "BIG ED" WALSH SLATED TO PITCH IN THE MINORS

CHICAGO, Feb. 23.—What is to become of Big Ed Walsh the coming year is a question that is agitating the friends of the big spitball heaver of the White Sox just now. Rumor has it that the big fellow has not been signed for the coming season.

For the last two years Walsh has been carried along in hope that he would be able to come back and help out in the pitching department, but he had not been able to show enough of his old-time form to warrant his starting in many games.

Last year he made two starts and was able to go through and win both games, but both of them were easy, as his team made enough runs early to make the going very comfortable for him.

President Comiskey has established a reputation for carrying along his old players and letting them down easy, but the twenty-five-man limit established by the American League last year has made it almost impossible to continue the policy of keeping pensioners on the pay roll, because it kept some other player off who could be made use of.

Walsh had a long-time contract that expired last fall, and it is a question what will be done with him hereafter. It is possible that he will be pleased with some good minor league club, where he will undoubtedly be able to hold up his end for a time, for his arm is not entirely gone.

Never throw away the skins of oranges. The grated yellow rind is a good flavoring for cakes, etc., and it is cheaper than extracts.

CURLING

Peterborough's two District Cup rinks skipped by W. D. Campbell and Alex. Kay were turned back by Stroud yesterday by the score of 31 to 20. Kay was up 4 shots and Campbell down 5. Stroud won out with a last stone on the last end.

The postponed scheduled games will be hustled along by the local committee and with favourable weather six or seven games will be played each night until the schedule is completed.

Two rinks of ladies leave for Toronto this afternoon to play in the Ladies' Tankard games.

In the scheduled games last night Robt. Neill defeated W. H. Denham 12 to 10, and Geo. Giroux won from W. G. Morrow 14 to 10.

PAYS FOR DEATH AT SEA.

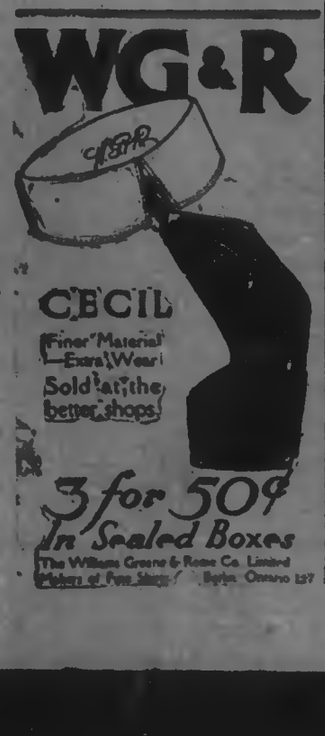
BOSTON, Feb. 23.—Fishermen lost from vessels sailing from ports in this State are within the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act, regardless of how far off shore the accident occurs, according to a ruling by the State Industrial Accident Board, made public Monday.

Charles Nickerson was washed overboard from the Medomak, a fishing craft, at a point five miles from Thacher's Island on March 6 last. The Board awarded his widow compensation of $10 a week for 400 weeks, overruling contentions by the insurance company that the accident, having occurred beyond the three-mile limit, was beyond the jurisdiction of this State and that Nickerson was a partner on shares, not an employee.



Col. Johnston Acknowledges Efforts of Patriotic Chorus

At Banquet in the Oriental Hotel Last Night—Mr. J. H. Renwick and Chorus Thanked For Their Work—Generosity of Public is Recognized

The Peterborough Patriotic Chorus held a most enjoyable banquet at the Oriental Hotel last evening. There were fifty members present and the following guests: Lt.-Col. Johnston, O.C. 93rd Battalion; Mr. W. F. Johnston, Secretary of the Speakers' Patriotic League, and Mr. Peter Campbell, Chairman of the 93rd Battalion Band Fund.

After partaking of the splendid repast provided, Mr. J. W. Worth, President of the Patriotic Chorus, assumed the roll of toast master. The programme commenced with a toast to the King, and the singing of the National Anthem.

Mr. C. S. Thompson proposed the toast to the 93rd Battalion and its excellent Band, congratulating the Commanding Officer and Staff on the fine showing of the Regiment and spoke particularly of the exemplary behaviour of the men. Lt.-Col. Johnston, in replying, thanked the Chorus for their efforts on behalf of the Band Fund, and paid a tribute to the Peterborough people when he said that their enthusiasm and generous hospitality would always be an inspiration to himself and his Battalion, especially when they journeyed overseas.

In proposing the toast to the Chorus, Mr. Campbell, on behalf of the Band Fund, expressed his gratitude for the ever ready assistance of Mr. Renwick and the members of the Chorus in the endeavour to raise money for band instruments and cases. Mr. Campbell stated that the amount necessary to equip the Band was now in sight, and that credit was due to Mr. Renwick for the splendid amount netted by the two concerts given under his direction.

In a few well-chosen remarks the President of the Chorus assured Mr Campbell of the continued support of every member of the Chorus. Mr. Renwick also spoke and thanked Mr. Campbell for his kind remarks, and said that it was one of the pleasures that remained for those who could not go to the front to help in this and any other way that presented itself.

Mr. C. C. Parsons proposed the toast to the ladies which was responded to by Mr. Anderson. During the evening Mr. Huycke rendered a piano solo of his own composition, and Mr. T. Stratton sang several of Harry Lauder's well-known songs. Both of these gentlemen contributed much to the pleasure of the evening, and received well-merited applause.

The most enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the singing of Auld Lang Syne and God Save the King.

Asked To Wed By 34 Women

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 23—There is a modest youth, Harnis Leisher Brandt, 26 years old, living with his parents' in 15 West Juanita Stree, who has never even courted a girl; yet there are thirty-four young women in Pittsburg and neighbouring towns with an aggregate wealth in excess of $250,000 who want to marry him.

Brandt has averaged a letter a day from girls since the beginning of leap year, the proposals coming from Pittsburg, Washington, Pa., Kittanning, Tarentum, Greensburg, Johnstown, and Uniontown.

Declines to Give Names.

"My Dear Harnis,—As a little girl I learned to love you when we were both pupils at the Eleventh Ward School in Fleming Avenue. You were my ideal, and I have waited all these years for this opportunity—leap year—to tell you this. I have, since attending school with you, acquired a college education, and my uncle has left me $40,000."

Harnis declined to reveal the names of any of the girls, the majority of whom he admits he knows, and says they are all fine girls.

One Has Fortune to Share.

One writes that she will graduate from an exclusive eastern college this year and that she has $62,000 in her own name and is willing to divide it with Brandt if he will marry her. Another girl writes:

"I ear I will die if I don't get you. You are my ideal, and without you I cannot live."

"What are you going to do about all these proposals?" Brandt was asked.

"Nothing," he replied. "I'm going to stay with mother."

BRUSSELS A SPY INFESTED CITY

THE HAGUE, Feb. 21.—So far as a considerable number of the people of Brussels are concerned, the German occupation constitutes a moral as well as a physical martyrdom.

A private correspondent whose letter has reached here through a friendly diplomatic channel says that the German system of espionage has reached such a point that the more nervous minded of the people live in a state of perpetual dread.

"There is an army here of more than fifteen hundred spies," he writes. "These are well paid, but they are paid by results; they live extravagantly, and when funds are low more victims must be made. There are spies of every grade and species.

"There is the society woman, such as that relative of von Bissing who succeeded in forming a little court of her own and who herself attends the society teas in private houses and at the fashionable confectioners in order to exercise her espionage; there is the one-time factory agent who, taking advantage of his pre-war connections, worms himself into financial and industrial circles; there is the officer's or professor's wife who frequents middle class coteries; there is the demi-mondaine who keeps an eye on the theatres, the cafes and the boulevards, and there are men in hundreds who penetrate like ants into the innermost recesses of private life.

"The letters we receive from our dear exiled frinds we may neither keep nor answer, for a domiciliary visit may be made at any moment, and on the slightest pretext, or none at all, both men and women may be hurried away to the kommandantur, and thence to prison after a mockery of a 'trial.'

"Two days ago I was reading the war report posted at the corner of the Boulevard Botanique and the Rue Royale. There we were, a silent little group. A man joined us and began to read the news aloud, with painful slowness, almost spelling out the words. Coming to a number he read 'seven thousand' instead of 'seventy thousand,' the words appearing on the notice board.

'He got no further. A man forming part of the group placed his hand on his shoulder and dragged him along to the kommandantur. We were lucky to escape arrest for having heard him make the blunder.

"In the tramway car from Brussels to Tervueren I saw a man arrested because he carried a parcel wrapped in a cop yof a London paper, the date of which was September, 1914.

"In the Ru de Flandre I saw two brewer's men being marched off as prisoners obcause, after unloading a heavy barrel of beer, they had remarked, 'The Kaiser himself could not do it as neatly.'

"I could cite hundreds of astonishing facts, but it would bore you, as they are all more or less of the same category."

LEVELERS OF YEARS AGO.

Levelers, members of an organization bent on removing all class distinctions and leveling all titles, who were powerful in the English Parliament in 1647, were first heard of in Germany during the sixteenth century, when two men Munzer and Storck by their teaching quickly acquired wide influence and accumulated a following of 40,000 men.

GOOD BAND IN ATTENDANCE

The Lindsay military authorities have apparently been at their old game of securing recruits in Toronto, judging by the following from the Toronto News: "It has been discovered that recruiting officers of the 109th Overseas Battalion, Lindsay, had invaded Toronto for men and the matter was promptly reported to Brigadier-General W. A. Logie, G.O.C. The battalion has been requested to withdraw its agents from the Toronto field.

Bandsman Stan McCabe passed through the city from Brockville, and on his return will be in the city for a few days before leaving for overseas.

Last year Lindsay secured a big contingent in Toronto and they were all claimed as 45th Regiment recruits. The 109th Battalion is supposed to be a Victoria and Haliburton County unit, pure and simple but a number of men were brought from Kingston, and now it looks as if the Toronto field was being worked.

home this week, Pte. Noel Clarke, who left with the First Contingent from Peterborough, for overseas, and since then has been wounded three times.

The local Council of Women assisted by the Business Girls' Club and the City Teachers' Association, entertained the men of the 93rd at the recruiting rooms last evening. The gathering was a large one, and altogether a very happy time was spent. Games were played and a short musical programme was given. Vocal solos were rendered by Misses Bessie Reid and Maysie Armstrong, while Misses Lillian Rush and Muriel Gladman gave instrumental numbers, also acting as accompanists. Master Percy Luther was heard in a recitation. Major Davidson, chaplain of the 93rd, acted as chairman, and on behalf of the men extended a hearty vote of thanks to the ladies for their kindness in entertaining them. Dainty refreshments were served during the evening.

KINGSTON, Feb. 23.—The 83nd Battery, commanded by Capt. Shaw, has now 85 men on its rolls, and the number is increasing daily. Yesterday the battery received 20 recruits, and within the last week have added 25 more to its strength. Every effort is being made by Capt. Shaw to recruit his battery up to strength, Lieut. Stevenson, and Lieut. Short have been appointed to the 83nd and Lieuts. Sinclair, Paterson, Johnson and Campelle have been attached to the battery for duty and instruction.

Mr. J. Kennett, 313 Boswell avenue, has received the following letter from the trenches:

Belgium, Feb. 6, 1916.

Mr. Kennett:

Dear Sir,—Many thanks for pads, envelopes and pencils. Gifts like these from home tend to show us fellows out here that those at home have not forgotten us, although the sea divides us. It is a good thing to know that those who are still in Canada show that although they are not with us in Belgium or France that they will help in some way or other to defeat the Hun. Presents from home help to gladden a Tommy's heart, and make him think the fight still worth while as long as the people at home still remember him. I would like to tell you of some of the things that happen around here, but the censor would only tear up my letter and besides it might do harm.

I think I will close now as it is getting late. Hoping you will excuse me not writing sooner. I remain,

Yours with best wishes,
DRIVER A. YOUNG,

The following letter has been received by the King's Daughers and in this connection the society wishes to thank all those who contributed in any way towards this undertaking:

At a meeting of the Recreation committee of the 93rd Batt. Feb. 5th, 1916, a unanimous resolution was passed thanking you and other members of the King's Daughters for the kind and efficient manner in which they fitted out the men's recreation room at the armouries. Believe me,

Yours truly,
R. P. A. CRISP, Lieut.,
Sec. Recr. Com.

Capt. Ingall, Inspector of Accounts, etc., is paying an official visit to the 93rd Battalion to-day.

Mrs. Gray, Wolsley Street, has received a letter from her sons, George A. and W. H. F. Gray, at Shorncliffe, saying they had received the boxes from St. Paul's Church, and they certainly appreciated them. They wish to thank the ladies of St. Paul's Church for their kindness.

The Band and Signallers of the 93rd Battalion are going to meet in mortal combat in a hockey game at Brock Street Rink to-morrow. It will be the game of the season. The Musicians say they will have the Flag Wavers wig-wagging for help long before the battle is over, while the Signallers claim they are going to play all kinds of tunes around the Band's nets. The Band will introduce a dark horse in the person of Bandsman Worrall, who will perform at rover. The Band claim they will win easily. They say they have a good leader and are Hughesed to the rink. They can put on Wood if they have to and if the team happens to start Badley they will soon get on an even Keale. They have a defence that Brooks no opposition and they will have to go to Naples for men. They have the Orr to produce the goods, and with a Doughty captain to put steam into the Boyler they will be there at the finish. The musicians Bluntly claim they have it over the Signallers, even if the latter are as Wiley as a Fox. "Back to the Woods for the Signallers" is the band's slogan, but the Flag Wavers say "Wal no we'll have them back in their Burrows before the end of the first period." It will be some battle.

Ye Rat is Dead, Ye Soldier Is 1 Copper Richer By This Biz

PARIS, Feb. 22.—Rat tails are now worth a cent each on one part of the French battle front. The general commanding in that section has issued the following order of the day: "With the object of interesting the men in the destruction of rodents a premium of five centimes shall be paid for each rat destroyed. The premium shall be paid every ten days on presentation of the tails of the destroyed animals. The rats, bearing vermin susceptible of spreading disease, must not be handled, but immediately buried, and the tails done up in a paper impregnated with tar or petroleum."

The order resulted in a tremendous slaughter of rats, but was not obeyed in all its details. It appears that the new fashion of trimming women's garments with fur has created an outlet for rats' fur, and the rat-hunting soldiers skin their victims before burying them, disinfect and sterilize the hides, and sell them to the sutlers behind the front.

It is estimated that the rats have destroyed millions of francs worth of provisions sent to the soldiers by their friends and relatives at home. An officer at the Front recently wrote his wife that it would be useless for her to send him any more provisions, as it was impossible to preserve them from the rats, and in no case had he any more than a single lunch out of all the eatables sent to him. Some surprise has been expressed that several hundred thousand men, turned rat hunters, have been unable to exterminate them. A mathematician has taken the trouble to calculate that a year's progeny of a single pair of rats may easily amount to more than one hundred and twenty-two millions, which he holds is proof that only wholesale poisoning or suffocation can cope with the pest. In fact, of all the different measures adopted against them, none have produced the results obtained by the suffocating gas that the Germans occasionally send towards the French trenches. Thousands of them were picked up dead in the first line of the trenches after one of these gas attacks.

Another statistician has figured out that it costs a centime and a half a day to nourish a rat, and consequently figures their depredation on that basis to amount to forty-four million dollars a year in France alone.

LINDSAY, Feb. 23. — The S. S. Missinabie, which conveyed the remains of the late Col. F. Holmes Hopkins from England, arrived at St. John, N.B., on Monday. It is expected that the remains of the deceased soldier will arrive in Lindsay this evening.

Class One Recruits Summoned to Colours

Britain Calls on Men of 18 Years for Military Service.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—A Royal proclamation has been posted calling to the colours the recruits of class 1, under the Military Service Act. They are to report before March 31.

The class mentioned comprises the youngest of the recruits available. They are bachelors, who had attained the age of 18 on August 15 last. It is believed that the majority of them have now attained 19 years of age and have thus become eligible for military service. The present summons completes the calling up of the single men.

Turk Capital Was In Panic

The King has been graciously pleased to approve the grant of the Victoria Cross to Lieutenant-Commander Martin Eric Nasmith, R.N., for the conspicious bravery specified below:

"For most conspicious bravery in command of one of His Majesty's submarines while operating in the Sea of Marmora. In the face of great danger he succeeded in destroying one large Turkish gunboat, two transports, one ammunition ship and three store ships, in addition to driving one store ship ashore. When he had safely passed the most difficult part of his homeward journey he returned again to torpedo a Turkish transport."

"The King has further been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the Distinguished Service Cross to the undermentioned officers of the same submarine:

"Lieutenant Guy d'Oyley Hughes, R.N.

"Acting-Lieutenant Robert Brown Royal Naval Reserve.

"Approval has also been given for the award of the Distinguished Service Medal to each member of the crew."

Sank Twenty Ships.

The exploits of the British submarine E-11, Lieutenant-Commander Nasmith in command, are comparable with, if they do not succeed, those of the famous German submarine U-35. They began in May and ended in December, when the British abandoned the Gallipoli campaign. The E-11 sank no fewer than twenty Turkish ships.

For weeks Constantinople was in a state of terror and all shipping on the Sea of Marmora was at the mercy of the submarine and her crew of thirty men.

The submarine left the Island of Imbros, her base in the Aegean at 8 a.m. during the first week in May. The adventures during the next few days are described by a member of her crew, whose name is withheld because he did not want to be accused of "swanking" He said:

"We steamed toward the Dardanelles and dived as day was breaking, and—well, got through the Narrows O.K., arrived on the other side and saw two battleships. We were getting ready to torpedo one of 'em when they spotted us, opened fire on us and ran away.

"We then journey on for a mile or two and then went to the bottom and rested until about 8 p.m., when we came up. It was dusk; so we looked around. Nothing in sight.

Gave Gunboat "Tin Fish"

"We broke the surface and entered the Sea of Marmora and bumped around for a few days without sighting a thing until Sunday morning, when we were diving outside of Constantinople and saw a big gunboat, and at 6.35 a.m., we gave her a 'tin fish.'

"By 6.50 a.m. she was no more; but before she sank, while she was listing over, they opened fire on us.

"The second shot hit our periscope and 'done it in.' That gunner must have been a cool card, eh?

"On Monday we sighted a steamer, came to the surface alongside her and told her to stop. She stopped, and the men were so anxious to get clear that one boat capsized. No lives were lost. Two men boarded her and discovered she had a six-inch gun, several gun mountings and fifteen-inch ammunition aboard. So we blew her up.

"A few minutes after we sighted another steamer and told her to stop. She wouldn't We chased her into the harbor and torpedoed her.

"Soon after we sighted another steamer and chased her till she ran ashore. We were about to board her when some cavalry came up and opened fire. We replied and dropped a few, and then dived and torpedoed the ship.

In Constantinople.

"Next day (Tuesday) our skipper decided on entering Constantinople. To make a long story short, we got into the harbor without mishap and fired two torpedoes, one of which sank a transport loaded with troops, and the other exploded on shore somewhere. We learned afterward that it caused some panic. People ran up the hills—in fact, it caused uproar for a time.

"The following Friday morning we saw five transports escorted by destroyers. We sank the first and biggest one.

"A few days later we went back to our old corner, where we sank those other three and caught a supply ship napping."

"A few days after we torpedoed a German transport and then we got no more blood for a time until last Monday morning. On our way back, just before entering the Narrows, we ran another transport. That was our farewell smack.

"When we broke surface that evening, we found a mine hanging over our bows. We chucked it off when our escort came up, gave us three cheers, and off we went."

Two Mill London Tax For Patriotic Fund

LONDON, Feb. 22.—The City Council last night decided to ask the Legislature to sanction the imposition of a two-mill tax here to raise money for the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The proposal calls for no exemption whatever.

FRENCH OFFICIAL WAR PICTURES

TROOPS AT THE FRONT

Probably it would be impossible to conceive any more remarkable demonstration of the amazing extent to which the ingenuity of man is making science serve him to-day than is to be witnessed at the Grand Theatre March 2nd, 3rd and 4th. Nor is it only in one direction that this is made manifest.

There, at small cost, one may sit in the comfort and safety of a handsome up-to-date theatre and have reproduced before him for his pleasure and enlightenment the leading events taking place 3,000 miles away in the greatest war the world has ever known. He can, in fact, see more of the war than is seen by the soldiers whom he watches fighting and falling. And that is only a part of what our fathers would have thought a miracle.

These official pictures, which were taken by order of the great general staff of the French army for the national archives were loaned by the French Government and are presented to the people of Peterborough by the enterprise of The Evening Examiner.

No other war pictures have been like these amazing official films. For no other operators have ever been permitted to get within miles of the French front. But those who had the authorization and were under the instructions of the French General Staff went right to the firing line—and they obeyed their orders to record the war for the purpose of history.

The Huns Have Great Respect

over to them. Of course we had some in return, but they never got the range on us or anywhere near our guns. They tried hard to blow up the roads, so we can't get the ammunition up, but we always find a road to take to get there and it is no joke going up at night, pitch dark, and especially when the shells are flying thick, but we have been very lucky, I am glad to say, it is better when we get right up as the enemy uses such a lot of star shells, and they light up the whole place. I just got a letter from my mother saying my nephew has got the rank of an officer. I was surprised when I heard it, but it is true, as mother told me, so that makes seven of us boys and we are all well. Four of us are on active service, and I expect to see the other three over soon. The weather has taken another change; it is freezing hard and plenty cold enough driving, believe me. I hope the boys in Peterborough will come forward and do their bit. I have two sons and I only wish they were old enough to fight; they would be here also as well. I am glad I am here and I am sure I will do my bit as long as I am spared. The French people are very brave. They farm just the same as if there was no war on and when a shell hits the fields you ushould see the turnips and mangles fly, as well as stones and dirt. Talk about a mine exploding, I think this has it beat.

GIRL BETRAYS BANDIT

But Only After He Had Spurned Her for Another.

Love spurned, a vengeful woman; the combination brought arrest by Kansas city detectives to Alfred M. Chandler, 23 years old. Chandler confessed to his sweetheart that he had held up George Brown at Ninth and Harrison streets the night of January 16, and robbed him of $30 and a gold watch. Brown is a mail clerk.

Chandler boasted of the fear of his victim, and his sweetheart laughed. Then the girl found out about "the other woman." She reproached Chandler, only to be spurned. She told the police.

S. D. Harrison and Edward Krister, detectives, arrested Chandler, a former convict of the Kansas side. Chandler confessed to the hold-up, and is being held by the police.

BARREL SKIRT THE LATEST

PARIS, Feb. 22.—Nearly 450 models, notable among other things for generally gayer colours, were shown by Callot yesterday.

A novel feature is a 'jupe tonneau.' Instead of displaying bunchy hips or near panniers, Callot shows some fifty afternoon and evening frocks cut in distinct barrel shape with the material itself standing out in a perfect hoop independent of artificial supports. The whole skirt is very wide, but looks narrow at the base. The inspiration of the Russian ballet and Mlle. Pavlowa is acknowledged in a line of the prettiest models in cerise brocade beautifully embroidered with silver.

A second feature is the extensive use of cire fabrics, for instance, tulle ottoman, moire, Chantung, and tussore. Even braids, embroideries, soutaches, and ribbons show the prevailing Polish style.

There is an enormous use of ribbons which appear on fully 150 models, sometimes in place of the metal bands of former seasons and otherwise as rosettes, and especially in velvet and silk in narrow rows around skirts.

Long pelerines, of which there are nearly fifty different models of the most voluminous character, are in Spanish, Venetian and military cape effects. Their materials are diverse—lace, tulle, cloth, and silk, some single, others double and triple.

Tailor-mades abandon the military cut and belt. They are made fully six inches longer with revers in what is called "amazon" style.

Evening gowns are elaborate in the regular Callot manner, both with and without trains, the firmer being in brocade, tulle, or muslin, gorgeously embroidered, and the latter mostly in tulle or taffetas. Their corsages are extremely low in front and behind, but the upper part of the arm and the shoulders is more covered than formerly with tulle, lace, and trimming. One beautiful gown of black Chantilly lace had a mantille scarf caught in the hair at the back and falling as drapery upon the shoulders.

If a hotel clerk cannot sport a diamond scarfpin he should be able to call the drummers who come once a month by name.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hughead Johnstone, painter and decorator, 130 College Street, will be answered—on Wednesdays—questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced, and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating, may be sent to The Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

J. W. Orono, Ont:—Will you through the medium of your "Arts and Crafts" query column, kindly publish the names of the colors to mix in order to get a bronze color? also the proportions?

Ans.: You will have ot use your own judgment as to depth of tone. Use a copper coin that has been in circulation a year or two as a guide, it being a very good bronze color. Mix a half pound of Burnt timber and half pound of Brunswick green. Then odd Venetian red until you get the proper tone. It will take very little red, so be careful to not add an overdose to start with.

Sign Painter, Lindsay, Ont:—(1) What is the proper way to make a white for glass? (2) How are gold letters refreshed in large cities, is it by using acid? (3) Is oil or varnish generally used as a ground for black sand?

Ans:—This column is conducted for the benefit of those who are not artisans. The questions submitted by "sign painter" are trade questions, and should have been sent to some trade journal. It would not be fair to those in the business to publish broad cast, the process, or ingredients, used for work that could not be done by a novice. The above questions are very simple ones for a competent sign writer to ask. The average apprentice of one year could answer them readily. However, I will assist you a little ot the risk of betraying the purpose of this column.

(1) One way to make white paint for glass lettering is:—Equal parts of ground and dry white lead, worked up thick with a pale varnish and turps, on a stove with a palette-knife add a touch of Prussian blue to kill the yellow, use it thick as possible. Second coat with the same thinned out.

(2) There are several washes used to clean gold letters, some use soap and water, others an acid. Personally I prefer a composition of two acids the names of which I will mail to you on receipt of stamped addressed envelope.

(3) I presume you mean "black smalt" when you write "black sand". The addition of a good varnish to the ground color is advisable.

J. R. Homewood Ave:—Would you be so kind as to tell me the best way to scrape off old wall paper?

Ans:—There are solutions used to assist water to penetrate the paper, most of them however, are harmful to hands, brushes and wood work. The usual way is to soak the paper thoroughly with warm water, and scrape off.

Ida W. Rubidge St., City:—I have a piece of furniture and would like to know whether or not it is mahogany. I was told it was birch wood stained. Is there any test I can apply at home to make sure? an answer will be appreciated.

Ans:—Birch is very often stained to imitate mahogany but the grain of mahogany is longer and wider than birch, and birch is much lighter. Try scraping through the stain in some inconspicuous place, or put a drop or two of oxalic acid that has been dissolved in water, on a part of the wood that has not been polished. If it shows the wood to be very light, the chances are it is birch or maple stained.

CROSSED WIRES CAUSE A FIRE

In The Stable of Mr. W. J. Rome Mark St. Ashburnham

Crossed wires in the stable of Mr. W. J. Rome, Mark street, Ashburnham, was responsible for a fire which broke out there last night shortly after seven o'clock. The blaze made a great illumination, the hay and straw being an easy prey for the flames. The brigade was called and after strenuous efforts the conflagration was subdued. A horse, a cow and a young colt were in the stable at the time, but all were gotten out in safety. The damage done amounted to about $150 The building was not totally destroyed.

London Woman Died Watching the Movies

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 22.—Mrs. Harry Grainey, aged 36 years, whose home is at 45 Wilson Avenue, West London, died of heart disease in the Majestic Theatre last evening. Mrs. Grainey, who had been in excellent health, attended the theatre with a companion and was laughing heartily at a comedy film when she was stricken. It was noticed that she had settled in her seat, and failing to arouse her companion summoned assistance. Coroner Ferguson concluded that an inquest was not necessary. Mrs. Grainey was the mother of a nine-months'-old infant. Her husband is a munitions worker.

CONSTABLE HAD NO POWER.

Stratford Man Has Liquor Conviction Quashed on Appeal.

Mr. Justice Kelly handed down judgment yesterday afternoon, quashing the conviction imposed on T. R. Blewitt, of Stratford, Ont., on a charge of selling liquor without a license. The main ground on which the conviction was overruled was that the search of Blewitt's premises, on which the prosecution was based, had been made by a constable who was not empowered by law to make such a search. The search should have been made by a provincial license inspector.

Canadian Military Gazette Makes a Reasonable Summing Up of the Situation Which Every Farmer Can Honestly Endorse

AGRICULTURE AND WAR.

We want to win this war. We can't win it without men. We can't have men without money. We can't have money without production. The farm is our biggest producer, and so must be our chief considerations — Canadian Military Gazette.

(Canadian Military Gazette.)

This gives an opportunity of finding out pretty accurately the agricultural conditions and prospects of this country; we must confess the future is full of anxiety.

With a financial burden already enormous, and one increasing verily by leaps and bounds, we are threatened with a decreasing production from which to pay our war bills.

The whole question is: In what way can we do most to hasten victory? Let us put this in concrete form with regard to the proposal to place half a million young men under arms. Taken in that way, the question may be put something like this—Will we contribute more to the Empire's strength by giving five hundred thousand men with a certain proportion of munitions and feed, or by mobilizing three hundred thousand with a much larger contribution in munitions and food?

Now we do not propose to answer that question. We do not know, and it is certainly not a case for guessing. What we urge is a careful consideration of the problem, before we are irrevocably committed to what may be the wrong course.

A Phenomenal Crop.

Coming back, then, to the question of agricultural production, one so vital to a country like ours, upon what do we found the opinion that we are threatened by a large decrease of crops? In the first place, the crop of 1915 was admittedly phenomenal. Its very abundance made for a lesser showing in 1916. So great was the quantity of grain to be harvested and threshed in the Northwest that a large proportion of fall work in preparation for the 1916 harvest had to be left undone. Besides that, climatic conditions were perfect last year, and are not at all likely to be so again during this one.

Given, then, the same acreage and the same farm labour, we could not reasonably expect an equal success in 1916.

But we shall have neither an equal acreage nor an equal amount of farm labour. With a quarter of a million of our most active men already under arms, tens of thousands of them taken from the farms, and with an active recruiting programme on for the raising of county regiments, we may feel confident that the farm labour market, a market in which scarcity was felt even before the war, will be dreadfully understocked in 1916.

Two Off the Farm.

Nor does the away-going of one man from the farm always mean the loss of his production alone. In very many cases farming operations are carried on by the father, well advanced in years, and by his sturdy son. Both are required for the proper management of the undertaking. There are many kinds of farm labour which the older man can perform as well as the younger—driving the rake, the mower, or the binder, for example—but there are many other kinds, such as ploughing and pitching on, that the young fellow alone is equal to.

Well, then, the young man goes off to the war. It would be madness for the old one to try to struggle on. He has accumulated enough money to live quietly on the income—he retires to some little country town, and for one man gone to the war two men have been lost to agriculture. This is not an exaggerated example. This is happening in hundreds of cases, and will happen more and more as the drain on the country districts increases. We are not saying that such an exchange is detrimental, but we are saying that the question should be looked into with care, lest in our amateurish enthusiasm to help the Empire we are doing less than we might through haphazard methods of recruiting, and through drawing off too many productive enterprises.

COUNCIL ESTABLISHES RULE FOR ASSESSING CORNER LOTS

Will Apply to the Payment of Permanent Improvements Beginning With Contracts Let in 1915 But Not Previous to That—An Arbitrary Rule But Considered Fairest Under Circumstances.

WHAT OTHER CITIES DO

In deciding upon the assessment of corner properties with frontages on two or more streets, the Council last night adopted the method employed in Toronto, Ottawa and other cities with respect to the payment of the cost of sidewalks, permanent roadways and sewers. The tax rate for these improvements is applied as usual on the frontage, but on the "flankage" sixty feet is exempted if the lots are 120 feet or more in depth, and if less than 120 feet, one-half the depth is exempted. This applies to lots that are rectangular or approximately so. Properties that are triangular or of other forms will have to be considered as exceptions and dealt with accordingly. This arbitrary rule will affect streets paved under last year's contracts, but not under previous contracts such as that of 1914 which was not completed until 1915. Of course it will apply to all future work. That the method is not more retroactive is explained by the fact that it is provided by a very recent amendment to the Municipal Act, and as City Solicitor Gordon remarked, "we did not make the Act, hence we are not responsible for it."

To illustrate the new rule by several concrete examples, consider a corner lot 80 feet by 120 feet with all improvements on the two streets, the ratepayer pays the several rates for sewer, pavement, etc., on his 60 feet frontage, but upon only 80 feet of his "flankage." If his lot is 100 feet deep he is taxed for 100 feet "flankage," the other 60 feet being exempted; with a 90 feet depth he is taxed for 45 feet "flankage" or half the depth when it is less than 120 feet.

In every instance the exempted flankage is charged to the city's share of the cost of the work.

City Engineer Parsons had written to various citys for information as to their method of dealing with this problem in assessment, some of which follow:

St. Catharines —Exempts 1-3 of flankage; maximum of 40 feet.

London—One-third of flankage.

Berlin—Same as Toronto.

Stratford—One-third of frontage on both streets where combined frontage does not exceed 99 feet; total exemption not more than 30 feet.

Brantford exemption not to exceed 50 feet.

Galt— Reduction on flankage one-half of combined frontage and flankage; exemption not to exceed 66 feet.

Ald. Dobbin moved, seconded by Ald. Galbraith, in committee, that the by-law authorizing this rule be approved and in Council immediately after it received the prescribed readings and was passed.

If the divorce decree is not granted before the tenth wedding anniversary marriage may be called a near-success.

Do not get too cheeky when someone compliments you on your success. The chances are he wants to sell you an auto.

COUNCIL FAVORS AUTO RECIPROCITY

London Council's Petition Endorsed By Peterboro In Appeal To Legislature

London Ont. is one of the big towns on the highway between Toronto and Detroit and is within easy automobile distance from the American border. There may be no connection between that situation and the fact that London is working for reciprocity in automobile licenses between Ontario and the adjoining states. A circular letter from the London council was read at last night's meeting of the Committee of the Whole asking Peterborough to sign a petition to the Legislature for auto license reciprocity.

Ald. Duncan opposed the proposal, and moved seconded by Ald. Saunders, that no action be taken.

Ald. Dobbin moved in amendment, seconded, by Ald. Evans, that the resolution be forwarded to the government. It could scarcely be called an amendment for it was the direct opposite of the motion. Those who voted for the "amendment" thereby voted against the idea contained in the motion. The latter provided that no action be taken, the amendment provided that action be taken. Examples of this procedure are not a few in the council's performances. However, Ald. Dobbin's amendment carried.

Contract For Sewer Pipe is Doled Out

Evenly Between R. Hicks & Co. and H. P. Taylor and Son

Tenders for the supply of 24-inch vitrified sewer pipe were received by the Council last night from R. Hicks & Co., H. P. Taylor & Son and R. G. Sturgeon. The first two offered 40 per cent. discount off the list f.o.b. cars at Peterborough, and Mr. Sturgeon 50½ per cent.

The pipe is for 1200 feet of sewers, and the difference of one-half per cent. would amount to about $200, it was estimated.

Moved by Ald. Duncan, seconded by Ald. Dobbin, that the contract be equally divided between the Hicks and the Taylor firms.

Mr. Parsons remarked that this was unfair to both of the firms. They had tendered for the whole supply—not for half.

A Peterborough "Old Boy" To Preach To-night

The Rev. F. L. Baker, of Chicago, Field Secretary of the Mission Band of the Free Methodist Church, will preach in the Free Methodist Church here, at 8 o'clock to-night.

Mr. Baker, who formerly lived in Peterborough with his parents, has been making a tour of the East Ontario Conference in the interest of missions, and is now on his way from Kingston, to attend a District Quarterly meeting being held in the City of Toronto. He is stopping off here not only that he might see his old home again, which is quite changed since he lived here, but also to preach, and try to awaken more interest in the cause of missions.

Those who avail themselves of the privilege of hearing Mr. Baker will hear something interesting, because he not only has the cause at heart, but he is considered a fine preacher.

Horses For the Fire Department

The fire department is in need of several new horses. The animals at present in use are no longer fit for active service. They are slowing up in their speed and their powers of endurance is depreciating. For some unknown reason the Fire, Water and Light committee has in the past displayed a weakness for greys. The latter being hard to get renders it a difficult matter to procure horses of the desired type. This is one reason why he horses at present in use will never find their way into the remount department of the active militia. The equines will probably fall into the hands of some ambitious David Harum of local repute. The sum of five hundred dollars has been se aside in the appropriation for the purchase of new horses for the department.

Presentation in the South End

St. Alban's mission room, Brownton, was crowded last night when the members of the congregation met to bid farewell to Mr. F. C. Wallwork, the superintendent of the Sunday School, who is leaving Peterborough to accept a position at Newmarket. Mr. Spence, the missionary as present, and after a musical programme had been rendered, he invited Mr. Wallwork to the platform and expressed in feeling terms his regret at his leaving and his appreciation of the work he had accomplished as Sunday School superintendent, since the mission was started about eighteen months ago, and as a token of the esteem and affection which his pupils and their parents had for him, presented him with a suit case and an umbrella. The presentation was made by Miss Dorothy Benson.

COUNCIL TALKED AROUND SALARY INCREASE TO M.O.H.

Dr. Amys, M.O.H., has asked the Council for an increase of salary from $800 a year to $1,000. Ald. Duncan stated that Dr. Amys had been extremely busy night and day for months attending cases of measles, diphtheria, fever, etc., and certainly deserved some bonus. When Dr. MacPherson accepted the position he understood that his salary would be increased.

Mayor Duffus believed that Dr. Amys possibly was aware of that understanding, but he could not vouch for it. The Mayor recalled the promise to Dr. MacPherson.

It was decided on Ald. Duncan's suggestion to defer action until a later meeting which Dr. Amys will attend.

It was stated that Dr. MacPherson used to receive $120 a year from the Utilities Commission for testing the city's water. He instructed Mr. Spence in this work and when he left for overseas service Mr. Spence fell heir to it and the salary.

Ald. Edgar said it was not a good year for salary increases. If the M. O. H. position were thrown open he knew where the city could get a qualified man at the $900 salary.

Ald. Duncan replied that Dr. Amys was saving the city his salary by his attention to indigent patients in the hospitals. Dr. King was the only doctor he knew who would take the position if it were open.

Unposed Realism Is Great Feature Of War Pictures

Condition Under Which They Were Taken Different From Ordinary Movies

Official French Government Pictures Here Next Week

Advertisements and reports of the presentation of the Official French War Pictures in Canadian and American cities have said there is a thrill every second, and this is understating the facts; there is one continuous thrill for an hour and a half to any intelligent ones who give their full attention. Not morbid thrills though. There is no catering to the taste of those who wish to see dead and horribly mutilated bodies lying thickly around. These pictures are educational. They show modern warfare with all its mechanical aids and appliances. They show trench life as it is, not as sensational and imaginary pictures have told. They are essentially real, unposed, and because of this they carry a stronger appeal than any "fake."

Scenes Typical of War.

No one must go to see this wonderful exhibition expecting to see pictures taken under the most favourable conditions and on a day chosen for its fine light. These are scenes typical of the war and its associations. If the makked battery seems rather dim, it must be remembered that the intervening trees could not be removed to improve the clearness of the picture; they were required to aid the French in defeating the enemy that day and following ones.

As one watches the French infantry advancing at the run to take up positions in an advanced trench on which the Germans are advancing; as they get down under cover, and the rifles and machine guns begin to spit bullets, and then as they don their gas protection seeing a cloud approach, it is difficult to realise one is sitting in the auditorium and not actually with the warriors. Realism could not be carried further because this is reality.

The lighter side of the soldiers' life is not missing. A view of a boxing match between an American and an Frenchman behind the lines is as clear and interesting as any picture ever shown, and it may here be added that the science and vim portrayed are far in advance of that shown by many pugilists who are fighting on purpose for the money the "movies" will bring them.

Wonderful Care of Wounded.

The dispatch and gentleness with which wounded are taken from the trenches to the base, the arrangements for their reception and the constant attention are all shown. Battle, with screaming shells, exploding mines and hissing bullets, is shown with such startling clearness that the roar of the guns, provided by the orchestral drums, becomes a necessary part. If it were missing one would be bewildered.

Every soldier, every civilian, who has a spark of patriotism and love of home should see this officially presented war. New meaning will be given the day's news despatches, new force will be added to the trite words of official statement. To miss the opportunity is to neglect a chance to increase tremendously one's knowledge and improve one's education.

Deletion Hardly Missed.

The Ontario Board of Censors eliminated part of the films, although all were shown in Quebec. The reason for the action was that they were too gruesome and pathetic. These are hardly missed, because it is impossible to see the shell fire, the bayonets and other weapons without clearly imagining their effects. The imagination is quite sufficient; the actualities might be too distressing.

Presented in Peterborough by The Evening Examiner at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and matinee Saturday afternoon. Admission, gallery 15c., reserved seats 25c., 35c. Box seats 50c.

LAJOIE TO RETAIN BERTH WITH MACK

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 23.— Nap Lajoie will be back on the Athletics' middle sack this season, Connie Mack made this statement to-day when asked concerning reports that Malone will play second.

"Lajoie isn't all in yet," said Mack. "He played fine ball for me last year."

The Athletics' manager went on to point out that though Lajoie has been playing major league ball since 1896, he batted .380 and fielded .960 in 110 games last year.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—New Haven sold off 7-8 to 67 on stock exchange at opening to-day. In face of reports of probable heavy losses through damage suit growing out of yesterday's wreck, opening generally was considered steady.

NEWSBOYS' MITE TO BELGIAN FUND

All reports from the Belgian Fund collection teams indicate a sympathetic reception and generous response from the public. An inspiring and rather pathetic incident is related by Mr. A. E. Killaly of Mr. Jas. Edgar's team. Three newsboys desiring to contribute something for Belgian aid volunteered their offerings this morning. The aggregate of their donations was not very large except in comparison with their slender and precarious resources. But behind the gift was the spirit of charity actuating these newsboys as deeply and truly as it moves throughout the entire nation, the United States and probably some other countries.

If any persons overlooked by the canvassers desire to contribute to the Belgian Relief Fund they may deposit their offerings at the Royal Bank or The Examiner Office.

FIVE LOSE THEIR LIVES IN RESTAURANT BLAZE

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Four men and a woman lost their lives to-day in a fire which destroyed theatrical boarding house above a restaurant in the theatre section of the city. Early reports said a number of the actors and actresses who were stopping in the house, had perished but the dead were identified later as being employees of the boarding house, and Thomas Keratsas, one of the proprietors.

20,000,000 LETTERS DAILY GERMAN MAIL.

The German Imperial Post Office is doing more work now than ever before in its history. The clerks are working day and night handling the monstrous mail going to and from the front. At present more than 20,000,000 letters are handled daily. In peace times the highest amount ever handled was 17,000,000.

This big increase has resulted from the fact that every one who has a relative, friend, or acquaintance on either front keeps writing to him to lessen the monotony of his life in the trenches, and the soldiers, whenever they have a leisure moment, write to those at home.

In addition, the large number of prisoners in Germany spend the greater part of their time writing letters, and in the prison camps tons of letters are delivered daily.

To handle this tremendous mail thousands of women are employed and they have been found very efficient.

Allies' Naval Power Is Thrice That of the Foe

PARIS, Feb. 23.—The naval power of the Entente Allies in proportion to the naval power of the Central Empires is as three against one, as calculated in official quarters.

ENTENTE FORCES.

	France	Great Britain	Russia	Italy	Japan	Total
Battleships (Pre-Dreadnought)	12	42	12	11	12	89
Battleships (Dreadnought) ...	13	34	5	5	5	62
Fighting Cruisers		10	2	..	9	21
Protected Cruisers	21	39	..	9	9	71
Cruisers and Scouts	17	73	10	20	13	133
Torpedo Boat Destroyers	87	239	86	45	61	542

CENTRAL POWER FORCES.

	Germany	Austria-Hungary	Turkey	Bulgaria	Total
Battleships (Pre-Dreadnought)	20	12	1	..	33
Battleships (Dreadnought)	17	4	..	..	21
Fighting Cruisers	6	..	..	..	6
Protected Cruisers	3	2	..	..	5
Cruisers and Scouts	26	6	1	..	33
Torpedo Boat Destroyers	144	35	10	1	190

Precise figures as to the respective situations as regards submarines are not available. These are two unknown quantities in the German situation—the number of submarines lost since the war began, and the number built.. TThe allies have kept closely a ecret the number they have destroyed or captured, and the number Germany has been able to complete to replace them is estimated only approximately. The most competent authorities in France have arrived at the conclusion that the submarine forces are about in the same proportion as the other units of the different fleets, but none of them give out any figures.

GERMANS CLAIM AN ADVANCE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 23.—The German official statement to-day on operations near Verdun claims that the Germans penetrated to a depth of two miles on a six-mile front, and that three thousand French were captured. Neither London nor Paris official statements admit this, although they say that the fighting is terrific in that section.

ROTTERDAM, Feb. 23.—The Dutch tanker Lafrandre, of 2,018 tons, bound for New York, has been sunk by a mine. Only two survivors have been reported. Others are believed to have been lost.

Pleads Guilty To Killing Her 6th Husband

Changes Plea After Jurors Fail to Agree and is Sentenced to Three Years in Penitentiary.

WAYNESVILLE, N. C., Feb. 23.—The sentencing of Mrs. Frona McMahan, accused of murdering her husband, Dave McMahan at Sunburst, in August, to a term of three years in the penitentiary by Judge Long, brings to light one of the most startling tales ever unfolded in a Carolina court. Mrs. McMahan was under indictment for murder in the first degree. Her husband was found dead in bed at his home, and her version of his death is that she had arisen early to prepare breakfast, leaving her husband in bed. While in the kitchen she heard a pistol shot, and upon returning to the bedroom found McMahan dead with a bullet through his heart.

In giving her evidence the little woman, a pronounced brunett, calm, self-possessed, smiling and serene, gave a detailed history of her matrimonial experiences with the six men she had married in the brief period since her sixteenth birthday. She is now 24.

First Wed At 14.

She was first married to Thomas Meadows in Graham county at the age of 14. Two months and eight days after Thomas died with a bullet in his side. The comely young widow was corroborated in her testimony that Thomas committed self-murder, by her two little sisters, who told that the man shot himself while in their presence. A magistrate acquitted her of a charge of murder.

Two years later in Tennessee she was married to William Metcalfe, with whom she lived for about five or six years, when he ran away with another woman. Without bothering about a divorce, a little less than a year later she married William Gregory, also in Tennessee. Shortly thereafter he obtained a position at Proctor, in this State, and one day when he was journeying across the mountains to his home he was taken suddenly ill went about a mile away and died before aid could reach him. Less than six weeks the widow mourned for the departed, for within that time David Shields had won her heart and hand. He was rather an old man and it was a month or so before he left for California without the formality of saying good-bye. The deserted wife was consoled by a younger man, again without the usual divorce, this time to Luther Shields her troth being pledged. In the course of a few months, however, the domestic harmony was shattered, a woman from Little Rock, Ark., persuading the husband away.

Shot Through Heart.

Then came the sixth husband Dave McMahan. The couple had been living as man and wife for nearly two years until one August morning last year the man was found dead in bed, a bullet hole through his heart.

The case against the woman was entirely circumstantial. She testified that he had gotten up and made a fire in the early morning and then went back to bed, she getting up then to prepare breakfast. A few minutes later the pistol shot rang out, while she was in the kitchen, according to her testimony, and he was discovered dead. There were several people in the house at the time, but no eye witness. From the wound and the position the pistol was found the State argued that he could not have killed himself, and that his wife was bound to be the guilty party. She pleaded innocence, and the jury could not agree.

In the case just decided the jury debated for fifty-three hours, but could come to no agreement, four of the jurors holding out for acquittal. When the case was definitely given up by the jury, to save the ordeal of another trial and upon advice of counsel the woman pleaded guilty, to the charge of manslaughter and was sentenced.

NEW KLUX KLAN IS ORGANIZED IN SOUTHWES

VAN BUREN, Ark., Feb. 23.—An organization which is patterned closely after that of the famous Ku Klux Klan of reconstruction days is growing readily over a wide territory in this section of the country. For the past year the work of organizing the W. C. U. (Working Class Union) has been in progress and now the members of the union number more than 20,000. Applications are being received daily.

During the past year the organization has spread to the States of Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Texas, and some parts of Illinois. To join the W. C. U. the candidate pays the organizer 10 cents, signs a pledge and he is a full-fledged member. There are no dues. Once a member always a member, and if a member violates his pledge he is violently dealt with by other members of the union, it is said.

Meeting Place in Woods.

The members of the Working Class Union meet secretly in the woods and other out-of-the-way places and their records, after being read and approved and made plain to each member, are burned. The object of the organization, it seems, is to break vengeance on bankers and others who may be accused of usury, and others whom the members conclude are imposing on the poorer classes.

At each meeting of the union a president pro-tem. and secretary is elected. This is repeated at each meeting, there being no officers permanently elected. All communications are received through a private mail box, Van Buren, Ark. The cards which the members sign are numbered consecutively, so that a close count of the number of members is kept.

A part of the constitution of the order is that no member shall do non-union work, and that he shall be true to the order at any and all times and under all circumstances.

The constitution says very plainly that any means deemed necessary by the members of the organization may be used to carry out its plans.

Example of Its Work.

Recently a man by the name of Bera, who rents a farm from a Sallisaw, Okla., bankers, was taken out and brutally beaten with a wet rope because he would not leave the banker's farm. After beating the man into almost insensibility, he was given twenty-four hours to leave the farm and country or be killed. Instead, he had warrants issued for the arrest of several of the men whom he recognized in the flogging party.

Several charges of night riding were preferred against them. The proof was such that it was a hard matter to convict the men, and the cases are still pending against them.

During the latter part of December a national convention of the organization was held in the woods near Sallisaw, Okla. All of the records of the meeting were destroyed and none but members know what transpired. According to members of the organization who attended from this city, delegates from five States took part in the convention. Recently applications from Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire have been received.

There are about two or three thousand members of the W. C. U. in Crawford County and Van Buren, where it was organized a little over a year ago. All of the members of the order band closely together and seem to be of the opinion that the order will spread until it will cover the entire United States.

New Jerseyite Says "Phantom Gunman" Fired Through Window

GLASSBORO, N.J., Feb. 23.—Unless Charles F. Repp, who says a "phantom gunman" shot through the windows of his home in an effort to kill him, can show members of the township committee some bullet holes, the committee is through with its investigation.

C. W. Schwenafeir, a committeeman, who looked in every part of the Repp house and in the home of Howard R. Moore, where the Repps took refuge and the "phantom gunman" is said to have followed, made the announcement.

The committeemen were up early and began their investigations. First, the broken windows were examined, and it was agreed that they were broken much as a window usually is broken when a bullet crashes through it.

But this deduction was as shattered as the window a moment later when a committeeman, who had been silent but thoughtful, discovered that the broken glass from the window was outside, not in the house.

Mrs. Moore, whose windows were broken after the Repps went there for protection, is certain the breaking was done by bullets, but she cannot find any bullet holes. She will continue the search.

POST-MORTUARY BABY.

Caesarian Operation Performed After the Mother's Death.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—The son of Mrs. Mary Dooley, who was born after his mother's death in the Jersey City Hospital Saturday afternoon, is reported to be well started on the road to healthy life. Dr. Irwin Moskowitz, assistant house physician, detected a faint heart beat in the blue and apparently lifeless bit of humanity that he brought from the operating room. After the doctor and four nurses had worked over the infant for half an hour the pulse and breathing became regular. This was the first case of a successful post-mortuary Caesarian operation at that institution. Not more than six similar operations have been performed in this country in the last ten years.

Within fifty-five seconds after Dr. Moskowitz found that Mrs. Dooley had died he had performed the operation.

A lemon will keep fresh a long time, if wrapped in tissue paper and placed under a tumbler on the pantry shelf.

Great Germam Offensive May Mark The Beginning of a New Drive on Paris—Belin Believes the Fall of Verdun Will Signal the Beginning of the End of the War—German Fleet May Venture Forth.

ITALIAN TRANSPORT SUNK

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The great German offensive, directed by the Crown Prince against the outer defences of Verdun, marks the beginning of a new drive on Paris, according to Amsterdam despatches to-day, quoting advices from Berlin.

By the blasting fire of thousands of guns the Germans plan to wreck the defences of Verdun and begin a great march on the French capital, one hundred and thirty-two miles away, Amsterdam reported.

Berlin believes the fall of Verdun will signal the beginning of the end of the war.

THE WIFE'S NOSE FOR NEWS

If the Joneses get a baby or the Johnsons get the pip,
Or the Smithses have another family fight;
If the girl across the alley gets a husband or the grip,
I will have the why and what of it to-night;
For my wife knows when a tenant and the landlord have a jam,
And why the man next door is death on booze,
She is jerry to the gossip, she is hep to all what am,
For wife has a nimble nose for news,
So she has!
A nimble, neat, and nifty nose for news!

Does Tom Jollicks come home pickled (she can tell you when and why),
And the price they soaked Miss Smithers for that lid,
Where did Sarah Whatyoucallit get that shanty on her eye?
Did her husband give her that? You bet he did.
Where does Mrs. Beecher go (shrug; shrug!) and spend her afternoons?
Why do Arnolds have to live on oyster stews?
Ask my wife, she's got the nimble nose for news!
Yea, bo!
A most uncanny, nifty nose for news.

Or, she knows that Mrs. Julip has to rouge and wears a wig,
And Miss Rooney's shape was purchased in a store,
That a young and handsome doctor calls a lot on Mrs. Figg
(And she so healthy, too)—but say no more!
And the Gores are sharps at poker, well, in fact, they play to eat,
And the clubs have sued that stuck-up Smythe for dues,
O, the information bureau in my home is hard to beat,
And harder still my wife's nose for news!
Some nose!
Her nimble, neat, and nifty nose for news!

So I warn you all, my neighbours, I am wise to all you do,
I am jerry to the whyness of your which,
It is vain to flaunt pretensions, for I know your salaries, too,
And I know if you are poor or if you're rich;
I know all your secret sorrows, all your loves and all your hates,
All your problems, your successes, and your blues;
What your wives have told my wife to me nightly she relates,
And she's got a keen, uncanny nose for news,
So she has!
A nimble, neat, and nifty nose for news!

Britain's Trade Grip On Germans To Be Tightened

Blockade Campaign Will Be in Hands of New Minister, It Is Announced

DEFENDS POLICY

Replying to Attack by Lord Beresford, He Says Conditions in Teuton Countries Are Becoming Critical.

LONDON, Feb. 24. — The government, through Lord Lansdowne, announced in the House of Lords it had decided to turn over all matters connected with the blockade of Germany to one man, who would rank as a full fledged Cabinet Minister. It is understood the new post will go to Lord Roebrt Cecil, who since the formation of the coalition government has been Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs. He will retain this post, joining the Cabinet as Blockade Minister.

The new Minister will be charged with the administration of the order in council regulating the blockade, as well as responsibility for the general policy and practice of the government with respect to trade passing into or from neutral countries.

Lord Robert Cecil is a lawyer of wide experience and a young man as members of the British Cabinet go. In the Foreign Office he has been intimately concerned with the blockade operations particularly in their relation to the complicated matters touching belligerent and neutral rights. His elevation to the Cabinet will give to the unionists another representative in the coalition counsels.

Lord Beresford's Attack.

The whole question of the blockade was threshed out at considerable length in the House of Lords last evening, Lord Sydenham and Lord Beresford making the principal appeals for a stricter blockade, while Lord Lansdowne and Lord Buckmaster defended the government.

It was Lord Beresford's maiden speech in the House of Lords and his plea was spirited and epigramatic, contrasting notably with the ordinary sombre, ultra-dignified debates of the upper house.

"There is some doubt," he began, "whether the government is going about its task in the right way. A war was never won by orders in council or proclamations, but by hard hitting. If we want to bring Germany to her knees we must exercise the blockade power thoroughly and completely under the principles of international law. To do that it is necessary to have a policy and to turn it over to the navy and let the navy enforce it.

"These orders in council may be statesmanship, but they are not war, and they are not likely to win the war. I would allow nothing whatever to go into Germany, not even luxuries. I would abolish the distinction between absolute and conditional contraband. I would extend the doctrine of continuous voyage to all contraband. The war should be run by five Cabinet Ministers without departmental duties. The longer we have civilian control of the operations of the war the more disasters we shall suffer."

Says Germany Is Crippled.

Lord Lansdowne replied to Lord Beresford point by point.

"Our blockade has accomplished some very satisfactory results, and I think the Cabinet scarcely deserves to be stigmatised," he said. "Our policy has killed German export trade and seriously crippled import trade. I sometimes wish the people of this country could have experience, say for a fortnight, of the conditions prevailing now in Austria and Germany. I am satisfied that we would then hear no more of this talk about the government sitting with folded hands doing nothing."

"Although the principle of international law are flexible and capable of growth and change, we cannot in this great struggle be too sensitive in considering what those principles reall yare. We should certainly have lost if when the war ended it could be urged that under stress of necessity and because we thought we could thus get an advantage we had used the power we possessed to infringe the legitimate rights of neutral peoples.

"We would rather have it recognised everywhere that the rights of neutrals were never so safe as when under the power of the British fleet."

"Heaven Made Husband" Sued

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 23—Edward L. Cooper, a cousin of the late Governor Cooper, and formerly proprietor of the Metropole and Savoy hotels in Denver, and the Lankershim Hotel in Los Angeles, is defendant in a suit filed in the District Court here by Anna B Stahl, a stenographer, who alleges that the defendant is her "heaven-made husband."

Alleging that Cooper abrogated an agreement he signed in 1904, whereby he premised "henceforth to devote his life to her,' 'and have nothing whatever to do with other women, Miss Stahl demands $75,000 damages ,asserting that her life has been ruined by his failure to keep the pact.

He Asks for Release.

Miss Stahl asserts that she and Cooper were married "in the eyes of God," although Cooper had a wife living and undivorced. She also asserts in her complaint that she and Cooper had lived together as man and wife for several years following the signing of the agreement into which they both entered.

In 1912, while Miss Stahl was in Denver recovering from an illness, Cooper sent her, it is alleged, a papet asking her to release him from the agreement. At the same time, she alleges, he sent her $1,000.

She promptly declined to release him. He then informed her, she avers, that he would have nothing more to do with her, but later, the complainant recites, they resumed their "heaven-made" marriage relations.

Ignorant of World's Ways.

Cooper and Miss Stahl, she says, lived in a pretty cottage at San Jacinto, Cal., for several months.

The complainant sets forth that Cooper induced Miss Stahl to accompany him to Los Angeles when he left Denver to take charge of the newly completed Lankershim Hotel. There Cooper set her up in business as a public stenographer, she alleges.

Miss Stahl asserts in her complaint that she was an innocent girl, ignorant of the ways of the world, when she met Cooper.

U. S. INDUSTRIES KILL MORE MEN THAN THE WAR

Committee Indicts Living Conditions Which, it Says Can be Remedied.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 23.—Charging that preventable industrial mortality in the United States each year is greater than the combined toll of the European war, the committee on industrial relations has issued an appeal to the public to help it create better living conditions in the working districts of the country. The chairman of the committee is Frank P. Walsh, former head of the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations.

The committee asserts that 250,000 men, women and children are killed in industries each year, while 4,700,000 are wounded. In addition to this, it declares that 800,000 children die annually in the congested working districts of the country, 100,000 of whom are killed by poverty before they reach their first birthday.

Surgeon General Rupert Blue of the Public Health Service is quoted by the committee to the effect that 50 per cent. of these deaths could be prevented. Surgeon General Gorgas of the army, the man who cleaned up Panama and made it a healthy place to live in, commenting upon its statement says:

"The preventable mortality in this country is greater than the mortality caused by the European war. Science knows that the chief cause of disease is poverty; that disease can never be eliminated so long as people are compelled to live poorly and close together.

Following are portions of the appeal indicting the industrial centres of the country.

"In Brookline, Mass., live the well to do and the rich of Boston. Babies die in Brooklyn at the rate of 76 per 1,000. In South Bethlehem, where live the steel workers, whose brawn and brain produce the wealth that has glutted Wall Street banks and the coffers of Broadway wine merchants, babies die at the rate of 255 per 1,000.

East Orange, N.J., is another wealthy suburban town, where no one works very hard and most of the residents work not at all. Babies die there at the rate of 78 per 1,000.

"Fall River, Mass., is a centre of the textile industry of New England. The people there produce the wealth that is spent in towns like Brookline and East Orange, or on Fifth avenue in New York. And their babies die at the rate of 220 per 1,000."

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs" writes Mrs Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

CAN'T TRY HIM AS A SPY.

EXTRADITION LAW ALLOWS LINCOLN TO BE PROSECUTED FOR PRESS FORGERY.

NEW YORK, February 23.—Charles Fox, counsel to the British Consulate here, asserted that Ignatius T. T. Lincoln, who calls himself an international spy, cannot be put on trial as a spy in England, if he is extradited to that country. Mr. Fox said that there is no ground for Lincoln's declaration that if he is sent to England to answer to a charge of forgery he can be executed there as a spy. The lawyer said that under the treaty of 1889 between Great Britain and the United States no citizen of either country could be put on trial for any other than the offence for which he was extradited.

Mr. Fox has notified Lincoln's counsel that he will make a motion before the U. S. Supreme Court in Washington on March 25 to advance the hearing of argument on Lincoln's extradition.

'PHONES WFE TO BE READY—COMING TO KILL HER.

"I am coming over to kill you. Be ready to die when I get there."

Instead of preparing for death Mrs. Fisher telephoned the police and detectives were sent out to await the coming of the man who would do murder.

A 38-calibre automatic revolver was taken out of his pocket and he was hustled into the patrol waggon and taken to the city prison.

PROFESSOR DISMISSES OWN SON FOR SMOKING

SEDAN, Kan., Feb. 23.—When Professor J. E. Kibler was installed as County Superintendent of Schools a few months ago, he made an order forbidding teachers to smoke, attend public dances, frequent pool halls, or swear.

A few days ago he walked into a garage here and found his son, Emmet, who teaches a school at Jonesburg, with a lighted cigar in his mouth. The County Superintendent promptly fired his son out of his $60,-a-month job, and a new teacher is now in charge.

HAIR COMING OUT?

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications the hair stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

CHAPTER I.

THE TOWER AND THE WELL.

"O, la, la! See, then, the best of good luck for each one of us this year!"

Although Mere Pitou's round body, like Falstaff's, was fat and scant o' breath, and the Pilgrims' Way was steep and rocky, some reserve of energy enabled her to clap her hands and scream the tidings of high fortune when the notes of a deep-toned bell pealed from an alp still hidden among the trees.

Three girls, fifty paces higher up the path, halted when they heard that glad cry — and, indeed, who would not give ear to such augury?

"Why should the clang of a bell foretell good luck, Mother?" cried Barbe, the youngest, seventeen that September day, and a true Breton maid, with eyes like sloes, and cheeks the tint of ripe russet apples, and full red lips ever ready to smile shyly, revealing the big, white, even teeth of a peasant.

"Mother" signalled that explanations must await a more opportune moment.

"She has had some secret on the tip of her tongue all day," said Madeleine, who was so like Barbe that she might have been an elder sister; though the sole tie between the two was residence in the same village. "Don't you remember how she kept saying in the train?—Now, little ones, ask Sainte Barbe to be kind to you. She'll hear your prayers a kilometer away, even though you whisper them.'"

"Yes, and Mama would have liked us to begin singing a hymn when we started from the foot of the hill, but she thought Monsieur Ingersoll and Monsieur Tollemache would only be amused," put in Barbe.

"They would certainly have been amused before Madame Pitou reached the top, singing!" tittered Yvonne.

"Is it possible that I shall ever be as stout as Mama?" murmured Barbe, and the mere notion of such a catastrophe evoked a poignant anxiety that was mirrored in her eyes.

"Ah, Mignonne, now you know the form your petition to Sainte Barbe must take," smiled Yvonne.

"It's all very well for you, Yvonne, to chaff us smaller ones," pouted Madeleine. "You're tall, and slim, and fair, and you carry yourself like the pretty American ladies who come to Pont Aven in the season, the ladies who wear such simple clothes, and hardly look a year older than their daughters, and walk leagues in men's boots, and play tennis before dejeuner. Of course you can't help being elegant. You're American yourself."

The recipient of this tribute turned it aside deftly. "Sometimes I think I am more Breton than American," she said.

"Yes, everyone says that," agreed Barbe loyally. "Next year, Yvonne, they'll make you Queen of the Gorse."

With the innocence of youth, or perhaps with its carelessness, Barbe had raised a topic as prickly as the gorse itself, because Madeleine had been a maid of honour that year, and might reasonably expect the regal place in the succeeding Fete of the Fleurs d'Ajone. Happily, Yvonne, if endowed with a sense of humour, was eminently good-natured and tactful.

"Nothing of the sort," she replied. "My father will never allow me to be photographed, and there would be a riot in Pont Aven if the shops couldn't sell picture postcards of the Queen."

"Hurry up!" cried single-minded Barbe. "Let's pray to Sainte Barbe before Mother comes, or she'll be telling me what I must ask for, and I mean to take your advice, Yvonne."

Two faces were turned instantly toward the invisible shrine of the puissant saint, and it would place no heavy strain on the intellect to guess what favours were sought. But Yvonne hesitated. She had not been reared in the precise religious faith of her companions. Opinions garnered in the Bohemian atmosphere of John Ingersoll's studio were in ill accord with the uncompromising dogma taught in the convent on the hill overlooking the estuary of the Aven and laboured by every sermon preached in the picturesque church near the bridge.

Yet at that instant some words uttered by her father reached her ears, and, moved by sudden impulse, she raised her eyes to the tiny arch of light that marked the spot near the summit where the interlacing branches of the avenue of elms came to an end.

"Sweet Lady Barbara," she breathed, "if you have it in your power to favour us poor mortals, please give my dear father a happy year!"

The bell, after a few seconds of silence, renewed its clamor, and the pretty unbeliever accepted the omen. Her friends, of course, regarded the answer as more than propitious; it was an assurance, an undoubted promise of saintly intercession.

"I love Mama more than anyone in the world, but I couldn't bear to measure a meter round my waist," said Barbe confidently.

"Even though I may never be Queen, it is something to have been a maid of honour," said Madeleine, demurely conciliatory now that her prayer was safely lodged.

Yvonne heard, but paid no heed. She was looking at the three people approaching the ledge of rock on which she and the others were standing.

Madame Pitou, like the girls, wore the costume of Brittany, conforming, of course, to the time-honoured fashion that allots a special headgear to womankind in each district. Thus the coif supplies an unerring label of residence. A woman from Pont Aven would recognize a woman from Riec and another from Concarneau though she had never seen either before in her life; while all three would unite, without possibility of error, in saying of a fourth, "She comes from Auray."

The two men in Mere Pitou's company were just as surely classed by their attire as the women by their coifs. Both were artists, and each obeyed the unwritten law which says that he who would paint must don a knickerbocker suit, wear a wide-brimmed felt hat, disregard collar buttons, and display a loosely knotted necktie. Ingersoll, the elder, was content with clothes of brown corduroy which had seen many, if not better, days. His boots were strong and hobnailed, and his easy stride up the rough and uneven track would reassure one who doubted the stamina of his seemingly frail body. Tollemache, who affected gray tweed, a French gray silk tie, gray woollen stockings, and brown brogues, looked what he was, a healthy young athlete who would be equally at home on springy heather whether carrying an easel or a gun.

Tollemache had caught Mere Pitou's arm when she announced the message of the bell.

"One more outburst like that, my fairy, and we'll have to carry you up the remainder of the hill," he grinned.

"Mon Dieu! but I'm glad I made the best part of the pilgrimage in a train and a carriage!" twittered Madame. "Yet, though I dropped, I had to warn the little ones that the dear saint knew they were coming to her shrine."

"Is that what it means?"

"What else? A pity you are not a good Catholic, Monsieur Tollemache, or you might be granted a favour to-day."

"Oh, come now!! That's no way to convert a black Presbyterian. Tell me that Sainte Barbe will get my next picture crowned by the Academy, and I'll fall on my knees with fervor."

"Tcha! Even a saint cannot obtain what Heaven does not allow."

Ingersoll laughed. "Mere Pitou may lose her breath; but she never loses her wit," he said. "Now I put forward a much more modest request. Most excellent Sainte Barbe, send me some mad dealer who will empty my studio at a thousand francs a canvas!"

Yvonne heard these words; yet, be it noted, she asked the saint to make her father happy, not prosperous. It was then that the bell rang a second time.

"Tiens!" exclaimed Madame Pitou. "The saint replies!"

"Like every magician, you achieve your effect by the simplest of contrivances—when one peeps behind the scenes," said Ingersoll. "Old Pere Jean, custodian of the chapel, who will meet us at the summit, keeps a boy on guard, so that all good pilgrims may be put in the right frame of mind by hearing the bell accidentally. The boy saw our girls first, and then spied us. Hence the double tolling. Now, Madame, crush me! I can see lightning in your eye."

"Mark my words, Monsieur Ingersoll, the saint will send that dealer, and he will certainly be mad, since none but a lunatic would pay a thousand francs for any picture of yours."

Ingersoll seized her free arm. "Run her up, for Heaven's sake, Tollemache!" he cried in English. "Her tongue has scarified me every day for eighteen years, and age cannot wither, nor custom stale, its infinite variety."

Laughing, struggling, crying broken-ly that ces Americains would be the death of her, and tripping along the while with surprising lightness of foot,—for Mere Pitou had been noted as the best dancer of the gavotte at any pardon held within a radius of ten miles of Pont Aven,—she was hurried to the waiting girls.

"Ah, that rascal of a father of yours!" she wheezed to Yvonne, relapsing into the Breton language, as was her invariable habit when excited, either in anger or mirth. "And this other overgrown imp! When they're beaten in argument they try to kill me. Gare! A nice lot I'm bringing to the holy chapel!"

"Never mind, chere maman," said the girl, taking her father's place, and clasping the plump arm affectionately. "When we descend the other side of the hill you'll have them at your mercy. Then you can tell them what you really think of them."

"They know now. Artists, indeed! Acrobats, I call them! Making sport of a poor old woman! Not that I'm astonished at anything Monsieur Ingersoll does. Everybody admits that he is touched here," and she dabbed a fat finger at her glistening forehead, "or he wouldn't bury himself alive in a Brittany village, because he really has talent. But that hulking Monsieur Tollemache ought to be showing off his agility before your girls instead of lugging me up the Pilgrims' Way. Ore nom! When little Barbe's father—Heaven rest his soul!—met me here one fete day before we were married, he wouldn't rest till he had swung himself round Sainte Barbe's tower by the shepherd's hooks; and me screaming in fright while I watched him, though bursting with pride all the time, since the other girls were well aware that he was only doing it to find out if I cared whether or not he fell and broke his neck."

"What's that?" inquired Tollemache, for Madame Pitou was speaking French again. "Where is this tower?"

"Oh, you'll shiver when you see it! You Americans eat so much beef that you can never leave the earth. That's why Frenchmen fly while you walk."

"Or run, my calfpage. You must admit that we can run?"

"Well, Maman, we offered our petitions. What did you ask for?" said Yvonne.

Madame flung up her hands with a woebegone cry. "May the dear saint forgive me, but the monkey chatter of those two infidels put my prayer clean out of my head!"

"Gee whizz!" exclaimed Tollemache. "This time I'll run in earnest, or I'll catch it hot and strong," and he made off.

"No harm done," said Ingersoll. "Mere Pitou has all she wants in this world, and will enter the next with pious confidence."

For once the elderly dame kept a still tongue. Like every Breton woman, she was deeply religious, and rather given to superstition, and the momentary lapse that led her to forget a carefully thought out plea for saintly aid caused a pang of real distress.

Yvonne guessed the truth, and sympathized with her. "Father dear," she said, "promise now, this minute, that you will bring us all here again next year on Barbe's fete day, and that we shall fall on our knees while Madame offers her prayer, or she will be unhappy all day."

Ingersoll read correctly the look of reproach his daughter shot at him, and was genuinely sorry. He too understood the tribulation that had befallen his friend.

"By Jove!" he said instantly, "better than that, though I make the promise willingly, Madame Pitou and I must do immediate penance for our sins—she for neglect and I for irreverence—by going halfway down the hill again and toiling back."

He was by no means surprised when Mere Pitou took him at his word. Away they went, and Yvonne did not fail to grasp the meaning of her father's significant glance toward the belfry as he turned on his heel. On no account was the boy to miss the arrival of yet a third batch of pilgrims!

Now, the belfry stood on the farther edge of a tiny plateau of rock and gorse that crowned the summit. On the left was Pere Jean's cottage, with its stable and weaving shed. Among the trees in the background rose the diminutive spire of Sainte Barbe's chapel, and it was evident that the slope of the hill was precipitous, because spire and treetops, though quite near, were almost on a level with the girl's eyes. From the side of the belfry a paved causeway led to a quaintly carved and weather-beaten open-air altar, and long flights of broad steps fell thence on one hand to the door of the chapel and on the other to the first of many paths piercing the dense woodland of the hillside.

Pere Jean, a sprightly and wizened old peasant dressed in white linen, was already chatting with Tollemache and the other two girls. The boy, thinking the avenue was clear, had gone to the cottage for a tray of picture postcards.

Yvonne followed, and sent him to his lookout with definite instructions. "Make no mistake," he said, "and we'll buy at least a franc's worth of cards later." Then she rejoined her friends.

"Yes, I've seen it done," Pere Jean was saying. "Sailors were the best; but the shepherds were brave lads too. Nowadays it is forbidden by the prefect."

"Why? Were there many accidents?" inquired Tollemache.

"Oh, yes, a few. You see, it seems easy enough at the commencement; but sometimes the heart failed when the body was swinging over the cliff. It is fatal to look down."

Madeleine's shoulders were bent over a low parapet. Yvonne, leaning on her, saw that the caretaker was talking of the feat that Barbe's father had accomplished many years earlier. The altar at the end of the causeway was shielded by a squat, square tower. In its walls, about six feet above the causeway, some iron rings were visible. They hung loose; but their staples were imbedded in the masonry, and each ring was about a yard apart from its fellow. A mass of rock gave ready access to the first pair; but thenceforth the venturesome athlete who essayed the passage must swing himself in air, gripping a ring alternately in the left hand and in both hands.

Madeleine shuddered when she felt Yvonne's hand. "To think that men should be so foolish as to risk their lives in such a way!" she murmured.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Best That Could Be Done Under the Circumstances

By F. A. MITCHEL

Margaret Brierley was brought up by a couple of maiden aunts, sisters, who were well off and intended that after their death Margaret should have their belongings. These were in part a comfortable house and grounds in the village, in which they lived. Margaret proved an apt scholar and was graduated with honor. Since life with her aunts was very dull she yearned for something livelier. After a year of "sitting around hokling her hands," as she expressed it, she determined to go to the city to teach.

Her aunts combated her resolution. They reminded her that they had cared for her since she was an infant, educated her and given her everything she wanted. All in vain. One morning when Aunt Sarah went into her room to awaken her the bird had flown.

Three years passed, during which there was no communication between the aunts and the niece. Margaret was getting on well as a teacher when she fell ill. Having no means to provide a substitute for her school duties, she was dropped from the salary roll. Then the poor girl began to regret that she had yielded to the impulse to be independent. Nothing remained for her but to go back to her aunts and ask their forgiveness and help.

Taking advantage of a slight rally, she spent her last funds for a railway ticket to her former home. She arrived at the house as darkness was falling. How comfortable everything looked! There were the dainty white house, the porch and lattice covered with vines, the flower garden to one side, the kitchen garden in the rear, the whole inclosed by the low picket fence. She went as fast as her condition would permit up the walk, opened the door and entered. All was still.

"Aunt Elizabeth!" she called, with no reply.

"Aunt Sarah!" Still no answer.

She went through the house, but found no one. Thinking that her aunts had gone out, she took off her wraps and sat down in the living room before the open fireplace, in which were live coals.

Presently she heard the front door open and shut. She arose, intending to greet her aunts. Instead a young man entered. Seeing her, he paused.

"Where are my aunts, Misses Elizabeth and Sarah Blarney?"

"Are you Margaret Brierley?"

"I am."

"Miss Elizabeth died a few months ago, and Miss Sarah followed her in two weeks."

Margaret sank back in her chair and covered her face with her hands. It was some time before she spoke again; then she said:

"Who lives here now?"

"I do. I am Roger Blackmore, a distant connection of the two ladies. They made me their heir."

"What shall I do?" moaned Margaret, forgetful of the presence of another.

"Have you not been successful?"

"I am ill and without a cent in the world."

"You are welcome to remain here as long as you like. I will leave you and send some one to take care of you."

"What claim have I on you?"

"I will show you."

Going to a desk, he took out a paper and handed it to her. It was the will of her aunts, leaving all they possessed to him. There was a clause stating that if their beloved niece, Margaret Duncan, ever returned in need it was their desire that the said Roger Blackmore should relieve her wants. She looked up at the heir.

"How can you relieve the wants of a woman near your own age without"—

"I think your aunts were mindful of that."

"Then why this request?"

"Perhaps they fancied"—

"What?"

"That we might pool our issues?"

"Pool our issues! What do you mean?"

"Marriage."

Margaret made no reply to this. She felt that she would be willing to marry Polyphemus for a home and rest. Presently she arose slowly and with difficulty.

"Where are you going?" asked Blackmore.

"I don't know. I can't stay here."

He went to her and gently forced her back in her chair. "The good ladies," he said, "told me that if you failed in your work they would be glad if you and I could occupy their old home and enjoy their income together."

Margaret sat silent for awhile, then looking up at him, said:

"As for me, I can do nothing else. It remains for you to decide whether or no you care to accord with the wish expressed."

Without reply he left her and went to the telephone booth. She heard him ask: "Is the Rev. Mr. Stark at home? Tell him to come to the Stacey place immediately." Then, returning to her, he said: "You can't leave here in your present condition. If I permitted you to do so your aunts would turn in their graves. You can't stay here alone, and I can't stay with you without scandal. You'll have to take my unworthy self. It's hard luck for you, but it can't be helped."

She put out her hand to him, and he bent down and kissed her.

The parson came, and all was well.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered, otherwise the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid, you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail you are poisoned. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

Tobacco Heart

CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Tobacco does not seem to affect all alike. Many men enjoy their smoke, live to a good old age, and apparently suffer no ill effects from the use of the weed.

There are others, though, on whose heart and nervous system tobacco produces the most serious results.

It causes palpitation, pain in the heart and irregularity of its beat, makes the hands tremble, sets the nerves on edge, and the breath becomes short.

To counteract this demoralizing influence on the heart and nerves there is no remedy that equals Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

They make the heart beat strong and steady, restore tone and vigor to the nerves, and remove all the evil results caused by the tobacco.

Mr. Nelson Young, Brampton, Ont., writes: "I have had, up to about a month ago, a very weak heart, which I suppose came from smoking cigarettes. When I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as a cure, I immediately gave up smoking, and started using them. It does you justice to be the founder of such a great remedy. They made me feel like a new man."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WARSAW NOTES

WARSAW, Feb. 23.—Mabel Ellis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Ellis, of this Village, passed away on Friday morning, Feb. 18th. Bronchitis, followed by pneumonia, was the immediate cause. Though having lived here less than a year, deceased had won her way to the hearts of the entire community by her quiet, good natured, kindly disposition. She was a member of the Choir and the Willing Workers' Bible Class of the Methodist Church, the Young People's Guild of the Presbyterian Church and the Young People's Class of the Baptist Church.

Her father and brother are wearing the King's uniform, the former having enlisted as farrier last July and is at present in France, while the latter is in training at Trenton Ont. A younger sister, Stella, remains at home with Mrs. Ellis.

The funeral, which was very largely attended, took place on Sunday afternoon, service being held in the Methodist Church. Interment took place at St. Mark's cemetery.

Beautiful floral offerings were sent by the different organizations, and loving friends. The pall-bearers were five young men and brother of the deceased, all wearing khaki.

Even Hospital Treatment For Kidney Disease Failed

Well-Known Commercial Traveller Says That Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Undoubtedly Cured Him

News of his recovery from kidney disease will be welcomed by the many friends of Mr. L. D. Griffin through-out the lower townships and the adjoining district of the United States.

Mr. Griffin has travelled this section for 35 years and what he says will be accepted, as proven by all who know him best.

He tells in his letter how relief was obtained by treatment in Sherbrooke and Montreal hospitals, but the old kidney trouble returned again and again until by the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure was effected. As he says, these pills "undoubtedly did the work."

Mr. L. D. Griffin, Bulwer, Compton County, Quebec, writes: — "I can add one more statement of kidney disease cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For about twenty years I was bothered more or less with the kidneys, then the disease became worse and I was sick in bed for one year, took doctor's medicine to no avail, and on his advice went to Sherbrooke Hospital, where I was benefited, but the old trouble returned, and I tried a Montreal hospital. Got a little better, but the help was only temporary, and I was soon bad again.

"On the advice of a friend, I began to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I now thank that friend, for to-day I am as free from kidney disease as I ever was in my life. I owe the cure to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, for they undoubtedly did the work. I am 68 years old, and have spent 35 years as a traveller calling on the drug trade. Everywhere I am told that Dr. Chase's medicines are the best sellers and give the best satisfaction of any medicines on the market. Shall be glad to answer any questions in regard to my cure if people care to write me."

De Rode Doomed By Secret Society

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 28. (correspondence). — Further details came from the Belgian frontier of the assassination of Nels de Rode, the Belgian who is alleged to have betrayed Miss Edith Cavell, the English nurse executed at Brussels, to the German authorities.

According to this story, the body of a young man, who had been killed by two revolver shots, was found in a street at Schaarbeek, a suburb of Brussels, early one morning. He was at once recognized as de Rode, 25 years old, and son of a retired Major of the Belgian Army. The body lay before the door of the man's parents, but the father refused to receive it, and it was taken to the public mortuary.

As soon as the German authorities heard of the case they gave strict orders that the affair should be kept as quiet as possible, but instructed the police at the same time to make every effort to discover the assassin. The news spread quickly, however, and before noon all Brussels knew that a man regarded by the Belgians as a traitor had been put to death.

The slain man, it is said, had been suspected for a long time of spying for the Germans. It was reported that he together with an individual of the same stamp had made a specialty of enticing young men to take service in the Belgian Army and then when they were on the point of leaving the country, delivering them to the Germans. But recently, it is stated, proof had been obtained that it was de Rode who betrayed Miss Cavell to the Germans, as well as the architect Baucq, who was put to death with her.

From that moment de Rode's death sentence was signed. There is, it appears, a sort of society in Belgium whose members have sworn to levy "justice" on those who do espionage service for the Germans. Those who shot de Rode are said to have found papers on him that will enable them to trace other such spies.

In reply to this challenge General von Bissing, the German Governor of Belgium, not only imposed a fine of $125,000 on Brussels, but levied a fine of $12,500 against Schaarbeek, where the deed was committed. Furthermore, the civil police of the latter place, 400 strong, have been disbanded, and the Municipal Council has to appoint sixty sworn and paid agents in their place.

A recent dispatch reported that a secret organization, similar in methods with the Ku Klux Klan of the Southern States, had been formed by patriotic Belgians.

OLD HIGHLAND LAW

The practice of wagering upon horse races and cards and dice is dealt with by an act which provides that "if any man gain by wagers above the sum of one hundred marks the superplus be consigned in the hands of the collector for the poor. And magistrates in burghs, Sheriffs and Justices of the Peace in the county, are empowered to pursue for the said surplus gain or sis are declared liable to the informer for the double thereof, half to him and half to the poor."

Clears Macedonia Of Native Serbs

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Bulgaria is carrying out a policy of sweeping out the natives from Serbian Macedonia in order completely to Bulgarize the occupied territory, and for this reason the Bulgarian authorities refused to allow the American Red Cross to carry out relief work in that section, according to Richard Schellens, an American, of Groton, Conn., who has been serving with Lady Paget's contingent, and has just arrived here from Uskub.

Ten days before he left that city, Mr. Schellens says, the Serbian element was put in a panic by a Bulgarian proclamation, ordering all Serbians who had resided in the country no longer than the last two years to pack up and leave. The period was expiring the day he left. No exceptions were made in this order—old people, children, babies, women expecting to become mothers, the sick and wounded. This, he says, was the last act of a course of systematic discrimination against and persecution of the Serbians, which in the dead of winter, with the roads in frightful condition, would mean the death of many on their long march through bleak country which had been denuded of its food supplies.

"If there ever was a country that needed relief," said Mr. Schellens, "it is Serbian Macedonia. The American Red Cross was willing to do this work. It has plenty of money and there is a big supply of corn, wheat and other foodstuffs stored up in Roumania to draw on. But the Bulgarians did not want us, for relief workers see and hear too much. Their excuse was that the work would interfere with military operations.

"This does not hold, however, as they actually wanted the American doctors and sanitary experts to stay on, for King Ferdinand has a perfect monomania on the subjects of plagues and epidemics. Such an invitation was extended to Drs. Brokaw and Forrest, contract surgeons with the Serbian Army; Plotz and Baehr, attached to Lady Paget's mission, and Dr. Orborne and Mr. Fox, all of the American Red Cross."

Mr. Schellens pays a high tribute to the Bulgarian peasantry. He found them a kindly, honest people, and a fine type physically.

"There is enough difference between the soldiers and their officers," continued Mr. Schellens, "to make them seem a different race. The soldiers are short and stocky; their officers are tall and of a different type of features. In fact, the soldiers are the real Bulgarian stock, while the officers are largely of foreign intermixture.

"And the difference in character is just as marked. The soldiers did many kindnesses to the Serbian unfortunates when their officers weren't about. But the officers are brutal toward the civil population, and most of all the Serbs. They are under definite instructions to make life unbearable to the Serbs, so they will vacate this part of the country, out of which Bulgaria claims she was cheated after the second Balkan war. No discrimination is shown against the remaining Turkish population, however.

"The Bulgarian Government has gone systematically about the work of creating hatred of the Serbians by the Bulgars. This is an instance of which I have personal knowledge.

"When the Serbians abandoned Uskub their authorities disposed of the worst of the civil prisoners in the simplest way. It would not do to leave a jail full of cutthroats and other dangerous criminals behind to be released by the invaders, so the Serbians simply shot them, and buried them in the prison yard. When the Bulgars came they exhumed these bodies, battered them up with spades, and then not only took photographs but moving pictures of the bodies as Bulgarian victims of Serbian atrocities.

"The mass of Bulgarians are absolutely ignorant of the main facts of the present war, and of the causes. They know only what they are told. But the army officers, who are extremely well paid, are all absolutely loyal to the King, and strong for continuing the war."

SHE DARKENED HER GRAY HAIR

She Tells How She Did It.

A well-known resident of Kansas City, Mo., who darkened her gray hair by a simple home process, made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray or faded hair, stimulate its growth and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, 1 small box of Orlex Compound and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently, then every two weeks. This mixture relieves scalp troubles and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair. It does not stain the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray-haired person look 10 to 20 years younger.

BRIDGENORTH NEWS

There is poor sleighing for heavy loads and there is a lot of produce to be delivered yet before spring by the farmers.

The ice on Chemong Lake is over 20 inches thick and of the best quality.

The ice harvest is on. Jimmy Cullen has a gang on helping him to keep up the demand; also Frank Young is busy supplying his customers. There is more trouble in getting sawdust than getting ice on account of the saw-mill not running.

The lights in the Methodist church went on strike on Sunday night and refused to burn, but the Rev. Mr. McKee and the congregation took to the basement, which was very comfortable.

Jim O'Leary and Barney McManus have completed the season's threshing. They finished the grain about two weeks ago, and have now finished the clover. They report a good season, having threshed over one hundred days in grain and ten days on clover.

Mr. Percy Udy has purchased a fine new Chevriot car and had it delivered on Monday last.

MOTHER! DON'T TAKE CHANCES IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Clean Little Liver and Bowels

A laxative today saves a sick child to-morrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Keep all drinking utensils clean and all water warm water three times each day, especially in cold weather.

The habits of old age are generally the habits of youth matured and confirmed.

Thin Men and Women Can Put on Flesh by Getting 100% Efficiency from Their Food

Failure to absorb Flesh Making Materials in Daily Meals Keeps Weight Down. How to Make the Food Work and Stick.

Most thin people eat from four to six pounds of good solid fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump, chunky folks eat very lightly and keep gaining all the time. It seems all bosh to say that this is the nature of the individual. It isn't Nature's way at all.

Most thin people stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They absorb just enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a semblance of health and strength. Stuffing won't help them. A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a single "stay there" pound. A great part of the fat-producing elements of their food just stay there in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. What such people seemingly need is something that will so act upon these fatty food elements that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body—something, too, that will multiply their red blood corpuscles, and increase their blood's carrying power.

There is a preparation known to reliable druggists almost everywhere which was designed to aid in supplying the missing elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This modern treatment is called Sargol and it aims through regenerative, re-constructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to the starved, broken-down cells and tissues of your body. You can readily picture what result this amazing transformation should produce as with increased weight, the cheeks fill out, hollows about neck, shoulders and bust disappear and from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh is added to the body. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Leading druggists of this vicinity have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every large package.

Why not make the test. First weigh yourself. Then take Sargol—just one tablet at every meal and before you go to bed—for two weeks—then weigh again and note the difference. Let the scales tell the story.

The tablets are small, easily swallowed, produce no disagreeable effects, contain no habit drugs, and are not at all expensive as compared with results obtained.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S SET OF CLOTHES.

By Anabel Worthington.

Short clothes for the very little child, either girl or boy, are shown in this illustration. The set consists of rompers, petticoat and drawers. All these garments have a novelty in the arrangement of the lower portion.

The rompers are made in regulation manner, front and drawers legs in one and with waist opening down the centre in the back and across the top of the drawers, sing in the back. The neck may be high, with small flat collar or cut out in round or square outline, and the sleeves may be long or short.

The inseam of the rompers legs, instead of being seamed in the usual way, is buttoned, so that it may be opened without removing the rompers or opening the back.

The petticoat hangs from the shoulders, where the two halves button together, and at the lower edge there is a tab, in envelope style, buttoning the front and back of the lower edge together.

The drawers are of regulation make, joined to a band and opened at each side, and these also have the inseam buttoned. The convenience of this arrangement will be appreciated by all mothers.

The undergarments are made of muslin or cambric, while the rompers may be of gingham, galatea or other wash material.

The pattern, No. 7,612, is cut in sizes 1, 2 and 3 years. Two year size requires for rompers 1½ yards of 36 inch material with 1½ yards of banding. For petticoat, 1 yard of 36 inch material and 4½ yards of edging. For drawers, ¾ yard of 27 or 36 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 15c.

Germany's threat to sink without warning armed merchant vessels, may have a far reaching effect on exports, but the attitude of the United States, in recognizing the right of ships to carry guns for defence purposes only, will effect this to a certain extent. Had the United States favoured German diplomacy in this matter, and refused clearance to the large numbers of vessels bound for British ports, huge stores of foodstuffs on hand in American warehouses would have been thrown on the market which would result in a demoralization of prices.

This would apply more particularly to butter than anything else owing to the perishable nature of the commodity.

A recent report from "somewhere in France" states that on the German side of the line near Lille, butter was selling at $1.50 a pound, eggs, 20 cents each and potatoes, 25 cents a pound. (Who says Britain's navy doesn't blockade?)

Another way of looking at it is a statement that while British food prices have risen 47 per cent. German prices have gone up 68 per cent.

Butter on the local market took another sharp advance last Saturday, going as high as 36c, though the majority of dealers were asking 35. After 11.30 it was impossible to get a pound at any price. Toronto quotations were 37 cents for dairy and 30 cents for creamery.

Outside dealers class this season of the year as a "down market," depending largely on the state of the weather.

Under ordinary conditions this is the time of the year when the economical housewife lays in her supply of sugar for the year, owing to it's cheapness, but war has upset this time honored custom.

In 1911 it was about $4.75 a hundred; in 1912 it was slightly more; in 1913 it was sold at $4.80; in 1914 the quotation was $4.85; in 1915 it was $6.60, while now it is $6.95.

This may be the bottom price this year unless war ends more quickly than we anticipate.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyses the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headaches, dizziness, your stomach sours, or is bad you have rheumatic twinges, or is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in the urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

If you want to please a woman, shut your mouth and listen.

The best friends we often find are those we have taken good care never to offend.

THE GERMAN DRIVE BRINGS THEM CLOSER TO VERDUN

Crown Prince's Army Captures Village of Beabant-Sur-Meuse But French Repulse Other Heavy German Attacks---German Onslaught Against Beaumont is Beaten Off With Great Loss to Enemy.

TERRIBLE FIGHTING ON EIGHT MILE FRONT

PARIS (French Official Communique), Feb. 24.—The French forces have been compelled to evacuate the Village of Brabant-sur-Meuse, less than eight miles north of Verdun, under a heavy attack by the Crown Prince's army, it was officially admitted to-day. The French have also lost part of Caures woods, four miles east of Brabant, the War Office reported, but have repulsed other heavy German attacks.

Following up their capture of Brabant-sur-Meuse, which lies on the east bank of the Meuse river, the Germans charged forward in heavy attack against the Village of Samogneux, two miles south of Brabant, and but six miles from the outskirts of Verdun itself. This attack was repulsed in a desperate infantry clash in which both sides lost heavily.

The German centre again delivered a violent onslaught against Beaumont, seven miles northeast of Verdun, but all attacks were beaten off. The War Office reported German losses in this fighting especially violent.

Infantry actions reached their greatest fury last night on an eight-mile front extending eastward from Brabant through Caures woods, and to a point north of Beaumont. The artillery duel continues with utmost violence all along a twenty-five-mile front.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 24.—Kaiser Wilhelm has arrived at the Verdun front to encourage his troops to the greatest efforts, according to Berlin advices to-day. The Kaiser, reports said, addresses his troops each day urging them to conquer Verdun at any cost.

Germans Have Lost Terribly Near Verdun

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 24.—Amsterdam asserts that the German losses have included more casualties than in any fighting for five months. For forty-eight hours streams of dangerously wounded have been making their way toward Germany.

PARIS, Feb. 24.—A despatch to the Times emphasizing the importance of the Verdun battle declares that the German losses in the past forty-eight hours have been so heavy as to insure the defeat of the attempt against Verdun.

President Wilson Is Sticking to His Guns

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—With a large and clamourous faction in Congress at odds with the President, the Administration to-day neared the crux in German-American relations. The situation was admittedly the most critical since the dispute arose over arming merchantmen. Drastic measures were taken to-day by the President to check an incipient Democratic revolt against his refusal to yield to Germany and warn Americans to stay off armed merchantmen.

Details of the clash betwen the President and Senator Stone in their conference last Monday night leaked out to-day. The President is said to have declared that Americans' rights to travel on armed ships must and will be unequivocally sustained.

"But if one obscure American is killed that will lead to war. Is adherence to our technical legal rights worth plunging this nation into war," Stone is said to have queried.

The President's reply is said to have been sharp and curt, approaching a rebuke to Stone. The President is said to have declared that if only one American life is involved he would take summary action by handing passports to Ambassador Bernstorff and immediately recalling American Ambassador Gerard from Berlin.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 24.—The Belgian vessel Zoe Brugge V has been sunk off North Hinder Light Ship. The crew was landed.

Portugal Has Seized Many Enemy Vessels

Special to The Examiner.

LISBON, Feb. 24.—Carrying out an official decree Captain Leotte Rego, commander of the Portuguese naval division, has seized thirty-six German and Austrian steamers, some of them large vessels, lying in the Tagus river. Germany and Austria are expected to declare war immediately upon Portugal as a result. It is said that the act of Captain Rego was totally unexpected by the governing authorities, who were unaware of the step until it had been carried out.

ATHENS, Feb. 24.—Formidable peace demonstrations have occurred in Turkey due to the fall of Erserum. Many persons have been arrested it is stated, and the Constantinople police are taking steps to prevent serious disorders.

WOOLLEN GOODS WILL SOON BE SCARCE ARTICLE

Representative of Big Wholesale House Advises People To Buy Their Underwear As Soon as Possible

HARD TO GET HOSIERY

"Are you aware that you are going to have difficulty in buying a suit of underwear next winter?" was the somewhat startling inquiry made by a representative of a prominent wholesale house to an Examiner reporter to-day.

The newspaper man managed to murmur that he did not anticipate any trouble beyond the usual difficulty of scribes in financing the operation.

"Well, let me tell you," continued the wholesaler, "that by next autumn there will be a scramble for underwear, and it will be very hard to get, while the prices will be materially higher than they are at present. My advice is for people to buy all the underwear, hosiery and everything else containing wool that they need right now. My wife and children have a two years' supply laid by, and it will all be needed before the conditions better themselves."

The wholesaler intimated that the greatest scarcity existed in hosiery, cashmere and worsted. Factory after factory was refusing orders and the wholesalers were unable to secure the hosiery. As for kid gloves it was almost impossible to secure any. Again the inability to secure dyes has rendered some coloured stuffs almost extinct. Navy blue is very hard to get, as is Turkey red and a great many other colours.

These conditions are, of course, due to the war. There is a scarcity both of material and operatives. Great centres like Lille and Turcoing are right in the war zone, while in England operatives are in the greatest demand.

"There is no good going to England looking for stuff," remarked the wholesaler. "Manufacturers will entertain you, take you out and play golf with you, and give you a good time, but there is no use asking them to sell you anything. I have not been over since the second last trip of the Lusitania, and am not going, for I can't buy anything."

The Examiner was shown letters from many different firms, including one from Japan, in which orders were refused. The conditions will grow steadily worse as the war continues, and the public is warned to study the matter closely.

Along the same line is the warning from the O.T.A. to its teams to carefully preserve this year's sweaters as woollen sweaters may be scarce next year.

RADICAL CHANGE IN THE APPOINTMENT OF NEW OFFICERS

Particulars of the Plan Recently Announced Have Been Issued---Candidates Will Only Draw the Pay and Allowance of a Private---93rd Battalion Has a Strength of 792---To-day's Orders and General Military News

Full particulars of the plan recently announced for the qualification of officers, whether for overseas or home battalions, have been issued for general information. The points of greatest interest in the regulations are: That any private or soldier of superior rank may attend the course, subject only to the recommendation of the commanding officer of the overseas unit to which he is attached; that all candidates without regard to former rank will attend wearing no rank badges, and will be known as "probationers," drawing only the pay and allowances of a private while at the school; and that subject to the approval of the general officer commanding, officers of militia regiments may attend the school entirely at their own expense and only after having certified their willingness to go overseas.

At the close of the present schools, the Infantry School of Instruction, which will succeed it, will be primarily for providing qualified officers and non-commissioned officers for the Canadian Overseas Expeditionary Force. Members of the C.E.F. of whatever rank or service will be permitted to attend provided they are recommended by their commanding officers, and that there is room for them. Probationers will join fortnightly, and the duration of their courses will depend on the progress made and the rank for which it is sought to qualify. Periodical examinations will be held, but a probationer will only be allowed to present himself for examination if recommended thereto by the School commanding, and for cause a probationer may be removed from the school at any time.

Pay Of a Private.

Only the pay and allowance of a private soldier in the C.E.F. will be given the probationer whatever his rank, separation allowance at existing rate being drawn where the family is in receipt of it and entitled to it. A special uniform, to be furnished free of cost will be worn, except that schools at present constituted will be continued as at present until the expiration of the period for which militia officers (provisionally or for higher certificates), have already been authorized to attend, and officers of militia regiments may attend should it be considered advisable by the general officer commanding the 2nd division, but with the conditions that their attendance shall be at no expense to the public, and that they shall certify on the back of the form of application to attend, their willingness to go overseas. Under these conditions the militia officer may attend, wearing his own uniform, but without any rank badges. Officers of overseas units may be permitted to attend for senior courses of instruction, and though wearing their own uniforms, must also remove all rank badges, receiving only the pay and allowance of a private. In future all appointments to commission in overseas units will be made either from already qualified officers or those at present authorized to attend the school, or failing these, men who qualify under the new regulations hereafter.

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—To the charge of making a mis-statement, which, "if made under oath, would amount to perjury," Pte. John Sheen, when Col. Denison read it against him in the Police Court to-day, pleaded guilty.

The mis-statement referred to, was made by him, the information showed, when he solemnly declared, while attesting for the Sportsmen's Battalion, that he had done no previous service in his Majesty's army. Evidence showed this statement to be untrue, as Sheen has been connected with the 91st Battalion. The connection was severed by the battalion officials themselves, who intimated that on account of his mis-conduct while in uniform, the said uniform was of more use to them than he was himself.

"He pleads guilty to making the declaration, but I think I should see the signed attestation form before sentencing him," the colonel decided.

"The document will be produced to-morrow." Assistant Crown Attorney Hughes promised. Sheen was remanded till then.

Sergt. J. Hawthorne, of the 93rd Battalion, has received word that his son, Pte. Ernest Hawthorne, of the 39th Battalion, formerly of the 39th Battalion, has been wounded in the hand. The information came from the boy himself in a letter to his mother, and no particulars were given. Pte. Hawthorne enlisted here with the 39th Battalion, and was drafted to the 18th Western Ontario unit. In his letter he says that he is at present on duty in the battalion stores, but is anxious to get back on the firing line again. He also states that his chum, Harry Stubbs, of Port Hope, is to get a Victoria Cross for capturing a machine gun and saving two officers.

Lt.-Col. Johnston, of the 93rd Battalion, is in Lindsay to-day, officiating as pall-bearer at the funeral of Lt.-Col. Hopkins, a Lindsay officer with the 1st Contingent, who was killed in an automobile accident in England. The body was brought back to Canada, reaching Lindsay yesterday.

The officers of the 93rd Battalion have arranged a euchre contest and dance in the Recruiting Rooms on Simcoe Street for the members of the

$2,527.20 THE RESULT OF FIRST DAY'S CANVAS

PTE. EDWARD DOWNS

One of the Peterborough Boys Who enlisted here with the 59th Battalion. He is now in Brockville with that Unit.

On Behalf of the Belgian Relief Fund---With Few Exceptions People Are Anxious and Willing to Contribute.

$4,527.20 NOW RAISED

$2,529.20 was the total rolled up by the canvassers on behalf of the Belgian Relief Fund, on the first day of the three days' campaign to raise $8,000, in order to complete the $10,000 desired. The city's contribution of $2,000 brings the total up to $4,529.20. The above was the result of the combined teams' efforts yesterday, as reported by the several Captains at the committee rooms last evening. Optimism was the keynote of the remarks, and all anticipated a much bigger day to-day, when it is expected a far greater sum will be subscribed. With few exceptions, members are meeting with a good reception at the hands of the public, the majority of the citizens being willing and anxious to do their "bit" in alleviating the suffering and hunger of the gallant Belgians. the request of the President and other members of the committee, the individual reports of the teams are not given. Some of them did not get started until yesterday afternoon while the result of another represents only the work of only one man. Then again, Alit. McElhiney, who is canvassing the factories, will not report on his work until this evening. Reference was made last night to the number of small subscriptions which were being made, evidencing the fact that most of the people, even though they were able only to give a little were ready to help in the worthy cause. Several of the collectors told of little incidents in connection with the campaign that are deserving of publicity.

Notes.

Mr. Walter Stocker told of a soldier's wife he met on the street who told him that as she lived upstairs she would not likely be canvassed. She offered to subscribe fifty cents a month. Another lady who lived on the same floor with her, put her name down for ten cents a week—surely a splendid spirit.

Mr. James Edgar had two notable subscriptions in his day's work, both being worthy examples for emulation. One was the handsome donation of one hundred dollars from Mr. W. H. Hill, and another of five cents each from two newsboys.

Mrs. Van Voorst, a Belgian lady, residing here, who for years lived on the borders of Belgium, was very proud of her countrymen, and was glad to be able to help them in this way.

A notable feature was the willingness of girls in offices and stores to help the cause. A captain called to canvass the head of an office. A stenographer asked for some blank cards. The result was that six of them pledged themselves for fifty four dollars. Then again five stenographers subscribed forty dollars.

Abl. Galbraith recounted how a farmer ran across the street to him to give a subscription to the fund. He believed that if all the farmers were interviewed on Saturday they would be glad to help.

Another evidence of the willingness of the people was shown in the account of a little incident by one of the canvass. He called to canvass a lady on a certain street, she gave a subscription and some hours later when passing that way another lady ran out to him and said she too would like to give something.

Persons who might be overlooked in the canvass now being carried on will greatly oblige the Committee if they will kindly leave their donations at the Examiner, Review, or with Mr. Vincent Eastwood at the Royal Bank.

FOE WITHIN GUN RANGE OF GREAT FORTRESS

The Losses on Both Sides Will Already Reach About 60,000 Men In One of the Greatest Battles of the War

NO CESSATION YET

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Feb. 24.—(5 p.m.)—Under the eye of the Kaiser, the Crown Prince's army has smashed forward to within gun range of the great fortress and the city of Verdun in one of the greatest battles of the war.

The losses on both sides will probably range about 60,000. Both sides to-night reported no cessation in the steading pounding of the great guns of all calibre, along a 25 mile front north of Verdun. No great anxiety is felt here, however, over the near approach of the Crown Prince's army to the fortress itself. Conceding the possibility that Verdun itself might be pounded to pieces by 42 centimetres, English military critics declared to-day that the Crown Prince must pierce a remarkable system of defensive field positions before beginning any actual march on Paris.

The whole French position in the Verdun angle consists of row after row of strongly fortified field positions, extending for miles both in front and in the rear of Verdun.

In earlier violent assaults, the Germans have beaten whole army corps to pieces in attempts to break through this defensive chain.

It is believed here that the losses they must sustain in the present offensive will defeat their attempts, though it is recognized that the French, too, must suffer heavy casualties in the Verdun fighting.

EVEN IDLENESS HURTS.

Germany had better bring its navy out of hiding. Every day it skulks, rusting, in its harbours, it is losing. The British navy is inactive in a naval sense; it is watching, but is not idle. The crews of the fleets are busy making munitions of war in their moments of leisure like the jolly sailors they are. Without firing a gun the British navy is weakening Germany—making munitions to be used against it on land. Everything seems conspiring to give the coup de grace to the Hun. Even the idle hours of the British sailor forge weapons against the enemy.

ONE GOOD FROM THE WAR.

If, as St. Paul says, evil communications corrupt good manners, good communications, good examples, have corresponding effects. This war is being waged by the Entente Allies in the interests of democracy, in the interests of the freedom of the people. As these interests are involved in the freedom of governmental institutions, the impulse given to democracy, and to the fostering of ideas of liberty, was regarded as promise of improved forms of government, in countries where the higher forms of human government had not taken effect. We see the result already in Russia. Russia before the war had an almost absolutely autocratic government. Now there is an awakening. The influence of the exaltation of democratic ideas, of the insistence upon human rights and liberties, has had its effects upon Russia. For the first time in the history of Russia, the "autocrat of all the Russians" has recognized the Duma or parliament as an essential part of the machinery of government. For the first time in history the Czra has opened the Duma in person, thus for the time taking the popular body, the representatives of the people, into partnership, so to speak, in the government of the country. Europe will be a new Europe, after this war is over; and Russia will be a new Russia, a greater and freer Russia, with a freer form of government, and a larger opportunity for the development of self-government. In Europe the days of tyranny are past, and freedom dawns for all the people, and even tyrant-ridden Germany will be benefitted. The galling oppression that unrestrained militarism has exercised for half a century will be destroyed at its source; for the militarism that is the cause of all this war, and all its consequences, will be crushed forever.

THREE KINGS.

In the noble game of "poker," the value of three kings does not depend upon the material quality of the cardboard. In the royal game of ruling on the contrary, the value of three kings depends little on the royal quality of their titles, and all depends upon the quality of their person and characteristics and ideals of ruling. Anarchists, extreme socialists and demagogues decry kings of all kinds. They say that the day of kings is past and democracy only rules. But this war has brought to light three kings that stand for a regard for popular rights and privileges that history cannot parallel in the ruler of any republic. Take the truly heroic figures of King Albert of Belgium, King Peter of Serbia and Nicholas of Montenegro. They are monarchs of small kingdoms, but kingdoms where the people, few as they are, have rights to be defended. These three kings have shown a splendid solicitude for their people, have made sacrifice and done heroic things for the benefit of their subjects. They have fought with their subjects, side by side with them. They have shared their hardships and in every way shown a solicitude for the welfare of their subjects the integrity of their kingdoms that measures up to the outward demands of democracy. These three kings have demonstrated that the kingly trade has not lost its place in the world but rightly applied, as it is in Great Britain with the constitutional safeguards, demonstrates that the royal democracy is the ideal form of government, and with the limitations human associations place, is the perfect form of human government. A republican form of government is not the necessary essential of the highest application of democratic government. We know republics whose heads, in the way of unselfish regard for the rights of their subjects, respect for the dignity of the state, cannot approach the monarchs mentioned in the attributes of the highest capacity for governing. The democratic form of government needs a balance wheel of permanent character.

ARE WE DISCOURAGED? NO!

It has often been remarked that in this war we may expect that successes must, or will, alternate with reverses. Therefore, we need not be downcast over the fact that, after being steadily pushed back on the western front for months, the Germans, by a supreme and desperate spurt, are gaining a little ground here and there. The Germans feel the necessity of offsetting the demoralizing effect of recent Russian victories by extra activity on the western front. To obtain a little flash of glory over a few temporary successes they are slaughtering men as if they counted for no more than so many flies. We shall see that their success will be only momentary, and that it is no cause for discouragement. We must look at this thing in the large—upon the growing strength of the allied resources, and especially at the grim spirit that Britain, especially, is putting into the fight. We are fighting for peace, but it must be peace of our own choosing, of our own dictation. The brave words of Premier Asquith, expressing determination to fight to a victorious finish, reflects the spirit of Great Britain and the Empire. A spirit backed by unexhausted resources—"we've got the ships, we've got the men, we've got the money, too"—will bring victory out of even seeming serious reverses. We should be encouraged by reading the following despatch of yesterday's date. It shows the indomitable spirit of Great Britain, and is the language of the man who knows what we can do, and who does not use idle words. This is the despatch:

London, Feb. 23.—Premier Asquith concluded his reply in the House of Commons to-day to questions of Philip Snowden and Ma[illegible]walgan regarding the possibility of an early peace with words evoking applause from every corner of the House: "I have stated in clear, direct, explicit and emphatic language what are the terms upon which we in this country are prepared to make peace. I will repeat them. They are familiar to our allies and well known to the German Chancellor. What I said November 9, 1914, I repeat now:

"'We shall never sheathe the sword, which we have not lightly drawn, until Belgium—and I will add, Serbia—recover its full measure all and more than they have sacrificed; until France is adequately secured against aggression, until the rights of the small nations of Europe are based upon an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed.'

"What is there wanting in clearness and directness in that? I ask Mr. Trevelyan and the German Chancellor, how can I make it fuller and more intelligible? How can I do more to convince him and all our enemies that not until a peace based upon these foundations is within sight of attainment and not until then, shall we or any of our allies abate by one jot our prosecution of this war."

There we have words with the right ring. Asquith interprets to the British people and the Empire the spirit that animates them; the spirit that will not fail; the spirit that nerves the arm that will not falter in the face of a little reverse on a battle line of 500 mile front.

GERMANY'S LOSS IN TERRITORY.

Bitter indeed must the news have been to Germany that the complete conquest of the Cameroons has now been affected by the Allied forces. Except for a precarious hold on a small portion of German East Africa, Germany has now suffered the loss of all her colonial possessions. In other words, it has lost territories three times larger than the whole of European Germany. Here are the colonies taken from Germany:—

Cameroons	191,130 sq. miles
German East Africa	384,180 sq. miles
German S. W. Africa	322,450 sq miles
Togoland	33,300 sq miles
Kiao-Chau	200 sq. miles
Samoa	1,005 sq. miles
Bism'k Archipelago	27,000 sq. miles
New Guinea	70,000 sq. miles
Carolines	760 sq. miles
Total	1,000,025 sq miles

From the above it will be seen that despite the hollow victories which Germany has so often been celebrating, it has been steadily losing territory from the start. Germany has frequently stated that there was little significance in the capture of its colonial possessions, as the fate of these would really be settled on the battlefields of Europe. Accepting that as possible, it hardly looks at present as though the settlement is being made on the side of Germany. —Montreal Herald

WEAKENING AT MONEY END.

Is the Postoffice Department run on the principle of horse-buying in Peel? A surplus of $700,000 has been changed to a deficit of nearly three millions last year, with a prospect of a five million adverse balance next year. This is weakening at a critical time.—Globe.

A SURE TEST.

The best answer that can be made to the man who thinks alcohol is good for him is to send him to the nearest insurance office. He will learn something there that may cause his idea to undergo a radical revision. And the prohibition 'cranks' have nothing to do with it.—Ottawa Citizen.

A LOST CAUSE.

It is presumably impossible at this stage to make German opinion realize with what eyes the outside world looks upon the cruel pedantry which substitutes a shifty adherence to the letter of the law for any kind of respect for its spirit. But Belgium and Poland and Serbia and Armenia are permanent examples of the operation of international law as made in Germany. It is a yoke to which civilization can never submit without self destruction; and civilization will not be destroyed by bayonets. The cause which rests, on its own confession on these alone is inevitably lost, and the greater its final defeat. For the world cannot see the triumph of such a Germany as the last eighteen months have revealed.—London Daily News.

CHANGE THE NAME

It would not aid any in the defeat of Germany for the name of Berlin, Ontario, to be changed. Neither would it stamp the people of the Canadian city as any more loyal than they are at present. Yet is a change not desirable anyway?

We are inclined to agree with the wish of the city council to rid the city of the name by which the capital of Germany is known. If the name were only an ordinary German one the offence to Canadian ears would be less pronounced. But Canadians may very well object, in the face of the monstrous crimes and inhumanities committed by Germany, to remain under a name that belongs to the very heart of Germany, the home of the Kaiser himself, where the orders for these crimes are issued, where the horrible plots against humanity are engineered.

The Legislature will surely grant the petition of the Berlin council. There are plenty of British names from which can be chosen a suitable one for the Ontario City. There has been a proposal that that of the English nurse, Miss Cavell, who died a martyr's death at the hands of the Prussians be selected. This would be suitable.—Ottawa Free Press.

MONEY IS TELLING.

"Every sovereign in paper money has gold back of it," declares the British chancellor of the exchequer, pointing with justifiable pride to the miraculous way in which British credit has withstood the war test.

What would the Kaiser or the German chancellor give to be able to state the same fact truthfully? With credit gone and foreign dealers refusing to ship goods into Germany without prepayment in gold, the enemy is wildly searching for some way out of her financial distress. Months ago "appeals" were made to the people to bring to the Government offices all their gold ornaments and plate, that they might be melted down for national use. These commands, for such they really were, brought in all the available precious metal, and now the supply it at an end. Germany can still float paper loans internally, but she cannot find any country to exchange gold or goods for her I. O. U.s.

While Britain is maintaining her foreign exchange just where she wants it, with sufficient margin below normal to discourage imports, her foe is struggling to keep the value of the mark from vanishing altogether. German paper is valueless, and only tremendous exportation, which cannot be afforded, or an unlimited supply of gold, can help her.

Lloyd George said the belligerent with the last hundred million pounds would win. If he is right, as every expert agrees he is, Britain is safe. The Huns are running short of money, and the drain on their manhood is telling heavily. Without these two assets their case is hopeless.—London Advertiser.

ONE SUCCESS NOT VICTORY.

The degree of success obtained by the Germans north of Verdun does not warrant grave apprehension as to the fate of the fortress, let alone as to the power of the Teutons to overwhelm the allies in the western arena. It should be remembered that the gain made by the enemy is small in comparison with the French gain in September, when our allies advanced along a fifteen-mile front and captured 100 cannon and 20,000 Germans, simultaneously with an advance by the British and French along another fifteen-mile front in the Artois. The French line is much stronger in every way now than it was last fall and the British have probably ten times as many shells stored up for the next drive as they had available on September 25th last. The four months of shells used up in the Loos offensive was replaced in a single month, and Lloyd George some time ago said that shortly the British would be turning out in a week the quantity of shells that had been secured for the Loos attack as a result of sixteen weeks' husbanding. We have no reason to doubt that the allies are at this moment prepared to launch attacks beside which the drives of last September will dwindle into insignificance, but they do not happen to be at the point where the enemy is now attacking. He may have learned the allied plans—he could not fail to know that they were putting the finishing touches to plans for tremendous assaults on his line — and the blows he is now delivering may not have any other purpose than to delay and weaken attacks upon himself in the spring that he has every reason to dread. Certainly, his blows so far, while formidable, have nothing like the weight that would justify the belief that the Germans can succeed in a general offensive with the capture of Paris or Calais or the destruction of the allied armies as its prime objective.—Toronto Star.

A REAL TARIFF DEBATE.

A real discussion of the tariff would be a novelty in Canada. Of course there have been full dress debates. The budget speech has been cheered to the echo by the fellows on the Government side, and declared to be the consummation of human wisdom. It has been cut to pieces by the Opposition critic, and declared to be the most stupendous act of folly in the history of the world. But all this was a sort of theatrical performance. One party enjoyed the performance of its Prospero, performing wonders with his enchanter's wand; the other took a melancholy pleasure in the declamation of its Hamlet, who said that the time was out of joint, and that it was cursed spite that he was ever born to set it right.

However, we all knew that nothing would come out of it. When the members were called in, and the vote counted, Prospero had the majority on his side, and Hamlet had nothing to do but wrap his inky cloak about him and disappear in tragic glory. Fine speeches, bristling with statistics, were made on both sides, but nobody expected that the speech of a Canadian Gladstone would convert the back-benchers, whose powers of articulation never went beyond the word "Carried."

But now the hope is held out to us that there is to be a real debate on the tariff—a debate in which speeches may make conversions and change votes. The Government, it is said, will come to the House of Commons making proposals and requests, and ready to listen to the advice of two hundred representatives of the people, and act upon it if it is good. There may be real deliberation, real debate, a real grand inquest of the nation, instead of a stage-play. Every speech may be heard attentively, in the hope that it may elucidate the subject or contain some helpful suggestion.—Toronto Star.

GERMAN FLAG CAME DOWN.

So Did German Crown on Top of the Mast.

BERLIN, Feb. 24 (via wireless to Sayville). — "The Austro-Hungarian Consul at the Greek island of Corfu, who has made his escape, reports that when the French landed troops there on the night of January 10 a French officer asked him to haul down the flag," says the Overseas News Agency. "The Consul declined, notwithstanding the officer's threats. Finally the flag was hauled down forcibly.

"The French hoisted their own flag on the mast before Achilleon Castle, which is the property of Emperor William. Later they observed the German crown on top of the mast and attempted to remove it. Failing in this, they sawed off the whole mast. They searched in the castle grounds for stores of heroine, tearing up the ground everywhere, but found none."

THE WAR IS UNCOVERING LANDMARKS IN THE GRAVEYARDS OF HISTORY

Marching on Trebisond! Over twenty-three hundred years ago the ten thousand Greeks under the leadership of Xenophon, reached that city in the depth of February, after a five months' northward retreat from Babylon, a distance of over 600 miles as the crow flies. The schoolboys of old all knew the story, as they began their Greek on Xenophon's account of this march. Nowadays the learners of Greek are few.

The retreat began in the fall of 401, B.C., proceeding up the east bank of the Tigris from a point south of the modern Bagdad, but not so far south at Kut-el-Amarah. The Greeks passed through Nimrud ruins and Mespila (the modern Mosul), situated amidst the ruins of the suburbs of primeval Nineveh. A little farther north they entered the country of the Carduchi now called Kurds, whom Xenophon describes as savage highlanders, truculent but cowardly, the same bullying crew who nowadays butcher helpless Armenians. The Greeks beat the rascals off in the passes of the Judi Dagh range.

Keeping steadily on the adventurous band crossed the Centritis River now the Buhtan-chai, and pasted through what is now Bitlis, west of Lake Van, then Kyhnis and Erzerum. This last place, because of its strong situation, was later fortified as a frontier outpost by the Roman Empire, and the termination—rum far from any connection with an intoxicating beverage—is the Turkish for Rome, the name meaning fortress of Rome.

In this region the Greeks suffered terrible hardships. It was now midwinter, intensely cold, and blizzards threatened to bury the whole party in snow. Sometimes they forced their way along, driving their beasts of burden, through snow six feet deep. The Greeks were not clad, like our friends the Russians, to stand such exposure. They had bare feet, except for sandals with thongs between the toes and strapped to the legs. It was boasted of Socrates that in a Thracian campaign he showed his endurance by marching clean barefoot, but the winter in Thrace is nothing to compare with that of Armenia, where 25 and 30 below is a common thing, as the Russians have lately experienced. Quite a number of the Greeks died from exposure and privation, while large numbers of their beasts were lost.

Xenophon tells how at one place they found a hot-spring, and it was the task of his life to coax the men to leave it and march on. In the country of the Chalybes, north of Erzerum, a people famous for their iron-working in these days, the Greeks were introduced to a fierce liquor distilled from barley, which he says was very pleasant when you became accustomed to it, though so strong that it could hardly be drunk except mixed with water. If, as is probable, it was the modern Turkish rake, one can well believe him as to its strength. It would warm up the poor, drooping men of Hellas.

A less satisfactory experience was the eating of some honey which half poisoned, half intoxicated, the men for days. It is said that such honey is still to be found in the region, made from certain flowers. The Russians should beware of being lured into partaking.

At last the army, ragged, battered but pounding grimly ahead, rose upon a high place south of Trebizond from which they could see ahead of them the blue Black Sea. A wild shout of "The Sea, the Sea," went up from the vanguard, and all then ran pell-mell to view the gladdening sight. The emotional Greeks embraced one another and wept for joy. The sea was to them, like English men, almost the same as home; it meant freedom, islands, and its language was Greek.

At Trebizond, February, 400 B. C., Xenophons men were in a Greek colony, and after a rest and recuperation they sailed home along the coast of Asia Minor, touching towns which we shall soon be hearing of as the Russians land their forces and pursue their conquests to the Bosphorus.—London Advertiser.

MANY ASSIST MUNITIONS WORK

OTTAWA, Feb. 24.— According to a statement issued by the Imperial Munitions Board, 454 Canadian firms are engaged in the machining and assembling of shells, or in the production of component parts, or in the production of powder and explosives, and in the loading of shells or parts. These factories are distributed from Halifax and St. John in the east, to Victoria, B.C., in the west. The board has the responsibility of purchasing the steel and the component parts entering into the shells. They arrange for the work to be done upon these parts, and for their shipment to machining and assembling plants, and they are thus responsible for a continuous supply of material to keep the assembling factries employed.

$5,000,000 a Week.

The board stated that over $5,000,000 per week is paid out for materials supplied and work performed. It is estimated that employment is given to 200,000 to 225,000 persons in Canada. The staff employed at the offices of the board in Ottawa number 150. There are 2,300 inspectors distributed in the factories and machine shops engaged in the production of munitions, 1,400 of them are under the direction of Major Orilvie, an Imperial officer with headquarters at Quebec.

Camp Life at the Front

Life at the front with the Second Canadian Supply Column, which left Canada last April, is full of thrills and fun, according to Lce-Cpl. Aubrey S. McDonald. The young soldier is the son of Mr. J. T. McDonald, 1080 Terrace avenue, and nephew of Mrs. J. R. Stratton and Mrs. J. B. Ormond, Peterborough.

"We were under a German plane a couple of weeks ago," says the letter, and the British anti-aircraft guns were firing at it, with the shrapnel falling amongst us. There were no casualties, however. I have been to several places that have been shelled from time to time, but always seem to get out before the fireworks commence. We often go up to within a mile and a half of the trenches though we are not exposed to the view of the Germans.

"It's pretty hard to see this thing up but I fully believe there will be something doing in the Spring and I expect to see the finish of the war next Summer.

"We had 'some' time Christmas. I will try to give you the full details. The officer commanding gave us a banquet and allowed us to have a concert. We were to have had a large theatre which is being used as a hospital, but at the last moment there were too many sick to move, so we had to use a smaller place, although unsuitable.

"The dinner had to be run off in relays, but some of the men stayed with the job all night and got well filled up with turkey, plum pudding and milk. The affair was a howling success—with emphasis on the 'howling.'

"When we got a chance to get ready for the concert, which was a musical sketch, a satire on our own column, things looked absolutely hopeless, as several of our principal actors were not to be found. So we decided to present only the second act, which was nearly all music.

"The first act was opened with two sentries and a sergeant making ridiculous remarks, a colonel and a staff officer, who introduces the sergeant to the audience. The sergeant addresses them as if at a recruiting meeting. Six recruits answer and come up on the stage. Then follows the mechanical examination, medical examination and the taking of the oath, all ridiculously funny. A man dressed up as the mother of a recruit comes up and, in objecting to her son joining, makes an awful fuss.

"The second act showed the recruits gathered around one of our patent camp fires. All of this is musical except when the sergeant reads the order.

"I wrote a couple of parodies for the show. I give you a couple of them here so you can guess what the rest of the performance was like:

Casey Jones.

"Come all ye drivers if you want to hear
A story of a brave chauffeur;
Casey Jones was that driver's name,
On a four-ton Loco boys he won his fame.
"Sergeant called Casey at half-past four;
Mounted to the lorry with his tunic in his hand
And he took a farewell trip to the promised land.
Chorus—
"Open up the air, and push up the spark,
Open the cutout, hear that motor bark;
Step on the throttle and let her roll,
For we're eight hours late with this load of coal.
"He looked at the gas and the gas was low;
He looked at the mag, and the mag was slow;
Turned to the second, and then he said
'We're going to reach Kemmel but we'll all be dead.
"Casey pulled up that Kemmel hill,
And the sentry knew by the engine's groans
That the man at the wheel was Casey Jones.
"He pulled up within three miles of the place;
Ninety-one stared him right in the face;
Turned to the second and said 'Kid you'd better jump,
For there's two Locomobiles that are going to bump.'
"Casey said just before he died,
'There's two more lorries that I'd like to ride;
Second said 'What can they be?
'An old Pierce Arrow and an F.W.D.'
"The boys of the column sat round and cried
When they heard the news that Casey had died;
The O. C. said 'Good heavens, keep still;
We'll get another driver his place to fill.'

"Special souvenir programmes were printed on the field for the occasion. They bear the Canadian crest and the name of the column. The location is given as 'Somewhere in France; sometimes in Belgium.'"

GERMANY WILL TAX ALL WAR TIME PROFITS

Commercial Bodies Oppose Proposal, but Government, It is Believed, Will be Firm.

BERLIN, via London, Feb. 23.—The most important parts of the government's tax measures have been submitted to the Bundesrath, but strict secrecy is preserved regarding their nature. It appears, however, that the bills have been designed to furnish 500,000,000 marks ($125,000,000) of new revenue. The publication of the new measures probably will occur before the reassembling of the Reichstag, on March 15. It is assumed that the chief feature of the fiscal legislation will be a tax on extra war time profits, as already has been decided in principle, by requiring corporation and firms to reserve fifty per cent. of their increased earnings for future taxation.

That a rich yield from this tax may be counted upon is shown by the annual report of a number of companies, which laid aside 3,000,000 marks ($75,000) to 5,000,000 marks ($1,250,000) for reserves under the law. There has been much agitation among commercial classes against the government taking the entire fifty per cent. but there is small prospect of this finding acceptance by the government. It is even feared that a higher rate than fifty per cent may be adopted, and the Executive Committee of the German Chamber of Commerce has been arguing against a higher rate.

Within a week several company reports have shown remarkable increases in profits that made a bad impression. Bourse operators fearing that such evidences of getting rich quick may tempt the government to decide on a higher tax on war profits.

It is understood that among other taxes to be proposed are levies on gas and electricity for illuminating purposes. Much talk has been indulged in about the imperial monopoly for generating electricity, but it is now known that this project has been definitely abandoned, partly because Saxony was about to create a State monopoly of that character, while Bavaria was about to establish a mammoth generating plant without the monopoly feature. The imperial fiscal measures, however, already reported embrace two monopolies—namely, cigarettes and petroleum. On the other hand, the much mooted tax on works of art has been either rejected or postponed.

The Tageblatt says the next war loan, which is expected to fall around the end of March, will include an issue of four and one-half per cent. Treasury notes, redeemable at par. The issue price is expected to be a trifle above 90.

"PARALYTIC" GETS $20,000 FOR INJURY.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Feb. 23.—A special grand jury has been summoned to investigate the charges of perjury and fraud made against Geo. A. Callicotte and others.

Callicotte formerly was a Rock Island brakeman. He was injured and sued the company for damages, alleging that he was paralyzed. He was carried into court on a stretcher, and was awarded a verdict for $20,000 damages.

A few days ago Callicotte was arrested at his home, disguised as a woman, carrying coal into the house.

HIS 'PSYCHO BRIDE' FIGURE IN ODD SUIT

NEW YORK, Feb. 19—A strange "psychological" romance is revealed in the suit started by Dr. Gunni J. Busck to recover the custody of his nine-year-old son, Richard.

Dr. Busck resides in Westfield, Chautauqua County, N. Y. He divorced his wife in 1911. His present suit reveals that within the shadow of Columbia University the boy's mother Mrs. Charlotte Busck, is living with Dr. Henderson B. Deady, well-known psycho-analyst, as his "psycho bride". She is known as such to some of the most prominent members of Columbia faculty.

Dr. Deady's ideas of matrimony are so strange that Dr. Busck fears his son, Richard as he grows older will be influenced by them.

Husband's Divorce Suit.

Dr. Busck might have spared himself the present litigation, Dr. Deady says, if when the divorce was pending in Suffolk County, the aggrieved husband had consented to permit the psycho-analyest to visit his home whenever he liked.

Dr. Busck would not agree to this arrangement and sued for divorce, naming Dr. Deady as co-respondent.

Just before the case was tried Dr. Deady and Mrs. Busck and Richard the little son, sailed for Europe, where Dr. Deady passed several months studying under Karl Jung.

When the gossip attending the divorce suit subsided Dr. Deady and his psycho-bride and the boy returned to this country and went to live in seclusion at Brookfield, Conn., the Summer home of Mrs Busck. Later the couple and little Richard came to New York and took separate apartments at No. 4 West One Hundred and Twentieth street. Later they moved into a larger apartment together.

Dr. Deady Defence.

"There may be something unusual in my mode of living in the eyes of the uninitiated," Dr. Deady said at his apartment last night, "but in the enlightened circle in which Mrs. Busck and I travel, we, alone with our ideals, are accepted as human beings. And that circle includes some of the best people connected with Columbia University.

"The lady and I have discarded the sentimental and emotional things in life. We are living according to psycho-analysis.

"Psycho-analysis is the mental side of medicine. Its province is to cast out the false in life and love and make use of the real.

"Before Dr. Busck bought the divorce suit in Suffolk County we had a heart to heart talk, and he was given every opportunity to fit a place in our scheme. We offered ot permit him to pose as the worldly husband of Mrs. Busck, but to maintain only formal friendly relations with her. We were perfectly agreeable to his dining with us, entertaining with us and taking part in family conferences. He would not agree to this. Mrs. Busck obtained her freedom. I couldn't. I am still married in the eyes of the law to the sister of Dr. Busck.

Calls it Inevitable.

"The inevitable happened. I gave up my wife—who was unreal, according to the psycho analysis.

"I believe in monogamy and am not against marriage. I am opposed to the conventions of marriage. A psycho-analysis cannot see where the State and Church get their authority to interfere with love."

When Dr. Deady was told that his fellow tenants in the house regarded him and Mrs. Busck as a brother and sister, Dr. Deady said:

"Why, they have no right to do that. We live as man and wife. It is because Dick calls me 'Uncle Henny,' I guess, that they got the idea I was the lady's brother."

"Psycho-analysis," as ascribed once by Dr. Deady, "includes the scientific method of finding out why you like your husband one day and don't care so much for him at another time and why you like a man's wife better than the husband likes her."

When Dr. Deady engaged his apartments, he got as reference three professors of the university.

It was understood that, although he had no official connection whatever with the institution, he had been giving instruction in psycho-analysis to some of the advanced students and to some of the radical members of the faculty.

The case was set for argument on February 16.

MAN LIVES WITH BULLET IN BRAIN

NEW YORK, Feb. 23. — When Mrs. Henry Muskat returned to her home, the Bronx, Sunday night, she saw crimson stains and asked her husband what had happened. Muskat, sixty years old, and owner of a tinware shop, said he had bumped his head and cut it slightly.

It was not until yesterday afternoon that he permitted her to remove the bandage, and then she saw powder marks and called Dr. A. E. Munson, of No. 2387 Davidson street. The physician found that Muskat had been shot back of the ear in such a manner that the mastoid bone had been crushed in and the bullet had entered the brain. Despite the fact that the bullet had been in the brain nearly twenty-four hours Muskat was conscious, and even protested against being sent to the Union Hospital.

After physicians at the hospital had removed the bullet from the brain and dressed the wound Muskat said he had been setting a trap for chicken thieves when the pistol was discharged and wounded him. But as he had powder burns and his wife said he had lost $40,000 in speculation in the last three years the police placed a charge of attempting to commit suicide against him. The physicians said he probably would die, and could not understand why he had not died almost instantly.

COULDN'T WEAR CORSETS OR SWIM—GETS $200 DAMAGES

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—After four long drawn out trials, Miss Genevieve La Croix has won a verdict of $200 in a suit against Gifford Horton, a cigarette manufacturer, on the ground that he broke one of her ribs in a scuffle and that she is unable to wear corsets or swim.

EVENING EXAMINER

FIGHTING IN FRANCE

CHILDREN'S MATINEE SAT'RDAY AFTERNOON 10c

ADMISSION: 15c - 25c - 35 BOXES 50c SEATS RESERVED

Never before in the world's history has it been possible to see fighting men in the day-by-day struggles of a great war.

These OFFICIAL Motion Pictures take the spectator instantly to the very battle line, where more men are under arms than make up the total of the entire population of Ontario.

There is action and atmosphere in every film, for the cameras were carried to the Front by soldier operators, who risked their lives in order to make a picture record of all phases of the conflict.

That four of this gallant corps were wounded is not to be wondered at. The important fact is that they, like the others, performed their unique duty in the interest of this new kind of record keeping by means of which we may now SEE HISTORY even as it is made.

They fought it out at Champagne with the great guns. You see it in the pictures—the artillery in the foreground and a shell thrust into every breech, two a minute, and far away you see the earth open in great pits where the explosions do their work.

Again at Metzeral you see it. Always in this long-range killing, it is the weight of the heavy shells which counts. But now and then, to give variety to the method, suffocating gas is loosened in the hope that it may stifle as it rolls over the trenches. Odd sight, this, to see a wave of asphyxiation coming and to know what its mission is. War is full of variety. Every picture presents something which to one unfamiliar with the modern killing methods seems to be about the limit. Air scouts? Yes, in the pictures, and you see how the bombs about to be dropped from the skies are loaded in the armed craft. Trench life? Yes. Here men hauling hand grenades. At another point a first-line defender laid low by a shell and receiving the hurried first aid. Go along the line with the official cameras and you see it all.

Imagine yourself privileged to follow the zig-zag of the trenches from King Albert's war-battered land across France to the Swiss border, and you get an idea of the sight-seeing tour upon which these OFFICIAL Motion Pictures take you.

The stopping places are many, and whether it be along the dunes of Flanders or down in the Alsatian forests, on a battlefield or in the trenches, it is war's gruesome problem working itself out, and you see it all.

It was this fact which so impressed the allied diplomats in Washington when, on Thursday, Nov. 18, they were the guests of the French Ambassador at a private exhibition of these French Government Official Motion Pictures in the French Embassy.

These are the ONLY Motion Pictures

BELGIAN PRESBYTERIAN MINISTER PRESENTS NEEDS OF HIS COUNTRY

Four Million Persons Living on Charity—Relief Work is Well Organized But Must Be Supported and Maintained.

4,000,000 people living on charity.

700,000 working people unemployed.

Heavy war taxes imposed by Germans.

In many places peasants robbed of cattle and crops.

Middle class people mostly without income.

Above is the summing up of the present situation in Belgium. It was given by a man whose work is counting in that stricken country, Rev. Hnri Anet, B.D., LL.D., delegate of the Franco-Belgian Committee of Evangelization.

In Belgium Dr. Anet has charge of a Presbyterian Church at Claubecq, in the northern part of the country, about 28 miles from Mons, and near Waterloo. He has, however, been travelling for some months in the Old Country and the United States, seeking help for work in Belgium. Just a week ago he came to Toronto, and last Sunday spoke in the Broadview Presbyterian Church.

King Albert Humble.

"I was sent last September to the Belgian front and saw King Albert on behalf of our committee," said Dr. Anet. "He is a tall, fine-looking man and gives one a pleasant impression of his humility and sincerity. Before the war he was probably more popular with the lower classes than the upper ones, because of his democratic tendencies, but now every class has the same great regard for him, and the soldiers worship him. He is the soul of the nation.

"It is true that there were many cases in which children and women were put in front of the German lines and bayoneted, that children for a systematic system of maiming on the part of the German soldiers, were wounded and killed; but as I don't think that is true."

Took 24 Orphans.

"There is probably much work being done for the orphan children?" was a tentative question.

"Yes. One instance I know of personally is that of a minister of one of our churches, who was broken in health from overwork, and who asked for a furlough to his native country, Switzerland. It was granted, but the minister gathered up twenty-four little orphan children, took them with him, and they were cared for by people in the little Swiss town where he lived.

"It is true that there is a genuine spiritual awakening in Belgium among all classes, in the Catholic as well as Protestant churches, and among women as well as men. People go to church who never thought of going before, but this winter many of the little children can't go to Church or Sunday School; they have no shoes.

"While relief in Belgium is well organized, the situation is becoming more and more difficult. The poor people gather at the depots and get a little soup and bread—enough to keep body and soul together. The thrifty middle class people who had saved a little money for their old age have had to use it all up, and 4,000,000 people need help."

Dr. Anet spoke of plans already being made by King Albert for the reconstruction of towns after the war is over. The Protestant Evangelical churches in northern Belgium and northern France, in territory now occupied by the Germans, number 44, and the seventy missionary ministers are preaching the gospel in twenty villages and towns.

It was said by Dr. Anet that about thirty thousand civilians in Belgium—men, women and children, have been killed by the Germans since the war began.

GREAT INTEREST IN THE DECLARATION OF COL. J. A. CURRIE

OTTAWA, Feb. 23.—The declaration of Col. Currie, M.P. for North Simcoe, in the House yesterday afternoon in connection with alleged interference regarding recognition which may have been coming to him following the battle of St. Julien has created very considerable interest, and Parliamentarians await with quite as much interest the reply which is sure to be forthcoming from Major-General Sir Sam Hughes. The Minister this morning declined to discuss the question, but intimated that he might have a statement to make in the House at an early date.

Immune From Discipline.

Until the session opened Col. Currie was subject to the discipline which his position as a member of the expeditionary forces imposed upon him. As soon as the session opened, however, he was a member of the expeditionary forces imposed upon him. As soon as the session opened, however, he was a member of Parliament, immune from discipline and from any military punishment which might follow "talking out in meetings." Such immunity is understood to extend for the duration of the session and for six weeks thereafter.

Prior to the opening of the session, however, Col. Currie was compelled to grin and bear the rumours which were in circulation concerning himself, and to say nothing concerning what he may have considered an injustice in connection with expected recognition which he did not receive.

Gen. Turner's Letter.

How far he was justified in expecting recognition may be gathered from the Turner letter, which he read, and which appears in Hansard this morning as follows:

"Dear Colonel: Leave has been extended for four days as requested. The process of re-organizing is a heavy one. Your battalion will have lost its identity as the 48th Highlanders. In forwarding recommendation for 'mention in despatches' it has given me great pleasure including your name for the valuable services rendered at St. Julien."

According to medical officers and my own opinion you are entitled to a good rest or suitable staff employment.

You have done more than called for as a regimental officer.

With best wishes, believe me, yours sincerely,

R. E. W. Turner.

Written On Battlefield.

This letter, Col. Currie says, was written on the 10th of May virtually on the battlefield. "If anything has been said or done ince to my injury," Col. Currie is represented in hansard as having said: "There are only two men who stood between me and any decorations that might have come to me, or any mention in despatches and these were General Alderson and the Minister of Militia here."

It is not at all clear how General Hughes could have stood in the way of Col. Currie receiving any decoration to which he may have been entitled through General Turner' promised recommendation. Decorations are not supposed to be granted on the recommendation or withheld on the recommendation of the Canadian Minister of Militia. General Alderson, however, might be expected to have a considerable amount of say in the matter.

It is stated by those who know that at the outset and immediately after the St. Julien battle commanding officers were asked to recommend a larger number than usual per battalion for military honours, owing to the importance of the work which the Canadians had accomplished. Afterward, however, the number was very much cut down and not many of the higher decorations were awarded.

Blast Spouts Men From Under River Into the Air

Subway Miners Are Blown Through 57 Feet of Mud and Water in Human Geyser—One Found Dead, Other is Missing

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—As a result of an accident in the north tube of the Whitehall-Montague street tunnel of the new Brooklyn Rapid Transit subway, Marshall Mabey, a miner, of No. 89 Theodore street, Astoria, L. I., was blown to safety through twenty-seven feet of mud and twenty feet of water.

Working with Mabey were three other men. One of them is dead, another is missing, while the third escaped with a slight injury. The accident was caused by compressed air striking a crater, or shallow spot in the river.

Mabey's experience is unparalleled except for one instance. In 1915 while working on the present tunnel to Brooklyn, Richard Creedy was blown to the surface of the East River and escaped practically unhurt. He is still employed in subway excavation work.

Mabey suffered a broken left leg. After the pressure shot him to the surface he succeeded in swimming to a tugboat, despite his broken leg, and was hauled aboard.

Mabey's companions were Frank Driver, a miner, of No. 281 Jay street, Brooklyn, who is dead; John McCarthy, a helper of No. 1,702 Third avenue, who is missing, and John Young, twenty-seven years old, of No. 111 Bergen street, Brooklyn.

Air Machine Finds Weak Spot.

The tunnel is being constructed by the shield method under compressed air. The air pressure holds up the bottom of the river while the shield is pressed forward on its course. The accident occurred about four o'clock, three hundred feet from the Brooklyn shore and twenty-seven feet below the river bed, which is covered by about twenty feet of water.

At the time an air pressure of twenty-four pounds a square inch was being maintained, according to the statement of the Public Service Commission. The four men were in front of the shield, while about twenty others were some distance behind it. The shield had been moved forward twenty-six inches to allow the men to place another cast iron ring to aid in holding up the tunnel when the compressed air found a weak spot in the roof and blew a hole up to the river bed.

Young, who was not blown up through the hole, said that he saw Driver and Mabey reach for a plank with which to support the ring when he noticed a stone fall from the roof of the tunnel. He said there was a slight rush of air, and Driver quickly seized a sand bag and threw it into the opening, which the fallen rock had left.

"Then I felt a puff of wind on my face," Young said, "and to my horror I saw Driver disappear through the mud. I felt myself going and quickly grasped the rim of the shield.

Sees Second Workman Go.

"As I held on for dear life I saw Mabey follow Driver through the hole, and then so much mist filled the tunnel that I couldn't see what happened to McCarthy. The pressure seemed to let up a bit and again I was stricken with dismay, for the water began rising. I ran for a lock forty feet away and escaped.

The twenty other workers saw the mist in the tunnel and, knowing that it meant danger ran for their lives. M. Rottman, one of them, stumbled as he ran and severely injured his left ankle.

Thomas Leonard, a foreman, was standing on a pier just above the tunnel. He said that he saw a geyser of mud and water rise into the air and that the bodies of two or three men were in it. As the stream fell to the surface of the water it scattered them in different directions.

Mabey cried for help and began to swim. The tugboat J. R. Sears was near by and Mabey swam to her. Soon the body of Driver came to the surface and he was pulled on board. Efforts to resuscitate him failed. McCarthy was not found.

Leonard called Policeman Kiensler of the Amity street station, and he summoned ambulances from the Brooklyn and Long Island College hospitals. Dr. Stilger, of the former hospital, took Mabey in his ambulance.

On the way to the hospital the injured man talked quite cheerfully and asked for a cigarette, Dr. Stilger said. Dr. Renker, of the Long Island Hospital, pronounced Driver dead.

According to the Public Service Commission's statement, the contractors lowered the air pressure to about fifteen pounds immediately after the accident and took steps to cover the air hole with a blanket of clay. This is done by dumping the clay into the water, it was said, and will require until Monday. Meantime the air pressure will be sufficient to keep the water from further inundating the tunnel. The Flynn-O'Rourke Company contractors in charge of this work, announced that the construction will be resumed tomorrow morning on that tunnel.

Travis H. Whitney, secretary of the Public Service Commission; Samuel Ordway, chairman, and Colonel Rice, a member, were in the tunnel Friday afternoon at about the time of day the accident occurred.

LINCOLN THE SPY CAUGHT AS HE TAKES A STROLL

Self-Confessed German Agent Who Escaped in Brooklyn is Arrested in Thirteenth Street and Broadway—Fugitive Taken at Revolvers' Points

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Ignatius Timothy Trobitsch Lincoln confessed German spy and formerly a member of the British Parliament, who escaped from a deputy United States marshal on January 19, was arrested in Broadway, near Thirtieth street.

Lincoln was apprehended by J. J. Grgurevich, Nels Chalmers and Ellis Perkins, agents of the Department of Justice, at the point of drawn revolvers. He was quickly handcuffed, bundled into a taxicab and taken to the offices of William M. Offley, chief of the department's secret operatives, and later lodged in the Raymond street jail. He said that unjust treatment by this government caused him to escape.

Ever since Lincoln escaped from Deputy Marshal Johnson in a Brooklyn restaurant the Department of Justice has scoured this section of the country for him. He wrote many letters to newspapers, taunting the secret agents that they could not find him.

None of the agents would say last night just how they succeeded in locating him. He was walking quite calmly in Broadway when Grgurevich approached him.

Agent Greets Him.

"I'm glad to see you, Mr. Lincoln," the agent said.

Lincoln turned pale and breathed heavily and was about to turn on his heel when the agents drew their revolvers. One was pressed against his stomach, while Perkins quickly handcuffed him. He offered no resistance and walked to Thirtieth street, where the agents got a taxicab.

Neither Mr. Offley nor his assistant, Mr. Baker, was in the Park Row building. However, the report got to Police Headquarters that Crones, the Chicago poisoner and anarchist, had been caught and taken there, and Captain Tunney and a squad of detectives were there when the prisoner arrived.

Captain Tunney asked Lincoln why he had written to a newspaper that the recent action of the Police Commissioner in policing the subway stations two weeks ago was for the purpose of catching him.

"I thought it would advertise my book," he replied.

Turning to Mr. Perkins he said, "Well, you've got me but somebody put up a job on me."

"You challenged us to get you and we did," Perkins replied.

Wrote from South Amboy.

Lincoln admitted that he had been to South Amboy, where he wrote one of his public letters, and said that he had been disguised as a farmer.

Lincoln's moustache was shaved off. He said that he did this to escape detection. Assistant United States District Attorney Dunham soon arrived and began to question Lincoln. Although Mr. Dunham took Lincoln into a private room to question him the voice of the prisoner could be heard even in the corridors.

"You people would never have caught me," he said in angry tones, "if it hadn't been for the men who had the care of my trunks. Several days ago when I went to them they demanded $250 for silence, I refused because it was extortion and in a veiled way they let me know they would 'squeal.' I should never have returned to where I lived. If it's the last thing I do I will get even with those fellows for giving me away."

Treatment Unfair, He Says.

The prisoner said when asked why he escaped:—"I have not been treated fairly by the United States government. Therefore I ran away. The government knew what was behind this persecution of me; that the charge on which the British government wanted to extradite me was false and was preferred just to get me back to England."

In the absence of Mr. Offley, Lincoln was taken to the Raymond Street Jail and searched. He had $58 in cash and much jewellery upon him. He was allowed to keep his money but the jewellery and his pocket knife were taken from him. He raised a row about this, saying "I am not a prisoner of the common sort and should not be treated in this manner."

Mr. France, District Attorney, went to the jail and questioned Lincoln. He said that the prisoner's status is the same as it was when he escaped.

'BILLY' SUNDAY GETS $32,358 AT TRENTON

TRENTON, Feb. 23.—"Billy" Sunday ended his seven weeks' campaign in this city and boarded the Chicago Limited for his home, in Indiana. He took with him a draft for $31,981.05, representing part of the free will offering given him in return for his services, and another one for $377 will be mailed to him. The total is the third largest he has received, Philadephia having given him $50,000 and Pittsburg $42,000.

In the seven weeks he preached to 820,000 persons and 16,598 "hit the trail". The evangelist said to-night that it was the largest number, proportionately, in any of his campaigns.

Many of the city's best known men went down the sawdust covered aisles to shake his hand during the meetings, among them being C. Edward Murray, Peter E. Hurley, general manager of the local trolley system; and J. William Foster, manager of one of the city's biggest woollen mills.

PRESTON SEEKS TO ANNUL MARRIAGE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 24.—Society here is much interested in the attempts of Julius Preston, a wealthy commission merchant, to obtain the annulment of the marriage of his son, Julius Preston, Jr., and Miss Alice Nightingale, which took place in New York city January 21. The bridegroom is now on his way to serve with a hospital corps in France, while Mrs. Preston is at the home of her family here. He is eighteen, and she is twenty-five. The age of the youth, coupled with the fact that in procuring the license the couple gave their residence as Massachusetts, are among the grounds on which, it is said, the annulment will be asked. Miss Nightingale has been married twice before. Her first marriage was annulled and from her second husband she obtained a divorce. It is asserted that in her application for the marriage license she said she had been married but once before.

While a German deserter was being taken to the railroad station in Heidelberg, he broke away from his guard and tried to escape. Three shots were fired, the last of which penetrated his brain.

SCHOOL TEACHERS IN AUSTRIA ENLISTED AS WAR HISTORIANS

The Austrian Government has approved a suggestion made by Karl Sohar, school superintendent, that teachers in schools throughout the Empire gather all facts in their districts bearing on the great war, to be compiled later into a voluminous history of the struggle. The idea is to record the part that every city, town and village is taking in the war, and it is believed that local schoolmasters will be in a position to collect all these data.

"The instructions sent out to the teachers in all parts of the Empire direct them to explain the sentiment of the community when war was first declared, the names of the men in the village who were called to the colours, those who subsequently were wounded or killed; conditions in the village during the war, food supply, interesting incidents, war songs; stories told by soldiers who have returned from the front; sacrifices made by civilians; contributions for war purposes; condition of crops; war prices for food, meatless days; the condition of the schools, the patriotism of the children—in fact, everything in any way pertaining to the war.

After peace is declared these data will be published as a village or town history of the struggle, and the Minister of Education has arranged to compile all these local histories into one great story of the conflict. It is expected that the whole will result in thousands of volumes, giving as exhaustive a history as has ever been compiled.

Quebec Will Be Enfete

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, Feb. 24.—Quebec will be en fete this week end. A meeting at the Chateau Frontenac was presided over by the Mayor and assisted by many prominent citizens when it was decided to hold a winter sports carnival, commencing to-day (Thursday) and closing on Sunday evening with a display of fireworks on the parade in front of the famous Chateau. Quebec and Victoria rinks will be given up for the curling competition, not less than eighty players being entered from outside. Friday has been set apart for a bob sleigh competition on the Plains of Abraham, and Lieut.-Col. Leplanc has promised to officially open the new run which has been specially constructed for this sport.

On Saturday morning a combined church parade consisting of military and snowshoers will be held, and in the afternoon toboggan races, ski-jumping and hockey match are scheduled to take place. In the evening a ladies' hockey match has been arranged between clubs representing Quebec and Montreal, and valuable prizes are being given for the event, and a special cup has been donated for the club gaining the most points in the day's competition. Already the affair is attracting considerable attention, and visitors not only from various parts of Canada, but also many Americans, have arrived and are taking an interest in the affair.

ARREST STUDENT BURGLAR.

Youth Attached to Hobart College Says He Needed Funds.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Feb. 24.—Murray S. Pratt 18, of Buffalo a student of Hobart College, was arrested while entering the office of The Geneva Times, which had been robbed twice recently.

According to the police, Pratt has confessed that he is the mysterious burglar who has been entering Geneva stores during the last few weeks. His excuse was lack of funds.

GERMANS ADMIT CAVALRY FORCE IS NOW IN TRENCHES

PINSK, Russia, Feb. 24.—The mildest winter of decades along the present German lines in the east has been an important factor in hampering, in this section, Russian efforts to regain lost territory. A correspondent the first to have the opportunity to view the "machine gun front" in about the Pripet swamps since the Teutons took up their positions in September and October has just returned from a trip along several miles of the swampy fighting line.

Every mile of this front fairly bristles with deadly machine guns, which cover every inch of terrain. Though the correspondent had no means of ascertaining how many men defend the Prinsk sector, the multitude of rapid-firing guns gives the impression that even a small number of men should be able to hold the line indefinitely. In addition to the guns, millions of running feet of barbed wire entanglements transform each village and house into a veritable fortress, under the German positions, from a layman's standpoint, impregnable, which the military authorities claim that they are.

The German lines at Pinsk protrude farthest east of any along the whole front from the Baltic to Galicia. They project in a semi-oval form. The greatest danger to the forces at Pinsk, therefore, is a flanking movement from the north—the swamps afford protection from the south. In consequence the northern lines have been made extremely strong. Not only is every yard of this front fenced in with entanglements one hundred to one hundred and twenty feet wide, but there are supporting points at very short intervals which are veritable fortresses in themselves. They are surrounded by star-shaped barricades of wire.

A novel feature of the German defence in this section is that the troops are composed almost entirely of crack cavalry regiments, numbering high nobles among their officers. A short time ago they would have scoffed at the idea of being dismounted, but now they live underground.

Two Women Slain Child Wounded By Unknown Assailant

MINGUS, Tex., Feb. 23.—A double murder mystery is being investigated here. On the outcome of a little girl's injuries depends whether the killing will become a triple tragedy.

When G. W. St. Clair, who is employed on the Texas and Pacific railroad, went home from work at 4.30 o'clock in the morning, he found the bodies of his wife aged 35, and Mrs. Will Wilkins, 65, a visitor at the St. Clair home for two weeks, lying on the floor. His 4-year-old daughter Katy Elizabeth was near by, unconscious. Physicians say she has little chance to live.

Victims Struck on Heads.

This was the story of St. Clair, told neighbors whom he at once aroused. The town authorities were immediately summoned. They notified Judge John Ramstot and County Attorney W. F. Smith at Palo Pinto and these officials came here to take charge of the investigation.

A blood stained spike bar was picked up in the yard. It is about two feet long and weighs five pounds. All the victims were struck on the head.

No Clews to Murder.

There is no evidence that Mrs. St. Clair and Mrs. Wilkins had had trouble with any one. Mrs. Wilkins leaves four children, among them a son who lives at Galveston.

The bar with which the killings were done was identified by St. Clair as belonging to him.

How to Increase Vitality.

The coarse, dark parts of grains, so food scientists declare, contain the elements that build bone and muscle, blood, brain and increase vitality. Therefore it naturally follows that a coarse, dark cereal like Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is the food par excellence to increase vitality and put new life and vim into the system. Ask your physician about this food.

Positively do not stir Roman Meal porridge after making it. Set in a second basin or double boiler, and keep your spoon out of it.

Try the ready-cooked Roman Meal Nuggets. You may soften with boiling water, drain and add milk, or serve with hot milk.

Force Of 300,000 Germans. In Offensive On Verdun

Seven Army Corps Under Crown Prince Frederick With All Available Guns, Are Endeavouring To Drive The French Back and Capture Important Fortress

PARIS, Feb. 23.—The battle north of Verdun, precipitated by the offensive of the German army under command of the Crown Prince, which was begun Monday night, is still increasing in intensity. Seven army corps are engaged along a 25-mile front in a desperate effort to drive back the French defending forces, probably with the capture of the great fortress of Verdun in view.

There had been very heavy fighting for a considerable period in this district of the French war zone, but within the last few days the attacks of the Germans have taken on added strength. The battle line has been extended, and now reaches from Malancourt on the west, to Etain, on the east, with Verdun in the centre, only a few miles southward.

The Germans claim to have made advances, and to some extent these are admitted by the French War Office, which describes the battle as one of increasing intensity.

Extensive Preparations.

The German preparations were extensive, and the bombardment of the French positions with thousands of shells was uninterrupted. As the French had foreseen this battle, all their available guns were called into action, and responded in kind to the heavy shelling of the Germans.

While at some points the French were unable to resist the onslaught of the attacking forces, along much of the front, according to the Paris communication, the attacks were well sustained and very heavy losses were inflicted on the Germans.

The French admit the loss of the village of Haumont, though they say that they still hold the environs of the village after a stubborn fight, and they also admit that the Germans have penetrated into the Wavrille wood, west of the village of Wavrille, in the same sector.

Forerunner of Decisive Events.

The great battle is being followed with the most intense interest by the public. It disposes effectively of the question whether or not the Germans would make an early offensive. The battle is the first on a large scale since the offensive in the Champagne in September, and is believed to be the forerunner of stirring and perhaps decisive events.

The principal fighting centres in the rough and thickly wooded country between Etain and Damvillers. Here some 300,000 of the German Crown Prince's best infantry are trying to wrest from the French important roads which would enable them to make their way through to the Meuse. The battle as yet is only beginning, but it is said already to have cost the assailants of the French heavy casualties and without any appreciable advantage having been attained.

The Germans have been making preparations for a big stroke at Verdun so openly during the past month that the French had every chance to get ready for them. The attacks up to the present only involve the advanced lines, which are at least two miles beyond the outer defences of the fortress.

Military opinion here is inclined to doubt that the Germans will attempt to carry Verdun by storm. It is pointed out that besides the formidable works of the fortress, it is further protected by a field army, under command of General Humbert, an exceptionally energetic officer. The prevailing view is that the Germans are feeling the strength of the defences, and that the resistance they meet with may discourage them from proceeding to try to take the citadel by force, even with the help of their greatest guns.

The Battle of Verdun, which was preceding by two days' artillery activity, opened on Monday evening, when the Germans attacked the French positions, to the east of Brabant-sur-Meuse, between the Forest of Hautet and Herbe forest, where they gained a footing in some of the French advanced trenches. At certain points they pushed on to the communicating trenches, but the counter-attacks drove them out of these latter positions. Tuesday the Germans directed a series of extremely vicious artillery actions against the French front between Brabant-sur-Meuse and L'Herbebois, all of which were repulsed.

Between these two points and with large losses, the enemy was able to occupy the Haumont wood and the salient which formed the French line to the north of Beaumont.

According to the German official statement the French had been fortifying the position which they lost for 18 months, with all means of fortress construction. They also claim that the attack, which was delivered on a front of over ten miles, penetrated a mile and a half into the French lines, that the French lost heavily in killed and wounded, that over 3,000 were made prisoners, and quantities of material were captured.

The fighting continued with great violence all Tuesday night, continuing to grow in intensity, until by Wednesday night it extended over a front of 25 miles and seven German army corps (280,000 men) were engaged.

The French, who were by no means taken unawares, had brought up large reinforcements, and at the present writing there are probably well over half a million men engaged in the battle. The German onslaught was energetically withstood by the French troops, who inflicted extremely heavy losses on the enemy. The bombardment with shells of heavy calibre continued uninterruptedly for 24 hours, and the French guns responded with equal violence.

The fiercest fighting is from the right bank of the Meuse to a point south-east of Herbe forest, although the battle extends from Malancourt as far as the region opposite Etain.

According to the French official report the actions of the German infantry were carried out by very heavy effectives, comprising troops of seven different army corps, who followed each other during the course of the day between Brabant-sur-Meuse and Ormes. Notwithstanding his stupendous efforts, the gain of the enemy was insignificant. At the approach to the village of Haumont he was unable to dislodge the French, and in the forest of Cames the salient captured by the Germans on Tuesday, the French retook the greater part of the positions, and stopped the German offensive by counter-attacks. At the east of Cames forest the enemy was able to penetrate the Wavrille wood following a series of bloody encounters.

To the north of Ormes the German attacks against the French line of Herbebois were arrested by counter-attacks. There was no action on the left bank of the Meuse.

French Successes.

The French have not been idle on other parts of the front. In Belgium a destructive fire by the artillery opened several breaches in the German trenches before Steenstraete. To the north of the Aisne the French batteries destroyed the enemy organization on the plateau of Vauclerc.

In Alsace Germans obtained a foothold in the French trenches south-east of Altkrich. An immediate counter-attack forced him back from a great part of the trenches.

The British report artillery activity in the neighbourhood of La Bassee Canal. To the north and east of Ypres British guns did considerable damage to the enemy's positions.

G.T.P. TO INAUGURATE ALASKA STEAMSHIP LINE

MONTREAL, Feb. 22.—Tourists this year will have an opportunity of visiting Alaska on the fastest and best appointed steamships that have ever sailed through the scenic glories of the North Pacific Coast.

The Grand Trunk Pacific, it is announced here, has placed in this service its big oil-burning steamships, including the "Prince George" and the "Prince Rupert," and they will provide service from Seattle, Victoria, Vancouver and Prince Rupert to the Alaskan points of Ketchikan, Wrangell, Juneau and Skagway.

An important feature of this new service lies in the manner in which it will link up with the Grand Trunk Pacific's transcontinental railway connections. The Grand Trunk Pacific has its western terminal at Prince Rupert, within forty miles of the Alaskan boundary, and by using this route for their transcontinental journey passengers will be able to save at least two days on the Alaskan trip.

It is also anticipated that with the inauguration of this steamship service from Prince Rupert a very large amount of commercial business will move by the new Canadian route to the Alaskan territory, which is rapidly developing. No country in the world is arousing more interest than Alaska at the present time. A great deal of the country is practically unknown, for within the Alaskan boundaries there lies one-fifth of the total land under the flag of the United States, while the adjacent Yukon, Canada's domain of potential wealth, is also ready for a period of great development.

The Government at Washington has ordered construction work to go on at once in Alaska on a great railway to open up the immense areas of fertile and highly mineralized land. The whole of that Northland is indeed a great treasure vault just about to be unlocked. Its people are interesting, from the hardy pioneer to the Indian of the Aloutian Islands and the Eskimos of the Seward Peninsula, while its flower strewn valleys, great peaks and active glaciers make it a tourist paradise.

SAYS "BOB" ROGERS TRIED TO HAVE THE INQUIRY CALLED OFF

On. J. A. Calder, Minister of Railways In Saskatchewan Legislature Makes A Sensational Change—Says Rogers Threatened Trouble In Saskatchewan

REGINA, Feb. 23.— The most dramatic point in the drama which for the past twelve days has been staged in the Saskatchewan Legislature was reached last night when Hon. J. A. Calder, Minister of Railways, said that a few months ago he was approached by Hon. Robert Rogers, whose purpose was to induce him to use his influence to call off investigations which were being conducted in Manitoba into the administration of the Roblin Government. The statement created a sensation.

D. J. Wylie, Maple Creek, Conservative, frequently essayed to interrupt Mr. Calder, but the House each time called "order" and "sit down." Mr. Wylie's eventual reply was that Mr. Calder could not produce proof of his statements and that, even if such was the case, thanks was coming to that outside party for having revealed so far that the Province had been robbed of $99,000.

Political Murder.

Mr. Calder warned the House that he was going to indulge in plain speaking. He said in part:

"I consider the time has now arrived when the motive of the Opposition in bringing down the very definite charges, and refusing to aid the committee to sift them, should be revealed. Mr. Bradshaw has drawn the political dagger, and a political murder has been contemplated. The time has come when the Liberal party in this country must fight in self-defence. To-day we are witnessing for the first time in ten years, in the history of this Legislature, the strong arm of federal interference in the work of this House. (Applause.) The Opposition is the tool used by that strong arm. This is a political plot we are up against. It was hatched in Ottawa, conceived in iniquity. The unreasonable position taken by the Opposition in connection with the matter is part of the plot. They have stood in complete contempt for the authority of this House, and have played their part in the plot well."

Knew It Months Ago.

"The facts I possess do not admit of denial. I knew months ago the possibility of this last week's performance, and warned my colleagues. It is within the knowledge of all what occurred recently in Manitoba. We know that from what happened there that there is a man in the Federal arena standing on the verge of a precipice. That gentleman knows the great danger in which he stands. He knows that if investigations are ordered on there further, and other matters opened up, there is a possibility he will also stand where he would not like to stand. I refer to Hon. Bob. Rogers. Within the course of the last four months I have had occasion to meet Mr. Rogers several times. He asked to see me—there are others who know that and Mr. Rogers cannot deny it. He knew what I had some influence with leading Liberals in Manitoba and knew I was well acquainted with leading public men in politics there. His purpose in approaching me was to induce me to use my influence to call off the investigations which were being conducted there.

Wanted Justice Stifled.

"He asked me to use my influence to pull o ffthe law officers of the Crown from following up those who had been caught. His request was to the effect that justice in Manitoba, insofar as his political associates are concerned should be stifled. He intimated to me that if all those things were not done then something would happen in Saskatchewan.

"He told me that his friends were insisting on having repeated in Saskatchewan something which happened elsewhere. He told me that means could be devised to embarass other individuals and other Governments.

"He intimated strongly that he had or would have at his disposal, means to carry out that object. That was the manner in which I was threatened, and the Government threatened. There was only one answer I could and did give that insofar as Saskatchewan was concerned the Liberal party would hew to the line no matter where the chips might fall. Another factor has also been at work. When this Legislature abolished bars in the Province all the liquor men solemnly vowed that very day that they would stop at nothing to destroy the Scott Government. There are two forces behind the whole scheme there can be no denials."

Denied Any Plot.

D. J. Wylie Conservative member for Maple Creek denied that any plot of the nature suggested was hatched in Ottawa.

The debate was adjourned at the request of W. B. Willoughby the Opposition leader. The Government promised consideration of the request to extend the scope of the Royal Commission to be appointed to inquire into the matter of moneys alleged to have been stolen in connection with the construction of mythical roads. Willoughby appealed for a Royal Commission to inquire into all the charges made by Bradshaw as inquiries had been made and the Opposition was sure of its ground. The charges were well founded he said, and he had the greatest reason to believe that the frauds already revealed were not the only ones connected with Highways Department. He asked that the scope of the commission be widened so as to inquire into all expenditures on roads and bridges by the Highways Commission since it was established.

Attorney-General Turgeon said consideration would be given to the request and no doubt its scope would be extended.

Untrue, Says Rogers.

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—Hon. Robert Rogers said this afternoon that he will make a statement in the House in reply to the charges of Hon. J. A. Calder that he had attempted to stifle the Roblin inquiry.

"All I have to say at present," said the Minister of Public Works, "is that the charges are wholly untrue—quite the reverse of what has been stated."

An Honour For The Prudential

A beautifully designed bronze medallion mounted on mahogany shield has been placed in the window of Trebilcock's store on George street. It was presented to the Peterborough district of the Prudential Insurance Company by the head office at Newark, N.J., for writing the largest amount of industrial and ordinary insurance in this district for 1915. That the achievement speaks well for this district is indicated by the fact that only four districts of the Prudential in Canada accomplished such a feat, and Peterboro was one of the four. There are twenty-two districts altogether.

Daughters Of The Empire Will Celebrate Paardeberg Day

Sixteen years ago was fought the battle of Paardeberg, which marked one of the turning points of the Boer War. In this battle, the Canadians and the Highland Brigade, under Sir Hector MacDonald, covered themselves with glory. The bearing of the Canadians under the hottest fire, and their gallant charge, won for them the highest commendation, eighty of our contingent being killed or wounded. It was also one of the engagements in which General, now Sir John French, dispayed his genius as a cavalry officer. At the close of a tremendously heavy day's fighting, Cronje, who had lost nine hundred men during the day, found himself completely surrounded and was forced to surrender.

Paardeburg Day, since the formation of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, has been one of the Festival Days of the Order. It is proposed to celebrate it this year in Peterborough by a tea to be given by the three Chapters in the city. By the kindness of the 57th Chapter and Mr. F. J. Might, this will be held on Saturday afternoon, 26th, in the Tea Room at Turnbull Company's store.

It is hoped that all the Daughters of the Empire and their friends, as well as the general public, will aid in making a success of this entertainment, which commemorates an event, which even at that date, showed what Canadians were willing and able to do for their Empire, a record they are gloriously repeating in the battle line to-day.

There will be co-operation among the Churches, Sunday Schools, Y.M.C.A.'s and college organizations. A CHARGE OF PERJURY PREFERRED AGAINST M. PAPPAS

Case Was Heard This Afternoon Before Police Magistrate Dumble —Sequel to a Promissory Note For $2,700.

PLEADED NOT GUILTY

At this afternoon's session of the Police Court M. Pappas was charged with committing perjury on his examination for discovery taken before Mr. George Sherry, local Registrar of the Supreme Court in a certain action in the Supreme Court between Charles Boukydis and M. Pappas, by swearing to the effect that a certain promissory note, dated September 30th, 1914, payable to the order of Boukydis Bros., for $2,700, and sued on in the said action and referred to by M. Pappas at the said examination, was not signed or delivered by defendant, Pappas, in the year 1914, but was signed and delivered September 30th, 1911, wilfully and corruptly knowing the same to be untrue contrary to Sections 170 and 172 of the Criminal Code.

Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. D. O'Connell for the defendant. Mr. G. H. Shaver of Toronto was private prosecutor.

M. Pappas through his solicitor pleaded not guilty.

Magistrat Dumble declined to try the case. He said that if the evidence warranted, the defendant would be sent up to a higher court, for trial.

The Evidence.

Mr. George Sherry, local Registrar, was the first witness called. He recalled the examination referred to in the information.

The next witness called was Gus Boukydis, complainant. Examined by Mr. Shaver, witness said Pappas borrowed $6,900 from him in December, 1911.

A number of cheques were produced confirming the transaction. The cheques were made by Gus Boukydis to Mr. Pappas for the following amounts:

December, 1911.

Exhibit 3—December 6th, $500.
Exhibit 4—December 20th, $900.
Exhibit 5—December 18th, $3,550.55
Exhibit 5—December 30th, $2,049.45
Total—$6,900.00.

Exhibit number two represented a promissory note for $2,700 that was signed by M. Pappas on September 30th, 1914. This transfer took place in the presence of Gus Boukydis, Charles Boukydis and James Karvs at 726 Queen street east, Toronto. Value was given by Boukydis Bros., five hundred dollars by Gus Boukydis and twenty-two hundred dollars by Charles Boukydis. The amount of the note has not been repaid.

Cross Examination.

To Mr. O'Connell, witness denied that he and Pappas were bad friends. He admitted that he and Pappas had been involved in a number of law suits of late. One of these was tried before Chancellor Boyd of Toronto. Mr. O'Connell introduced some evidence that tended to discredit the veracity of the witness.

Belleville, Feb. 24.—Mrs. Rebecca Thompson, Ann street, aged 77 years, was rewarded by the 80th Band and Battalion, in recognition of her services in knitting 116 pairs of socks for the soldiers. Colonel W. G. Ketcheson informed Mrs. Thompson that the battalion was proud of the loyal work that she had been accomplishing for the men in the trenches. She was completely surprised but thanked the battalion for their kindness and expressed the hope that all would be spared to return home. The band played several patriotic selections, and three cheers were given for Mrs. Thompson. She has done all the knitting herself besides her household duties.

Don't despise the idea of running your household as though you were a Kitchener in command.

"WAKE UP" A WONDERFUL PATRIOTIC FILM STORY

A SCENE FROM "WAKE UP"

To-night is the last opportunity to see the wonderful patriotic film play "Wake Up," which is being shown at the Grand Opera House. Taken with the assistance of the War Office and the Boy Scouts the film is a thrillingly interesting one, and has proven a great aid to recruiting in the Motherland. It depicts what would happen in the event of an invasion of England, and is cleverly conceived and effectively carried out. Scene after scene of exciting incidents follow each other, and the excitement is sustained until the finish. It is one of the most impressive motion pictures ever shown here, and has to be seen to be appreciated. It will be shown to-night at the Grand, and no one should miss it.

GERMAN LOSS 1,000,000 AT END OF LAST YEAR

(By Hillaire Belloc.)

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The German official casualty list gives a total of 651,768 dead to January 31, 1916. The average delay between the death of a German soldier and the appearance of his name on the official lists is from four to six weeks. The above figures, therefore, can hardly include casualties later than December 31.

To this figure must be added a certain proportion of missing. The number of prisoners is precisely known to the allies, and after deducting a small percentage for desertion, the number of dead in the German lists of missing is not less than 160,000, making a total, derived from the Germans' own admission, of 810,000.

That is not all. Apart from the lists published by the German Government, the French authorities have amassed a large body of evidence based on the average deaths per 1,000 mobilized men at a given date. These prove conclusively that the German official lists are deliberately falsified or intentionally inadequate.

In the early months of the war these private and official lists were nearly tallied, but ever since January, 1915, there has been a marked discrepancy. The official lists give an average of 20 per cent. less than private lists. This represents a difference of over 200,000 dead.

It is a matter of mathematical certainty that the German Empire has lost over one million dead alone to the end of last year.

REVOLT'S ISSUE SEIZED.

U. S. Postal Authorities Take Exception to N. Y. Publication.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Revolt, an anarchist weekly published by the Revolt Publishing Association at 63 East 107th Street, has come under the ban of the post office authorities. The entire issue for the week was seized by order of the superintendent of second-class mail.

It was confiscated on the plea that it incited to violence in some of its writings; and another ground of criticism was that some parts were obscene.

HOW OMEMEE GOT ITS NAME

The original name of the village of Omemee was Metcalfe, and as there was another village of the same name in the western part of Lower Canada, the Postmaster-General sent notice that it had been decided to change the name of the post office, and asked the people to suggest another. This was in, say, 1857.

A public meeting was held, and various names canvassed. Omemee (the Indian name for dove or pigeon) being decided upon, its appropriateness being due to the fact that the village is built on Pigeon River—not on Emily Creek! A town whose only boast is the "raging Scugog" during the spring freshets should hesitate to jibe at such a waterway as the River of Dove.—Orillia Packet.

TIGERS HAVE DONE WELL.

Hamilton Rugby Men Have Hundred Soldiers.

HAMILTON, Feb. 23.—The Tiger Football Club held its annual meeting last night. Though last season was a lean one, receipts of $6,833 were reported, and there was a balance of $151, of which $100 was given towards the purchase of a motor truck for the Sportsmen's Battery. About 100 members have either gone or are going overseas. A resolution of sympathy will be sent to the family of the late "Glad" Murphy.

Don't forget, therefore, that the finding of the money will depend largely on you.

BIG LONDON DAILY BROKEN BY WAR

Daily Standard, For Hundred Years a Leader, Is Offered at Auction

LONDON, Feb. 23.—The lean days which have fallen upon many newspaper properties in Europe were indicated when the Official Receiver offered at auction to-day the goodwill and the receiver's interest in the machinery and plant of The Daily Standard, for nearly a hundred years a leading London morning paper.

The highest bid for the good-will was $1,000 and for the good-will plus the plant $50,000. As neither bid approached the minimum fixed by the court the property was withdrawn.

New System of Cleaning Outhouses Soon in Operation

Sanitary Inspector Spence stated to-day that the new system of outhouse cleaning would be put into operation at once, probably in the South end. The other sections of the city would be visited in order. Printed notices will be left with the ratepayers whom this regulation concerns, and it is pointed out that the work must be carried out orderly; hence requests from individuals in other parts of the city for immediate attention will be of little avail. Pits etc. that have not been cleaned since last summer will have to be put into proper condition independent of the city's system. Since the subject is not one of general interest, Mr Spence will notify the individuals. Payment for this work is not made to those who perform it. The householder signs a receipt showing that the work has been done and collections will afterwards be made by an appointed collector, probably Mr Spence.

SHOT DOWN LIKE FLIES WHEN MASSED ATTACK WAS MADE

LONDON, Feb. 24—Despatches reaching Paris last night state that the attacks on the Verdun front were launched after a terrific artillery bombardment lasting 48 hours had levelled the French defences to the ground. The first move was made by a picked division of 10,000 men. On these the French unleashed a hurricane of shrapnel of high-explosive shells. The Germans fell like flies. The survivors on reaching the French positions could find no cover in the wrecked trenches. The carnage was sickening.

"Military critics are unanimous," wires a correspondent in Paris, "in declaring that the Germans are already effectively checked.

"It is considered that this is the last offensive that the Kaiser will take in the western theatre, and if he fails to obtain either Verdun or Calais in the next few days he will be definitely forced to a defensive on every front.

"The war will then be a question of the wearing down of the Central Empires."

HAVE HUMBERT TO BEAT.

The military critic of the Paris Temps writes:

"The German attacks around Verdun have thus far only encountered our advanced lines and are only tentative. They have occurred at least five kilometres from the defences of Verdun, which is a big morsel to swallow, protected as it is by our active army in this region under a chief of great energy, General Humbert.

"We are convinced that the Germans are only feeling out our lines and the resistance they are going to meet will deter them from their intentions to take Verdun by main force even though they employ their heaviest guns."

The loss of Verdun would open up the road to Rheims and compel the retirement of the French in the Argonne-Champagne, the Woevre, from the heights of the Meuse and in Alsace-Lorraine.

Council Dismissed Ford Chief of Police

WINDSOR, Feb. 23.—After hearing the report of County Judge J. O. Dromgole, who investigated the alleged charges of graft made against Chief of Police Edward Morand, of Ford, the Town Council of that municipality by a vote of 5 to 1 ordered the dismissal of Morand and appointed Albert Maisonville, who has been acting chief since Morand's suspension, to the vacancy.

The action of the Council is remarkable in view of the fact that the Judge's report of the investigation practically exonerates Morand of the charges which had been preferred against him.

Belleville Juniors Surprise Kingston Team

KINGSTON, Feb. 23.—The Belleville junior hockey team now enters the fifth round of the junior O.H.A. series with Aura Lee of Toronto. It won here this evening from Kingston Collegiate Institute by a score of 8 to 3, winning the round by 12 to 6. Belleville deserved to win the game, as they played far better hockey from the start to the finish. The Belleville forward line played a good combination game, while the K.C.I. boys were away off colour. Ferguson played the best game for the losers. The line-up:

Stroud Isn't Much of Place But it Has Mighty Good Curlers

There is a new spot on the curling map. Yesterday morning the folks were asking "Where's Stroud?" Today every curler knows that it is a community situated five miles from Barrie and composed largely of a curling club. Said club consists of seventeen members but it turns out two Tankard and two District Cup rinks. The other may be the ice maker. Anyway he's not the village preacher. The latter is playing one of the District Cup rinks who yesterday put away Peterborough and Toronto Granites. He did good work yesterday all the way, but withal he was a bit anxious that the competition should close last night, as he had a funeral and a wedding to attend to-day. Stroud is still in the running to-day and the "Meenister" knows what it is to be torn between love and duty. Now, as a good curler what would you do if you were in his place?

Anyway it was a great day for Stroud. Drawn against Peterborough (always strong in this competition), it took them a few ends to get accustomed to the roar of the stones over the boarded floor. But once they had steadied their fluttering nerves they set sail after the flying Peterboroughs. A four and a five coming together along about the half way mark cut down the lead, and they came under the wire winners by a single shot when Tom Kissock drew shot with his last stone, and Campbell fell down in an attempt to come to it.

In the final Owen Sound won from Stroud by 38 to 29.

CURLING

The curlers hope the weather will hold out for the vice-skips' 'spiel, the Toronto Granite and Victoria games, and one or two others that are usually played.

The Stroud District Cup rinks were made up of six farmers, a cattle-buyer and a minister. Alex. Kay said both Peterborough rinks put up a good game and it was no disgrace to lose to the Stroud rinks, who turned around and trounced the Granites.

To win from Ray Best last night, J. W. McDermid had to get five on his last end and make a fine shot with his final stone. Best was leading by 13 to 11 after the eleventh end, and deckling to get as many as he could McDermid gathered a nice end together. But inside four of his stones Best lay shot. McDermid had to brush him out and he, which he did very effectively.

Robert Neill required an extra end to win from W. D. Campbell with a 10 to 9 score. It was a close game all the way.

MANY EFFECTIVE PLAYS IN BASEBALL WERE RESULT OF ACCIDENT

Many of the so-called "inside" plays in baseball have been the result of careful thought and study by managers and players. Some of the most important of these, and still used at the present time, were accidental discoveries developed into team work by heady exploiters of the game, who were shrewd enough to appreciate their value and systematize them to the advantage that winners always gain by taking the initative on good things.

The hit and run play that is now used generally by all well managed teams, was inaugurated as a run-making innovation and systematized to a science by the noted Baltimore Orioles in the early 90's by the shrewdness of John McGraw and Willie Keeler, who were teammates in that famous aggregation of successive champions of the National League.

The "placing" of the ball to the right field when a runner was on first base, is a play almost as old as baseball itself, but it was done by individuals and not made a part and parcel of team work.

It was considered the proper move to make under certain conditions, and some players tried to perfect themselves in right field hitting, but managers and captains in the earlier days of the game did not grasp the fact that it should be followed up as a system.

Those players who could hit into right were allowed to do so, but the play was not insisted on.

In those times it was a case of slug and slug again, and as often as possible. Break the back fence if the batter could. About all the science displayed was in pitching and that was thought to be in delivering the old round-house outcurve.

The "hit-and-run" was discovered" when, in a game, Keeler, who was at bat and McGraw who led off for the Orioles, was on first, hit a short single to right, McGraw going to third.

It has been done hundreds of times before, but these two players were the first to recognize its great value as a run producer and to follow it up as a regular play. I give them credit as being its "Christopher Columbuses."

After that particular game was over they talked the play over between themselves (they were "roomies," by the way), and it dawned on them that if continued it would win many a game.

They agreed not to confide in their fellow players or in Manager Hanlon as to what they had decided to do as a team until they had tried out the plan further, so as to make sure of its success.

For a week they teamed it together and it worked to a charm. Then they told their plan to Hanlon and their clubmates.

HER NINETIETH BIRTHDAY.

Belleville, February 24.—Mrs. James Reid of Charles street, yesterday celebrated her 90th birthday. She is a sister of Sir Mackenzie Bowell who is more than two years her senior. Mrs. Reid is enjoying remarkable good health and the fullest mental vigor.

INTEREST IN TO-NIGHT'S CITY LEAGUE GAMES

There is unusual interest in the City League games at Brock Street Rink to-night, as the games will have a big effect upon the championship. In the first game the Pennants, who have yet to meet defeat, will clash with the Americans, and a loss for the latter will put them out of the running, so that a hard-fought game may be expected. The second game will bring together the Bachelors and East City teams. The latter showed great improvement last week, chasing the Pennants into an over-time game. Pte. Windsor of the 93rd Battalion will referee the game.

BAND WILL PLAY AT BENEFIT GAME

The band of the 93rd Battalion will do its bit for the Belgians by turning out and playing at Brock Street Rink to-morrow night for the game between the 93rd Battalion and the Electrics. The two teams who have been hot rivals all season, are both on their mettle in to-morrow night's game. The Soldiers will be without the services of Capt. Wildfield, their goal keeper, but his place will be taken by Claude Montgomery, the goal-keeper of the Electric Juniors.

Both teams will have their strongest available line-ups out, and it promises to be another such battle as has characterized all their other meetings.

GETS $250 FOR A STOLEN KISS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 23.—Evelyn Whittington 16 years old and charming got $250 for one kiss this morning.

The conductor isn't in the employ of the Metropolitan any more, by the way.

It was Jan. 31, 1915, the theft was committed. Little Miss Evelyn, fitted into one of the tight skirts of the period, was waiting for the car out on Independence avenue, she explained while on the stand in Judge Harris Robinson's court.

Tight Skirt Causes It.

Her cousin and she laughed so much at her futile attempts to take the tight skirt on the first car they let it go by. She got on the second, still laughing, still rosy.

"What's the matter?" queried the conductor, as she occupied a rear seat.

I know I shouldn't have spoken," she said on the stand to-day. "But I was still laughing. What can you do when you're laughing?"

He Kissed Those Ruby Lips.

The conductor could do lots. And did. He said.

"I'm just going to take you in my arms and kiss those ruby lips."

Which he did.

Evelyn bit his wrist.

"I was going to get off the car then," said Evelyn, "but it was a long way to Thirtieth and Grand, where I live, and I didn't have any more money."

Evelyn sued for $25,000 and settled for $500, half of which went to her attorney.

Girl Asks $50,000 From Japanese

Miss Estelle Tibbetts Says She Was Deserted by Sweetheart Who Promised to Wed Her.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Deserted she declares, by her Japanese sweetheart after he had purchased a beautiful diamond engagement ring for her, Estelle Tibbetts, of Boston, yesterday sought to recover $50,000 from Sadataka Teshima, in the Supreme Court. Mr. Teshima in the New York representative of a large firm of Japanese importers, having a place of business at No. 23 Madison Avenue.

Miss Tibbetts, who is pretty and twenty-three, says she accepted Mr Teshima's offer of marriage September 11, 1915, on the understanding that they were to wed "within a reasonable length of time." He refused to keep his promise January 24, 1916 she says.

A telegram filed with the papers in the proceding and purporting to be from Mr. Teshima to Miss Tibbetts, while he was at Atlantic City, says "Down here, stopping at Hotel Chelsea. Take three o'clock through train. Weather fine. Harry."

She says she went to Atlantic City and met him as he instructed. She says they were at the Chelsea as "Mr. and Mrs. T. Teshima" and later journeyed to Pittsburg and Cincinnati together, returning to the city, where he purchased the engagement ring. He then told her to go to Boston and rent and furnish an apartment at his expense, which she did, she declares, offering as evidence a receipted bill which he is said to have paid. There are other bills, unreceipted, in evidence which, she thinks, he ought to pay.

She told her attorney that she loved Mr. Teshama and was ready to marry him "this minute" even if she had "to live in one room." It is understood that he will enter a general denial.

battalion and their friends to-night, commencing at 8 o'clock. A very enjoyable time is expected.

The Band and Signallers of the 93rd will clash at Brock Street Rink between 6 and 7 o'clock to-night. It looks like the game of the year. The members of the Band who are not in the game will be on hand to provide music.

We still have vacancies for a few more good men. And we still believe there are good men to be got, but who do not care for the monotony of a winter training in Canada. Any man wishing to join the overseas forces, and proceed to England at once, come and join us.

Apply after mid-day, Saturday, Feb. 26th, and the ensuing week, to any of the following N.C.O.'s for enlistment or information:

C. S. M. Wilfood, 262 Westcott.
Armourer-Sgt. Hart, 252 Westcott.
Bandmaster Perver, Grandview Ave. ('Phone 806).
Coy. Q.M.S. Lyburn, 230 Wolfe.
Band-Sgt. Chambers, 271 Simcoe St.

Special branches wanted:
Drivers for transport section.
Signallers (office men and clerks preferred).
Men for officers' servants.

Pte. Charley Lynn, formerly of the 8th C.M.R., but now attached to an Ashburnham Corps at Shorncliffe, in a recent letter to his mother, Mrs. John Lynn, 62 Sophia Street, Ashburnham, stated that he had received the Christmas box sent by the ladies of St. Paul's Church. Everything was in good shape.

Saper Oscar W. Davidson is up from Ottawa visiting his mother, Mrs. Hugh Davidson, Aylmer street, before leaving for overseas next week with the third division of the Canadian Signallers.

Writing to his father, Mr. Geo. N Graham of the Empress Hotel, Sergt Arthur Graham of the C.F.A., at Ross Barracks, Shorncliffe, Eng., says: "This afternoon a man was caught connecting up wires to blow up the powder magazine, which is only a few yards from us. Had he completed his work your son, Arthur would not be here at this present moment, and I was peacefully working while this was going on. I might tell you that it was Fraser Gray of Peterborough, son of Mrs Gray, Wolsley Street, who discovered it, and he will most likely get something for his capture.

The strength of the 93rd Battalion this morning, was 79, so that the 800 mark will undoubtedly be shattered before the end of the week.

The many friends of Harry Williford, formerly of the 57th Regiment will be interested in learning that he is now Company Sergeant Major with the 59th Battalion.

Peterboroughs is evidently looked upon as a great recruiting field. Just now there are recruiting sergeants here for the 39th and 80th Battalions, trying to divide the field with the 93rd Battalion and the 32nd Battery. In addition a man from the Grenadier Guards was here a few days ago and took three men east with him. They had all been rejected here as unfit physically.

SEEKING LUMBER ON PACIFIC COAST

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 24.—Pacific Coast lumber will be used to line the trenches in France, provided lumber interests o this city, San Francisco, and Portland can organize a pool to execute a contract with the French Government for 200,000,000 feet of lumber for trench and railroad wok.

"The inquiry has come from a source that is well authenticated," says the manager of a lumber company operating in this city, San Francisco and St. Helens, Ore. "But with snow in the woods and the large general demand for lumber the only way that the contract could be handled would be through its underwriting by a number of concerns."

Only a week ago the French Government entered into a contract with twenty lumber firms of the Gulf Coast region of Texas to furnish 62,000,000 feet of common lumber, delivery to begin at once. The Allied Governments have also recently contracted for large suppliesCeglinerth tracted for large shipments of foodstuffs from this and other States.

Perhaps a more interesting development has been inquiries among the railroads by the British Government for cast-off ties. These ties are usually burned, but as the British Government has manifested a willingness to pay five cents each for them, to be used for lining trenches, many of the railroads have already issued orders to save them.

Though material for trenches seems to be of the firfist consideration in all lumber inquiries, a portion of the 200,000,000 feet of timber that the French Government is seeking on the Pacific Coast will be used for railroad building, with bridge timbers especially prominent in the listings.

Aside from the paramiunt fact that one of the belligerent nations is going nearly half way around the globe for lumber, the inquiry is pointed to by mill men as but another indication of a general revival in their business.

"Lumber demands are at maximum," says a lumberman. "With the revival of the mining business and the railroads in the best condition for building that they have been in for some years, there is every reason to believe the coming spring and summer will see big doings in the lumber business."

GIVE TO BELGIUM.

The love of Christ constraineth.
And tender pity pleads
With us, to cheer the aching heart,
In misery that bleeds.
A noble standard Belgium raised
And firm for honour stood.
What time the Teuton hordes rolled in Their devastating flood.

The love of Christ constraineth,
As who so sumptuous fare,
Our flowing cup and plentious store
With her to gladly share.
Shall we unmoved behold her homes,
By fire and sword o'erthrown
The cry of starving millions hear,
And eat our bread alone.

The love of Christ constraineth
To heed the orphan's cry.
The lonely widows bitter need
In mercy to supply.
Fo rwe had met the self-same afte
As Belgium, had not they Lie heroes bravely filled the breach,
And kept the foe at bay.

The love of Christ constraineth
As brothers to enfold,
The gallant sufferers in adversity,
And give our gear and gold,
So at the last, a blest well done
Our rich reward may be
As you have helped and succored these
Ye did it unto Me.

NEW ORDER GAVE TOBACCO USERS A GENUINE SCARE

LONDON, Feb. 24.—Smokers undoubtedly were the most frightened class in England recently when the government announced last night the absolute prohibition of tobacco importation into the British Isles.

The order reducing paper and other importations caused widespread interest, but were not terrifying. Tobacco users were genuinely scared. They recovered part of their courage when tobacconists announced there was a two years' supply of the weed in England. Nevertheless a stiff increase in prices is generally looked for, though the English press declares it can see no reason for it as yet.

The big dailies immediately began figuring on how to get down to a paper famine basis. Arrangements were made for a committee to apportion the supply to the various publications.

Will Reduce Papers.

There was no question from the first, however, that the new order meant a reduction in the dailies' size, the damning of the previous flood of cheap books and the utmost economy of private individuals and retail merchants in the use of stationary for correspondence, envelopes, wrapping paper and other purposes.

Reduction in the supply of building materials seems unlikely to be seriously felt, building operations have been for the most part suspended since the beginning of the war. Restrictions on the entry of timber, however, do promise to make the cost of firewood practically prohibitive in the near future.

The embargo of fruits has been the subject of consideration criticism, on the ground that such commodities are not luxuries but legitimate food. Comment has been especially bitter in circles interested in the South African fruit trade, which has been in process of being built up slowly for some time and it threatened now with ruin.

Furniture Will Go Up.

Of furniture and furniture woods and veneers there is said to be some supply on hand but nothing like enough to last two years, as in the case of tobacco; and the prediction generally is made that furniture prices speedily will reach a prohibitive figure.

In part the new regulations are made with a view to compelling economy by the English people. It is conceded, however, that the main purpose is to leave more room in ship touching at English ports for foodstuffs and munitions.

The entire British mercantile marine being, in one way or another, under government control at present, there will be no difficulty in enforcing the new orders.

FRIVOLITY IN THE COLLEGES

We know perfectly well that the heirs of all ages go to college to come into their inheritance; that plain living, high thinking, and upward striving are of the essence of the matter. Our convictions have been so printed quite a number of times. Therefore, when a paper called "Froth," published at Pennsylvania State College, where hundreds of ambitious young men have struggled into learning, puts out the following lines:

Tobacco is a dirty weed.
I like it;
It satisfies no normal need,
I like it;
It makes you thin, it makes you lean,
It takes the hair right off your bean;
I like it

—we ought to be shocked and horrified. We ought to rebuke the spirit of frivolity which can jest even in the shadow of Pittsburgh's Calvinistic steeples. Yes, we ought to.—Collier's.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Traders on the floor of the Stock Exchange to-day evidenced considerable uncertainty in the face of international developments. Prices opened off 1-8 to 1-4 of a point. Most of the active issues fluctuated during the first few minutes trading. American Can. was down 1-4 of a point; steel was of 1-8, Baldwin Loco. off 1-4, and American Loco. down 1-2.

Prices sagged during the first hour and broke during the second. Anglo-French loans were very active, the sales during an hour totalling $1,670,000. Prices ranged from 98 1-8 to 84.

Crucible dropped 3½ to 36½ shortly afternoon. Baldwin made similar loss to 106½.

War stocks were especially effected by the break. Sales, however, were not heavy.

MUST KEEP ON KILLING HUNS

Father Vaughan Says Teutons Would Leaves Us Nothing But Our Eyes to Weep With

LONDON, Feb. 21.—There is not a member of the clergy of any denomination whatever in the whole of the United Kingdom more respected for his plain, honest, straightforward speaking and broadmindedness than Father Bernard Vaughan, and though he may have made squirm some of those narrow minded clergy and others who of late have been condemning young clergy from taking an active part in the war by the powerful speech which he delivered at the Mansion House the other day he was applauded heartily by those privileged to hear him.

The theme of his speech was 'Our Business to Keep On Killing Germans," a speech which he said he knew "would produce a batch of letters asking if he were a priest of God."

The "music" Britons at the front had to face, he said, was the most highly organized war machines ever made. It was made in Germany, and that was why we did not want it. If Prussianized Germany would play the game according to the rules laid down by organized law he thought they would all command our admiration as well as our respect. But they had failed to play the game.

Convincing Reason.

"Our business," he declared, "is to keep on killing Germans. Somebody has to be killed, and do you think we ought to be killed in view of the motive we have gone forth to fight for? I say we have to kill a sufficient number of that tremendous army so as to entitle us to dictate terms of peace that should be rooted in victory, to be heard shouted from Petrograd to Rome, from Paris to the mammoth metropolis."

After referring to the German atrocities he said he was told sometimes that the newspapers were exaggerating. His answer to that always was that if the Germans had not done what was charged against them, they were failing to carry out the laws laid down by their war lords, to leave the women and children nothing but their eyes to weep with.

"We are up against this sort of enemy," he said. "Do what we will, you must either crush or tame the enemy, or he will leave you nothing but your eyes to weep with."

—[illegible] of these human persimmons never seem to ripen.

It is asserted that George Washington never told a lie. But George was an historian.

WEDDING BELLS

BEGY—McNULTY.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Feb. 23.—A military wedding, in which one of the principals was a hero of the charge of Langemarcke, Major George Edward Blake Begy, only son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Begy of this city, and the other a leader in the younger social set here, Miss Genevieve McNulty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McNulty of this city, took place, attended by a brilliant military ceremony in St. Catharines Roman Catholic Church at 10:30 o'clock this morning. Rev. Dean Morris conducted the ceremony, assisted by Rev. Father Smythe.

The charming bride entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, and was given away by her father. She was gowned in an exquisite robe of cloth of silver made over ivory satin and chiffon, with short full skirt, her tulle veil falling gracefully to the hem of her gown and being arranged in Juliet style with orange blossoms and pearls. Her bouquet was a shower of lilies of the valley and orchids.

The bridesmaids were two sisters of the bride, Misses Viola and Marie McNulty, and were dressed alike in frocks of Dresden chiffon over pink taffeta. Their picture hats, shoes, and sashes were of pale green. They carried old-fashioned bouquets of marguerites and pink roses. Little Miss Shirley Manchester, a niece of the groom, and little Miss Phyllis Graves, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Graves of this city, made sweet little flower girls, wearing lingerie frocks over pink with pale green sashes, and carrying baskets of marguerites.

The groom, who wore his full uniform, was supported by Major Victor Dyas of Toronto, while the ushers, also in uniform, were Major E. H. Lancaster of this city, commander of the 40th Battery, Major Jack Bennett of Toronto, and Major Newton Young of Barrie.

After the ceremony the bride and groom passed from the church through an arch of crossed swords formed by fellow-officers of the groom of the 81st Battalion, and drove to the home of the bride's parents on Midland street, where a buffet breakfast was served. Mrs. McNulty, mother of the bride received the guests in a gown of black satin with lace and corsage of violets and small black hat. Mrs. Begy, mother of the groom, wore ivory satin veiled with black and white chiffon. The groom gave his bride a cluster diamond ring set in platinum; to the maids, pearl rings; flower girls, silver mesh bags; and to his best man and ushers, monogram gold cuff links.

After the usual toasts the happy couple left for Buffalo by motor to catch the train for New York, the bride travelling in a navy blue suit, with fox furs and small white hat, and high white kid shoes. After March 1 Mr. and Mrs. Begy will be at home in the Kingsley Apartments, Toronto, till the groom's regiment leaves for overseas.

A large number of guests attended the wedding, among the out-of-town guests being: Col. B. H. and Mrs. Belson, Toronto; Col. R. H. and Mrs. Labatt, Hamilton; Col. and Mrs. Ballantyne, Toronto; Maj. Huggins, Hamilton; Maj. Cowan, Barrie; Maj. A. Moss, Toronto; Maj. Rogers, Barrie; Maj. Wright, Toronto; Maj Sampson, Toronto; Capt. J. R. Reilly, Welland; Maj. Ballard, Toronto; Capt. Canover, Toronto; Capt. Newton Young, Toronto; Capt. Frank McKinley, Toronto; Captain Brown, Maj. Victor Dyas, and Capt. Jack Bennett, Toronto; Dr. F. Bernstorff Wants U. S. to Drop Libel Proceedings at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, to-day formally requested the State Department to procure the dismissal of libel proceedings brought against the German prize ship Appam, now in Norfolk Harbour.

He based his request on the provisions of the Prussian-American treaties of 1799 and 1828, which exempt a vessel brought into an American port as a German prize from legal process of any character.

At the same time the German Ambassador engaged John Clifton, a Washington attorney, to represent the German Government in steps to fight the efforts of the British owners of the Appam to regain possession of the vessel by libel proceedings.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

EYE TALKS SERIES

NO. 13—EFFECT OF SUN'S GLARE ON EYES

SOME people find they feel the glare of the Sun acutely through their glasses. The lenses are suitable for correcting all errors of vision, both for near and distant use, and possibly are the finest quality, may even be Dr. Fowler's famous "Peblo" glasses. The eyes, however, are extremely sensitive to strong light, and a beautiful bright day brings real discomfort.

This is all unnecessary, and if you report the fact to Dr. Fowler he will show you his "Acto" lenses, which are an exceptionally high-grade glass, with a very slight tint of green, so clear as to be un-noticeable, yet sufficiently opaque to catch the glaring rays as they strike the glass, and soften them so that they strike the eyes evenly distributed all over, and not in needle-like points as they feel to a sensitive eye.

If you have such trouble, let Dr. Fowler change your lenses, and try them out a few days—That's the way to prove their value.

THINKS ALLIED SEA POWER INEFFECTIVE

LONDON, Feb. 24.—Lord Charles Beresford, who was created a baron by King George in the recent New Year's honours, made his maiden speech in the House of Lords yesterday on Baron Sydenham's motion that "in conformity with the principles of international law and the legitimate rights of neutrals, more effective use could be made of the allied fleets, in preventing supplies directly conducing to the prolongation of the war from reaching the enemy."

"If we had asserted our rights," said Baron Beresford, "and used our sea power properly, the war would be over now. Even at present we have only a sort of blockade, carried out by proclamation, orders-in-council, agreements and committees. Wars are not won by proclamations, and orders-in-council, but by fighting, and that is what we should do.

"The war is being conducted by twenty-one amateurs who know nothing about it. The basis of success in a war is foresight, and how can mere amateurs have foresight. The management of the war has been worse since the coalition ministry was formed. Brilliant retreats will not win the war; let us get this thing on its proper basis."

The Marquis of Lansdowne, Minister without portfolio in the Cabinet, replying on behalf of the Government to Baron Beresford and Baron Sydenham, said:

"It is idle to suppose that we can ever completely seal up Germany, but many of the complaints regarding the failure of the blockade proceed from misapprehensions. All the figures and statistics put forward in support of these complaints require most careful scrutiny. Many such figures are certainly open to criticism. Comparisons are frequently made from altogether erroneous data.

"The enemy has undoubtedly received supplies, but I can assure the House of Lords that he is receiving them in a steadily decreasing quantity. We are conducting the blockade on the only proper basis for a great maritime power in a war with an enemy which has taken the fighting of the inner lines. The Government realizes that it is of first importance to prevent supplies reaching the enemy, and that policy will be enforced unsparingly."

The world's largest steel plate mill soon will be in operation in Pennsylvania, and will be able to roll plates sixteen feet wide.

WOMAN COMMITS SUICIDE FOLLOWING POLICE RAID

Lucy Duffy, Fined for Keeping a Disorderly House, Dies In Hospital.

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—Lucy Duffy, a well-known police character, 167 Seaton Street, committed suicide last night by inhaling illuminating gas. The last effort of Police Inspector Allison to remove the woman, whom he considered a loose character, was made on Monday, when the woman's house was raided. She was fined yesterday on a charge of keeping a disorderly house. The woman paid $20, and costs. Earlier in the month the Police Magistrate exacted toll from her upon a charge of vagrancy.

William McMaster, who resides at the same address, called Policeman Trim from his beat to investigate the fumes of gas which were filling the house. Trim found the source to be the woman's room, but the way was barred by a locked door. When he broke his way in he found her in a dying condition, with the gas turned on. She was sent to St. Michael's Hospital. She died immediately after her admission. Her body was taken to the morgue.

The woman is thirty-five years of age and said to be married. The police know nothing of the whereabouts of her husband.

you would build for efficient service now and for generations to come.

The "Road to Wellville" is built that way. And the password to that road is "right living," in which food and drink play such a big part.

More and more people are waking up to the need of banishing from the dietary heavy, indigestible foods, and food deficient in the vitalizing mineral salts. Food scientists now hold that the lack of these elements is one of the chief causes of a long list of ills, including anemia, constipation, nervous prostration, kidney trouble, and so on.

Long ago a food—now famous—was devised to make up for this lack, and it does it admirably.

That food is

Grape-Nuts

Made of whole wheat and barley, it contains all the nutrition of the grain, including those vital elements—phosphate of potash, etc.—which are indispensable for perfect balance of body, brain and nerves, and for warding off disease.

This food comes ready to eat, is economical, and delicious. Digests quickly—generally in about one hour—and is full of health-making goodness.

A ration of Grape-Nuts along with other food has started thousands on the "Road to Wellville."

DUCKWORTH TO HANG, MAY 12 IS THE DATE

Grand Valley Farmer Who Shot His Brother-in-Law Is Sentenced

ORANGEVILLE, Ont., Feb. 24.—After deliberating eight hours in the case against Thomas Duckworth, charged with shooting his brother-in-law, Harry Strutt, on the afternoon of November 2, at the lonely house in East Luther township, the jury brought in a verdict this morning of wilful murder against the accused with a recommendation of mercy. The jury roll was called at the request of counsel for the defence and each man pronounced his verdict, the first time such words were ever uttered in the court room.

Crown Prosecutor T. J. Agar, of Simcoe, immediately asked that judgment be pronounced.

His Lordship, Justice Kelly, after asking the prisoner if he had anything to say why sentence of death should not be pronounced, a question received in silence, sentenced Duckworth to be hanged here on May 12.

The case has been remarkable for the celerity with which the law worked after the tragic occurrence. The murder was committed between one and two o'clock on November 2. The accused was arrested the same day at four, the inquest held the same evening, Coroner Berwick sitting until midnight, and securing damaging evidence from the prisoner's brother Hamilton, from Mrs. Strutt, widow of the victim, and sister of the accussed, and from the murderer's sister, Mrs. Pell. Yesterday the brother so completely varied the evidence given at the inquest that the Crown considered he should have been arrested for perjury. The widow of Harry Strutt also told a new version of the tragedy.

The judge stayed in his room all night. At seven the jury reported they could not agree, but were sent back for further consideration and shortly after returned the above verdict. The prisoner expected a verdict of manslaughter but bore up under the ordeal. He took farewell of his young wife and other relatives and was removed to his cell

Everywhere men complain about work; even boys and girls in school or business find work tedious and irksome, but it isn't the work half so much as their own lack of physical strength that makes it hard.

Prussianism Must Be Crushed Once and For All, Says Russian Minister

Reviews War Situation In A Most Optimistic Manner, In Address To The Duma---Difficult To See The End Of The Struggle

PETROGRAD, via London, Feb. 25.—Addressing the Duma the Foreign Minister, Mr. Sazonoff, reviewed the war situation in a most optimistic way, although he declared it was more difficult now than ever before to foresee the end of the world struggle.

"The Imperial government remains unshaken in its determination to continue the struggle to conquer the enemy," he said. "This war is the greatest crime, of high treason against humanity. Those who provoked it bear a heavy responsibility and to-day stand entirely unmasked.

"We know who it was that let loose the misfortunes without number with which Europe is oppressed. Even German public opinion is beginning to realize that the German people has been the dupe of those who thought the hour had come to realize the dreams of plunder and rapine they had cherished so long.

"When dealing with an enemy like Germany we must take thought in good time how best to prevent the repetition of the events which occurred so rapidly eighteen months ago. The instinct of self-preservation demands putting an end to the ruthless egoism and passion for plunder which are the distinctive characteristics of Prussianism and must be crushed once for all. Otherwise the sacrifices of the Allies would be in vain.

"The Allies have brought about a complete union without the sacrifice by any one of them of a particle of independence or personality. With the enemy it is different.

GERMANY'S ALLIES HER VASSALS.

"Germany's allies have become vassals. It is hard to speak any longer of Austria-Hungary, Turkey and Bulgaria as independent States. The clutching grasp of Germany has seized the power in their armies and all branches of administration.

"The signature of the five allied Powers to the treaty to conclude peace in common proves the falsity of absurd rumours of a separate peace."

Mr. Sazonoff also dealt with the Polish problem in his address.

"From the beginning of the war," he said, "Russia has had inscribed on her banner the reunion of dismembered Poland and never has this ceased to be our aim. Germany has granted a few minor concessions to Poland, and in return it is said she contemplates raising hundreds of thousands of Polish troops to be used in the attempt to bring about the triumph of Germanism."

In regard to Russia's relations with Sweden, the Foreign Minister said:

"Our only sentiment toward the Swedes is one of sincere friendship. Any pretext of conflicting interests could only be artificial. Russia's history does not impel her toward the coast of Scandinavia. She must obtain an outlet in a free sea in quite another direction."

Mr. Sazonoff then turned to Roumania, saying:

"Roumania will not betray her own interests, and when the hour strikes she will know how to realize her national unity at the cost of her own blood. She may be certain that in defending herself against the attempts of a common enemy to interfere with the independence of her decisions she will find real support."

CLOSER RELATIONS WITH AMERICA.

"The interest which American industry has in our markets," he said, "permits of the hope that, in addition to the friendly political relations now existing between the two countries, an economic rapprochement may be brought about which would be of the greatest benefit to both nations.

"In any case the Russian government will put forth all its efforts to this end."

The Foreign Minister also referred to the "maladroit and importunate propaganda of German agents in America," which, he said, "not only failed in its object but provoked a certain irritation and appreciably chilled American sympathies for Germany."

The speech of Emperor Nicholas before the Duma was devoted principally to the victory of the Russians at Erzerum.

"I rejoice that I am able to join you in thanksgiving for the brilliant victory of our army of the Caucasus," the Emperor said. "I am happy to be among the representatives of my faithful people. I pray for God's blessing in its object but provoked a certain irritation and appreciably chilled American experience and knowledge and be guided by love of your country in the work for which you are responsible to the country and to me. I wish you fruitful labour and complete success."

Asks Voluntary Contributions To Build Austrian Submarine Fleet

The Austrian Navy League publishes an appeal in the newspapers of Austria-Hungary for voluntary contributions for the building of a submarine fleet to insure the freedom of the seas for the Teutonic Powers. First of all, however, the appeal calls for the building of a submarine to replace the U-12, which was lost.

"We call upon every man, woman and child of our dear fatherland," says the appeal, "to supply the money by voluntary contributions for the building of new submarines.

"We are all aware how the brave commanders and crews of our submarines have attacked and sunk ships of the enemy, who seek to deny us the freedom of the seas. We all know how our never-to-be-forgotten Egon Lerch sacrificed his young life in attacking a ship of our treacherous one-time ally. To perpetuate his memory let us all combine to build a new U-12 to protect us on the seas.

"No city, no village is too far from the ocean not to be interested in this important matter.

"The Turkish people have contributed a large sum for the building of a battle ship, and in recent years 46,000,000 kronen were collected in Sweden for a battle cruiser. The women of Chili have presented their country with a war ship and Norwegian women have shown a similar patriotic spirit. We who now recognize the importance of submarines, should not remain indifferent in this respect.

"Remember the freedom of the seas is what we are fighting for. Let us all help with every bit of our strength."

Canadian Cheese Trade is Valuable

Some three years ago the future of the export cheese trade of Canada formed the subject of considerable discussion in a pessimistic strain, says the Montreal Trade Bulletin in a recent issue.

Our exporters felt that the exports of cheese were steadily slipping from them, and they certainly had grounds for entertaining such fears. Some twelve or thirteen years ago the exports for the season totalled nearly 2,000,000 boxes, while in 1913-14 they had fallen away to 1,697,000 boxes showing a decrease of about 1,340,000 boxes, or about 44½ per cent. We did not, however, take such a gloomy view of the situation as the trade did at that time, as it was not to be expected that New Zealand would ever be able to wrest the export cheese trade from us, as we have in a great measure taken it from the United States.

Since the season of 1913-14 our exports of cheese have increased considerably, as during the present season from May 7th, 1915, to January 29th, 1916, they totalled 2,076,534 boxes, against 1,667,566 boxes from May 1st, 1913, to May 1st, 1914, showing an increase of 629,968 boxes. Canada is not a cheese consuming nation the proportion of that article consumed at home being very small compared with the total production. New Zealand in our mind has got pretty well to the length of her tether in the matter of cheese exports.

It should be remembered that production of cheese in Canada is too profitable for the farmer to relinquish it, and hand it over to a foreign competitor. It is true that for some years past there was a gradual shrinkage in the make; but this, it is believed, will in a few years be more than compensated for by the increased production of the Middle West, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The exportation of cheese has brought into Canada during the past season some $37,500,000 of English hard cash, and the farmers of this country will make herculean efforts to retain such a profitable industry.

ACID IN STOMACH SOURS THE FOOD

Says Excess of Hydrochloric Acid Is Cause of Indigestion

A well-known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion is nearly always due to acidity—acid stomach—and not, as many folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation, then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. We then get that heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate sour food, belch gas, or have heartburn, flatulence, water brash, or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys, and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

Many Women Suffer
FROM EXCRUCIATING PAINS
IN THE BACK.

Do you ever feel that you must have some rest for that lame and aching back?

Do you ever feel that those shooting, stabbing, darting pains must be gotten rid of before you can get into condition, whereby you can attend to your household duties without a pain or an ache?

When the back begins to ache it is a sure sign that there is something radically wrong with the kidneys.

Mrs. L. Melanson, Plympton, N.S., writes: "I am sending you this testimonial, telling you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills made for me. For years I had suffered so with my kidneys I could hardly do my housework. I used several kinds of pills, but none of them seemed to be doing me any good. At last I was advised to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. When I had taken the first box I found relief. I have used five boxes, and to-day I feel like a new woman. I cannot recommend them too highly."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

"I suppose that anyone who let go was killed?" said Tollemache.

"Mais, non, M'sieu'," Pere Jean assured him. "The blessed saint would not permit that. No one was ever killed, I'm told. But the prefect has forbidden it these twenty years."

"Are the rings in good condition?"

"Certainly, M'sieu'. Where now does one get such iron as was made in those days?"

"Let's test some of 'em, anyhow," said Tollemache, and before the horrified girls realized what he meant he had leaped from parapet to rock, and was clinging to a couple of rings.

"Oh, Monsieur Tollemache!" screamed Barbe.

"Please come back, Monsieur!" cried Madeleine.

"Hi! Hi! It is forbidden by the prefect!" bellowed Pere Jean.

But Yvonne, though angry and pallid with fright, only said, "Don't be stupid, Lorry. I should never have thought you would show off in that silly manner."

She spoke in English. Tollemache, gazing down at her in a comical, sidelong way, answered in the same language.

"I'm not showing off. Do you think that any Frenchman ever lived who could climb where I couldn't?"

"No one said a word about you."

"Yes. Mere Pitou said I'd shiver when I saw the place. Now watch me shiver!"

He swung outward. Even in her distress, Yvonne noticed that he took a strong pull at each ring before trusting his whole weight to it. But she made no further protest, nor uttered a sound; though Madeleine and Barbe were screaming frantically, and the old caretaker's voice cracked with reiteration of the prefect's commands.

Tollemache was soon out of sight round the angle of the tower, and the two Breton girls ran to the other parapet to watch for his reappearance. Not so Yvonne. The dread notion possessed her that she might see Laurence Tollemache dashed to his death on those cruel rocks some sixty feet beneath, and she knew that, once witnessed, the horrific spectacle would never leave her vision. So she waited spellbound in front of the altar, and gazed mutely at some tawdry images that stood there. Could they help, these grotesque caricatures of heavenly beings, carved and gilded wooden blocks with curiously inane eyes and thick lips? Her senses seemed to be atrophied. She was aware of a feeling of dull annoyance when the boy, attracted by the screams and Pere Jean's shrill vehemence, came running from his post, and thus would surely miss the second appearance of her father and Mere Pitou. But the young peasant was quick witted. He had seen the "pilgrims" turn and resume the ascent; so he dashed into the belfry, because he could thence obtain a rare view of an event that he had often heard of but never seen, — a man swinging himself round Sainte Barbe's tower by the shepherd's hooks, such being the local name of the series of rings.

So the bell tolled its deep, strong notes, and simultaneously Madeleine and Barbe shrieked in a wilder pitch of frenzy. Tollemache had just swung round the second angle of the tower. His left hand had caught the outermost ring on that side; but the staple yielded, and he vanished.

"Ah, mon Dieu! he has fallen!" cried Barbe, collapsing forthwith in a faint.

Fortunately Madeleine saved her from a nasty tumble on the rough stones; though she herself was nearly distraught with terror. Pere Jean raced off down the right-hand flight of steps, moving with remarkable celerity for so old a man, and gasping in his panic:

"Mille diables! What will M'sieu' le Prefet say now?"

Evidently the caretaker feared lest Sainte Barbe's miraculous powers should not survive so severe a test. Yet his faith was justified. A shout was heard from the tower's hidden face.

"Je m'en fiche de ca!" was the cry. "I'm right as a nail. I've got to return the way I came—that's all."

Yvonne listened as one in a dream. She saw her father and Madame Pitou crossing the plateau. For an instant her eyes dwelt on the features of the frightened boy peering through an embrasure in the belfry. From some point beneath came the broken ejaculations of Pere Jean, who was craning his neck from some precarious perch on the edge of the precipice to catch a glimpse of the mad American's shattered body. Madeleine was sobbing hysterically over the prostrate Barbe, and endeavouring with nervous fingers to undo the stiff linen coif round the unconscious girl's throat.

Now, after leaving the cottage, Yvonne had looked at the chapel, the entrance to which lay at the foot of the left-hand stairway. The sanctuary had a belfry of its own, a narrow, circular tower, pierced with lancet windows beneath a pointed roof. These windows were almost on a line with and about ten feet distant from the top of the wall of rock left by the excavation that provided a site for the building. Through one of them, which faced the causeway, could be seen a tiny white statue of Sainte Barbe. No more striking position could have been chosen for it. The image was impressive by reason of its very unexpectedness.

Hardly conscious of her action, Yvonne turned to the saint now to invoke her help. She murmured an incoherent prayer, and as she gazed distraught at the Madonna-like figure, so calm, so watchful in its aery, she heard the rhythmic clank of iron as the rings moved in their sockets. One fleeting glance over the left parapet revealed Tollemache in the act of swinging himself to the pair of rings above the rock that gave foothold.

Again he peered down at her, twisting his head awkwardly for the purpose. "Nothing much to it," he laughed, jerking out breathless words. "Of course it was a bit of a twister when that ring came away; but——".

He was safe. Yvonne deigned him no further heed. She hurried to Barbe's side.

"For goodness' sake help me to shake her and slap her hands!" she cried to Madeleine. "Monsieur Tollemache has spoiled the day for us already, and Mere Pitou will be ill if she thinks Barbe is hurt."

Barbe, vigorous little village girl, soon yielded to drastic treatment, and was eager as either of her friends to conceal from her mother the fact that she had fainted.

Tollemache, feeling rather sheepish in face of Yvonne's quiet scorn, strolled to the top of the steps down which Pere Jean had scuttled. The old man's voice reached him in despairing appeal.

"M'sieu'! Speak, if you are alive! Speak, pour l'amour de Dieu!"

"Hello there!" he cried. "What's the row about? Here I am!"

Pere Jean gazed up with bulging eye, and himself nearly fell over the precipice. "Ah, Dieu merci!" he quavered. "But, M'sieu', didn't you hear me tell you that the prefect——"

"What's the matter?" broke in Ingersoll's quiet tones. "You all look as if you had seen a daylight ghost."

"I behaved like a vain idiot," explained Tollemache, seeing that none of the girls was minded to answer. "I tried to climb round the tower by those rings, and scared Yvonne and the others rather badly."

"How far did you go?"

"Oh, I was on the last lap; but a ring gave way."

Ingersoll knew the place of old, and needed no elaborate essay on the danger Tollemache had escaped. His grave manner betokened the depth of his annoyance.

"What happened then?" he said.

"I went back, of course."

"Where did the ring break?"

"It didn't break. I pulled the staple out. That one—you see where the gap is."

Ingersoll leaned over the parapet. A glance sufficed.

"You crossed the valley face of the tower twice?" he said.

"Couldn't help myself, old sport."

"Then you described yourself with marvellous accuracy, — a vain idiot, indeed!"

"Many of whom lost their lives. You had a pretty close call. Lorry, I'm ashamed of you!"

Mere Pitou added to Tollemache's discomfiture by the biting comment that her man had got round the tower, whereas he had failed.

Altogether it was a somewhat depressed party that was shown round the quaint old chapel of the patroness of armorers and artillerists by Pere Jean, who had lost a good deal of his smiling bonhomie, and eyed Tollemache fearfully, evidently suspecting him of harbouring some fantastic design of dropping from the gallery to the floor, or leaping from the chapel roof to the cliff.

Their spirits revived, however, as they descended a steep path to Sainte Barbe's well. Every chapel of Saint Barbara has, or ought to have, a well, and that at Le Faouet (three syllables, please, and sound the final T when you are in Brittany) is specially famous for its prophetic properties in affairs of the heart. Thus, a spring bubbles into a trough surmounted by a canopy and image of the saint. In the centre of the trough, beneath two feet of limpid water, the spring rises through an irregular orifice, roughly four inches square, and all unmarried young people who visit the shrine try to drop pins into the hole. Success at the first effort means that the fortunate aspirant for matrimony will either be married within a year or receive a favourable offer.

So, after luncheon, which had been carried by a boy from the village on the hill opposite the Pilgrims' Way, the girls produced a supply of pins. Barbe was the first to try her luck. Three pins wriggled to the floor of the well; but a fourth disappeared, and Mere Pitou took the omen seriously.

"You will be married when you are twenty-one, ma petite," she said, "and quite soon enough, too. Then your troubles will begin."

Madeleine failed six times, and gave up in a huff. Yvonne's second pin vanished.

"O, la, la!" cried Mere Pitou, still deeply interested in this consultation of the fates. "Mark my words, you'll refuse the first and take the second!"

The old lady darted a quick look at Ingersoll; but he was smiling. He had schooled himself for an ordeal, and his expression did not change. Tollemache, too, created a diversion by seizing a pin, holding it high above the surface of the water, whereas each of the girls had sought apparently to lessen the distance as much as possible, and dropping it out of sight straight away.

"Look at that!" he crowed. "My girl will say snap as soon as I say snip. Here's her engagement ring!"

Plunging his left hand into a pocket, he brought to light the ring and staple torn from Sainte Barbe's tower. When hanging with one hand to the last holdfast, on the wall overlooking sixty feet of sheer precipice, he had calmly pocketed the ring that proved treacherous.

Evidently Laurence Tollemache was a young man who might be trusted not to lose his head in an emergency.

Mere Pitou was not to be persuaded to tempt fortune, and Ingersoll, who was sketching the well rapidly and most effectively, was left alone, because Barbe, who would have called him to come in his turn, was bidden sharply by her mother to mind her own business.

Tollemache and Yvonne climbed the rocky path together when they began the return journey to Le Faouet. In the rays of the afternoon sun the rough granite boulders sparkled as though they were studded with innumerable small diamonds.

"Haven't you forgiven me yet, Yvonne?" he said, noticing her distrait air.

She almost started, so far away were her thoughts. "Oh, let us forget that stupidity," she replied. "I was thinking of something very different. Tell me, Lorry, has my father ever spoken to you of my mother?"

"No," he said.

"Do you know where she is buried?"

"No."

She sighed. Her light-hearted companion's sudden taciturnity was not lost on her. Neither Madame Pitou, Ingersoll's friend and landlady during eighteen years, nor Tollemache, who worked with him daily, could read his eyes like Yvonne, and she knew he was acting a part when he smiled because Sainte Barbe's well announced that she would be married at the second asking. And the odd thing was that she had endeavoured to drop the first pin so that it would not fall into the fateful space. None but she herself had noted how it plunged slantwise through the water as though drawn by a lodestone.

Even Tollemache nursed a grievance against the well's divination. "I say," he broke in, "that pin proposition is all nonsense, don't you think?"

For some occult reason she refused to answer as he hoped she would. "You never can tell," she said. "Mere Pitou believes in it, and she has had a long experience of life's vagaries."

From some distance came Madeleine's plaint. "Just imagine! Six times! In six years I shall be twenty-five. I don't credit a word of it—so there! At the last pardon Peridet danced with me all the afternoon."

Even little Barbe was not satisfied. "Mama said the other day," she confided, "that I might be married before I was twenty."

Ingersoll and Mere Pitou, bringing up the rear, were silent; Madame because this hill also was steep, and Ingersoll because of thoughts that came unbidden. In fact, Sainte Barbe had perplexed some of her pilgrims.

"Next Case, Please" and Peasant Dimly Hears His Son Is Dead

The Arbeiter Zeitung, of Vienna, a newspaper devoted to the interests of the workingmen of Austria, prints the following pathetic incident, showing how the war affects every phase of life of the people:

"The scene," says the Arbeiter Zeitung "is in a little village in Bohemia. Wenzel Nekvasil has received some legal paper. Neither he nor his wife can read so his neighbours read it for him telling Nekvasil that it is a summons to appear in the District Court on the 17th at nine o'clock in the morning.

"'Perhaps it is about my son,' said Nekvasil, 'and they may want to tell me some news of him. You know, we have not heard from him in four months.

"At six o'clock on the morning of the 17th Nekvasil, dressed in his black sunday clothes, starts to walk to the District Court, for the road is long and dreary, and it requires at least two hours to get there. When he reaches the court building he is ordered to sit on a bench in the corridor until he is called. There are many others there waiting. After a weary wait of two hours he is called in.

"'You are Herr Wenzel Nekvasil?'

"'Yes, Your Honour.'

"'Very well; on order of the court of this district I am directed to examine you regarding a matter of inheritance.'

"'Yes, Your Honour.'

"'Your son, Franz Nekvasil, nineteen years old, who was with the Landstrum infantry regiment, No—, fell like a hero in battle in East Galicia. Was he your only son?'

"'Yes, Your Honour.'

"'Well, after his death the following were found on his person:

"A.—Assets:—

	Kronen.
Cash money	14.37
Five kopecs, worth seven hellers	.35
A nickel watch	2.40
A memorandum book	.18
An old pocketbook (of no value)	—
Amount of assets	17.30

B.—Liabilities—None.

C.—Actual value of effects 17.30

"'That is what he actually left. Do you understand?'

"'Yes, Your Honour.'

"'As your son left no will or testament, the law will have to take charge of the matter.'

"'Yes, Your Honour.'

"'It is to be ex lege, in accordance with the law. Do you understand.'

"'Yes, Your Honour.'

"'Therefore, you and your wife can only claim one-half of the value of the effects.'

"'Yes, Your Honour.'

"'So I will declare you and your wife the only heirs. Of course, the Surrogates' Court will eventually assign the whole matter over to the District Court.'

"'Yes, Your Honour.'

"'Then you and your wife will receive notice again for examination. There now we are through. Now you will please sign this examination paper.'

"Nekvasil signs by making three crosses.

"'So now you can go. Next, please.'

"Nekvasil goes to the door, but hesitates when he reaches the door.

"'Is there anything else you wish?' asks the official.

"'Pardon, but I am thinking of my son—is he dead?'

"'My dear friend, I thought that was understood. Viventis non datur hereditas—if he were alive there would be no reason for court action. Go home and console yourself with the thought that your only beloved son sacrificed his life on the altar of the Fatherland and died like a hero. The next case, please.'

"Wenzel Nekvasil sadly walks back the two hour stretch to his home in the village.

"That afternoon he and his wife quietly attend to their work; only in the evening, when they both sit silently at their frugal meal, do they give way to their emotions, and both weep bitterly.

"The next case, please."

WOMEN OF CANADA.

Fort Coulonge, Quebec.—"I am happy to tell you that your medicine did me wonderful good. I was troubled with weakness and I tried wines and other things but received very little benefit. I was young at the time and knew very little about medicines till a lady friend came to me with a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I became strong and a year afterward had twins."—Mrs. J. Brady, Fort Coulonge, Quebec.

Thousands of women right here in Canada who are now blessed with robust health cannot understand why thousands of other women continue to worry and suffer when they can obtain for a trifling sum Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which will surely and quickly banish all pain, distress and misery and restore the womanly health.

Young mothers who preserve the charms of face and figure in spite of an increasing family and the care of growing children are always to be envied. "Favorite Prescription" gives the strength and health upon which happy motherhood depends. It enables the mother to nourish the infant life depending on her, and enjoy the happiness of watching the development of a perfectly healthy child.

MEN WHO HIT ZEPPELIN GET $3,000 IN PRIZES

PARIS, Feb. 24.—An eye-witness of the destruction of Zeppelin L-Z 77 by French gunners on Monday, near Revigny, a town which lies nine miles north-west of Bar-Le-Duc, says "The Zeppelins were first sighted by an officer commanding a battery of 75 millimetre guns. The nearest was then about two miles off flying at an altitude of about 5,000 feet and rising rapidly. As soon as the warning reached Revigny five automobiles, with searchlights and with special anti-aircraft guns manned by naval gunners, started in pursuit. These guns threw a shell which is expressly designed to explode on contact with the aluminum-painted covering of the Zeppelins and to burst into flames once it is inside.

"A shell burst behind the Zeppelin, throwing it into strong relief and immediately the gunners seized their opportunity. Another shell passed over the target, but the next of the inflammable type, but the mark squarely about 75 feet from the stern. A few seconds later two other shells went through the rear of the car, badly damaging the steering and elevating mechanism.

"For an instant nothing seemed to happen and then a thin red line crept crept along the side of the airship which showed with a bright ruddy glow as the flames spread and moved upwards. The great mass, now blazing more and more fiercely, descended slowly.

"The cargo of bombs, which there is reason to believe were to have been dropped on the inhabitants of Paris, exploded with a terrific roar as the Zeppelin struck the ground. Fragments of its car were hurled 2,000 feet away and the remainder of the huge frame work collapsed in a heap, the fire continuing to burn for several hours.

"The gun crew which fired the shot that proved fatal to the Zeppelin will receive prizes amounting to 15,000 francs ($3,000). 10,000 frans being awarded by a leading Paris newspaper and 5,000 by Marquis Ornano

MUST EDUCATE THE PUBLIC

Counties Need Information Before Adopting Good Roads System.

TORONTO, Feb. 24.—Conditions created by the war, ignorance of cost and lack of public education on the question generally, were given broadly as the reasons why counties in the province of Ontario had not adopted the county roads systems, by speakers at yesterday's session of the Ontario Good Roads' Association.

Mr. John A. Best, M.P., thought farmers should construct roads from the farms to villages or towns. One of the strongest factors militating against the good roads policy was statute labour. Under that institution some men shirked their share of work, throwing an undue burden on others. "If we find any way to do away with statute labour, we shall have gone a long way towards the solution of the good roads problem," he said. Now was the best time to educate the people, when farmers had got rid of the idea that good roads would be little better than highways for city motorists. The Government had offered 40 per cent. of the cost, he stated, and he urged the people of every county not to hesitate to mortgage their county, for the return would prove the value of the step.

Suffered Constantly FROM HEADACHE.

To suffer from headache makes life miserable, and it takes a person who has been or is subject to headache to describe the suffering and agony that goes along with it. The dull throbbing, the intense pain, sometimes in one part of the head, sometimes in another, is caused by some disturbed condition of the system. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but whatever the cause, the presence of headache clearly shows that there is something wrong somewhere, and unless the cause of the headache is removed, some serious trouble is very liable to assert itself.

The fact that Burdock Blood Bitters reaches the seat of the trouble, and banishes the headache is due to its success in first relieving, and then permanently curing the cause of the trouble.

Mrs. Wallace J. Boyd, Milltown, N.B., writes: "Several years ago I was a constant sufferer from headache. I was all run down, and nothing seemed to do me any good. I read of Burdock Blood Bitters, and decided to give it a trial, and the result was marvellous. The headache stopped at once, and I feel better in every way since. I recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is the oldest and best known blood medicine on the market to-day, having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont

GERMAN OFFICER OBJECTS TO GAS.

That the Germans as a whole do not approve of the use of poisonous gases is the contention of an officer recently captured on the Riga front, according to a London newspaper. The officer, a lieutenant, was asked if the Germans favoured this method of warfare and he replied that the intellectual parts of the army condemned this style of fighting. To prove his point he gave the following incident:

"In Poland after the retreat of our army a cemetery remained near one of the farms, where hundreds of victims of stifling gas had been buried. In this cemetery there was a board containing an inscription expressing abhorrence of this method of waging war. Later, however, it was removed by order of a higher commander. An officer ordered that the board should be re-erected in its former position, remaking at the same time that it containing nothing but the truth. This officer, however, suffered much unpleasantness from his chiefs afterward."

CRONES IS STILL AT LARGE

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Aided by a photograph of Jean Crones and a detailed description of the chef of the University Club of Chicago, who is accused of attempting to poison Archbishop Mundelein and hundreds of others at a dinner by putting poison in the soup, Captain Tunney was hopeful of apprehending Crones soon. Inspector Gray and Captain Tunney admitted that they had a hard job to tackle, inasmuch as it is believed that Crones is being harboured by other anarchists. By some persons it was thought that his letters to a morning newspaper of this city were perhaps mailed by a friend of Crones.

All the post offices in this city were watched by detectives yesterday, and every person who mailed a letter addressed to the newspaper was followed if there was any suspicion concerning the handwriting on the envelopes. Crones has bragged that the police must get him by to-night, as he intends to leave New York.

"We have a few slight leads," said Guy Scull, Fifth Deputy Police Commissioner, "and that's about all we have to work on."

Nevertheless, it is known that several persons who know Crones well have volunteered their services to the police to help in finding Crones, and last night and early to-day these men, accompanied by detectives, were scouring the city in automobiles searching anarchists' haunts for the missing chef.

Police Describe Crones.

Besides the photograph of Crones, which is supposed to have been taken about eighteen months ago when he was a little more than twenty-two years old, the police yesterday handed to the newspaper men a description of the anarchist. Here it is:

"Jean Crones is about twenty-four years old, five feet seven inches tall, weighs 150 pounds, and has dark, crisp, bushy hair. His complexion is pale. He has high cheek bones and a piercing look in his eyes. When greeted he always smiles. He may have a small dark spot near his right eye. He continually smiles when talking and when he so smiles he shows a depression in both cheeks and his chin. When last seen he wore a dark suit and a light overcoat. His headgear may consist of a cap or soft hat. His shoulders are stooped and he walks fast, with a long swinging gait. Crones wears a ring designed with a wolf's or lion's head with a small diamond in the mouth. It cost $20. Crones is very quiet, neat appearing, and usually travels alone. When sitting his knees shake as though from nervousness. He is a German and speaks English with a decided German accent. He also is believed to have a slight knowledge of French which he has learned in the kitchens of the different places in which he has worked. His brother, Paul, is said to be a naturalized Englishman and married to a Scottish girl. Paul was born in Cologne, Germany, and Jean is said to have declared to the Ellis Island officials when he came here that his birthplace was Urdingen, Germany. Jean Crones is said to have been in love with a girl who lived in Antwerp, Belgium, to whom he often wrote long letters. Crones may have dyed his hair."

The police believe that Crones is a maniac and a dangerous person to be at large. The detectives searching for him have instructions to be quick on the trigger, as Crones may be willing to blow up himself and his captors with a bomb.

Believe Publicity Excites Him.

It also is the belief that the publicity he has had further excited Crones' mind. The police got in touch with Paul Crones, at Middletown, Conn., and it is declared that he is willing to assist them to find his anarchist brother. The photograph of Jean Crones has been forwarded to the Chicago police.

There was a special guard in and around police headquarters last night, it being believed that Crones in a vain-glorious mood might go there with the idea of blowing up that building.

It seems that a postal card from Balde Barnesto, a brother-in-law of Antonio Coda, who was questioned by the Chicago police a few days ago as being a friend of Crones, has been received in Chicago, and the police of that city have asked the New York police to hold the writer. What was written on the post card was not given out.

Because of Crones' antagonism to Roman Catholic clergy the police have put a special guard at St. Patrick's Cathedral, which also will be there to-day during the services. It was reiterated last evening that Crones evidently was emulating I. T. T. Lincoln, the self-styled German spy, who escaped from a Brooklyn restaurant when in the care of a Deputy United States Marshal.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

HERO'S BROTHER ENDS LIFE.

Francis Pegoud Found Hanging to Tree Near Paris.

PARIS, Feb. 21.—The body of Francis Pegoud, brother of Adolphe Pegoud, the aviator, who was killed in action nearly six months ago, was found by a passerby yesterday, hanging from a tree in the vicinity of Versailles. Pegoud, apparently a suicide, was 36 years old, and had been employed in a munition factory. He had been depressed owing to his brother's death and to financial difficulties, it was said.

How to avoid Operations

These Three Women Tell How They Escaped the Dreadful Ordeal of Surgical Operations.

Hospitals are great and necessary institutions, but they should be the last resort for women who suffer with ills peculiar to their sex. Many letters on file in the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., prove that a great number of women after they have been recommended to submit to an operation have been made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here are three such letters. All sick women should read them.

Marinette, Wis.—"I went to the doctor and he told me I must have an operation for a female trouble, and I hated to have it done as I had been married only a short time. I would have terrible pains and my hands and feet were cold all the time. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was cured, and I feel better in every way. I give you permission to publish my name because I am so thankful that I feel well again."—Mrs. Fred Brenke, Marinette, Wis.

Detroit, Mich.—"When I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was so run down with female troubles that I could not do anything, and our doctor said I would have to undergo an operation. I could hardly walk without help so when I read about the Vegetable Compound and what it had done for others I thought I would try it. I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and used them according to directions. They helped me and today I am able to do all my work and I am well."—Mrs. Thos. Dwyer, 999 Milwaukee Ave., East, Detroit, Mich.

Bellevue, Pa.—"I suffered more than tongue can tell with terrible bearing down pains and inflammation. I tried several doctors and they all told me the same story, that I never could get well without an operation and I just dreaded the thought of that. I also tried a good many other medicines that were recommended to me and none of them helped me until a friend advised me to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. The first bottle helped, I kept taking it and now I don't know what it is to be sick any more and I am picking up in weight. I am 20 years old and weigh 145 pounds. It will be the greatest pleasure to me if I can have the opportunity to recommend it to any other suffering woman."—Miss Irene Froelicher, 1923 Manhattan St., North Side, Bellevue, Pa.

If you would like special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Germans Fear Spring Drive

However, Assure the Belgians That Allies Cannot Regain Their Country.

ROTTERDAM, Feb. 24.—In order to depress the Belgians remaining in their own land the Germans are spreading stories as to the probable duration of the war and the impossibility of the Allies' attempts to regain Belgium by force of arms.

The estimate of many officers is that the war will last for another two years, during which time, they assert, the Allies will be exhausted, while Grmany, now that a new road is opened to the East, is perfectly assured of all she needs, despite England's blockade. On the other hand, many of the Germans are far from comfortable over the threatened spring offensive of the Allies, about which apparently they talk more than the Allies themselves.

In many places immidiately behind the fighting line they are actually assisting some of the inhabitants to leave the country. Some women who have come from Roulers for assistance declare they were advised to leave by German officers, who helped them to make up their minds to leave by threatening that if the German army was forced to retreat they would destroy every house in the place.

While this form of "frightfulness" is going on in West Flanders, and among the French speaking Belgians, the Germans are doing their best to ingratiate themselves with the Flemish section, and granting many facilities to this party to increase its hold on the country. At Antwerp, although severe, the attitude of the Germans is almost mild compared with that of the government at Brussels, the extraordinary keenness of the Teuton to divide the people in the hope of eventually obtaining on its western frontier a more friendly disposed population being a source of considerable annoyance to Belgians in the western parts of the country, whose comments bring upon them harsh punishment.

The Germans have made the University of Ghent a Flemish institution and in many other parts of the country have opened schools where Flemish and German are spoken. Next to their keenness to annex the country there is nothing about which they are now more determined than the stifling of all French influence in Belgium.

THE DRAWN DOWN MOUTH.

The mouth is perhaps the most mobile of all features so let us try to retain an expression of sweetness and youth.

To encourage upward trend of the mouth we must begin at the foundation of beauty, character. We must encourage beautiful, kind and pure thoughts. We must think of the sweet, joyful things in life, not of the discouraging, wicked ones. The next step towards developing a beautiful mouth is a full set of teeth in a perfect condition.

There are several exercises which keep the lips mobile and flexible. Whistling is good if not overdone. Blowing out a candle or an imaginary candle light is also good. But best of all is to toss a feathery dandelion into the air and blow it about, laughing at the sport which is derived from this, or blow soap bubbles. Blowing them about the room is good lip exercise.

Do not bring the lips tightly together. That spoils the mouth, adds lines and wrinkles, and makes the face old. Always let the lips fall lightly together.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The popularity of the jacket blouse has never been so great as at present. The idea is a good one at all times, but it will be found especially helpful when making alterations.

The frock shown in our illustration has a plain, straight skirt, made with a plain panel in the centre of the front, and with side pleats turning backward from this and meeting in the centre of the back, where the closing is placed.

The jacket has the body sections entirely separate from the peplum. The bodice buttons in the centre of the front and fits the figure without fulness. It has a high neck, with a collar of moderate size lying upon the shoulders. The peplum is arranged in four pieces, which are very slightly shaped, so as to spread at the lower edge. These are joined to the bodice, and a belt of ribbon, silk or other material conceals the joining.

Frequently the jacket of such a dress is made of satin, silk or plain material, while the skirt is of taffetas, plaid or striped goods. Again, they may be alike. When wash materials are used the jacket is generally of a darker color than the skirt, even when both are of the same fabric.

The dress pattern, No. 7,618, is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Medium size requires for blouse 1⅝ yards of 36 inch material, for skirt and trimming 1⅝ yards of 44 inch goods.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Owner of 117,000 Acres and Possessor of $1,000,000 Income, Working for Commission

LONDON, Feb. 23.—John Chrichton-Stuart, Marquis of Bute, three times an earl, thrice a viscount, six times a baronet, a baronet of Nova Scotia, Hereditary Keeper of Rothesay Castle, Lord-Lieutenant of Bute, and ground landlord of a considerable portion of Cardiff, is a private in the "Devil's Own," otherwise the Inns of Court Officers' Training Corps.

This is an instance of how the new rule, by which not even the president of a Territorial Association can get a commission right away, is being observed in the case of one of Britain's wealthiest peers.

Many of the Marquis's titles come to him from the "Jack Boot" of curious fame, favourite of George II.'s mother, and the most hated man who ever held office in the British Isles, but through the Crichtons and Stuarts he goes back to the beginning of Scots history.

Lord Bute, who is thirty-four, married in 1905 Augusta, daughter of Sir Henry Bellingham (pronounced Bellinjum), of a house as ancient as his own. The Butes, who are close kin of the Howards of Norfolk, are among the heads of the most exclusive Catholic set, but in point of fact neither of them cares for society, and they live chiefly in Scotland.

Lady Bute has had other preoccupations in the years of her married life, the first of which brought additions to he nursery, and she has now four boys and two girls. The heir, Lord Dumfries, is in his ninth year.

The Marquis is exceedingly wealthy. His income is said to exceed $1,000,000 a year, and he owns 117,000 acres. His favourite dress is the kilt.

There is little doubt that when the Marquis finishes his training in the "Devil's Own" he will take a commission in a Scottish regiment, and almost certainly a kilted one.

Lord Bute has been honorary colonel of the Fourth Highland Brigade, R.G.A., and president of its Territorial Force Association, but he takes the war much more seriously than to suppose that these ornamental positions will fit him for service.

It is understood in Cardiff that his determination to join the Army is largely the result of the death of his brother, Lord Ninian Crichton-Stuart, M.P., who fell in leading the Sixth Welsh Territorials in France, but this is not to say that he is only now "doing his bit." On the contrary, few men have done more. Since the start of the war Cardiff Castle has been used by the Third Welsh, who, as the reserve unit of the famous Second Welsh, have sent out drafts almost daily. Indeed, one of Lord Bute's proudest memories must be that his South Wales home, as the headquarters of the "Suicide Club," as the dauntless Second Welsh are known at the Front, has housed more recruits destined for the firing line by the quickest route than any other of Britain's stately mansions.

Wealthy Girl To Speak For Self

BOULDER, Colo., Feb. 24.—Before long Miss Fredonia Bergson, of Altona, this state, who is to inherit her father's $100,000 ranch and other property, will have exercised her leap year privilege and chosen her husShe made known her intention at a party which she gave at her father's home.

Miss Bergson assured her guests that she intends to enter upon her search for a husband with the utmost sincerity. Hitherto she has respected the wishes of her father, Peter Bergson, that she form no sentimental attachment until she had completed her eighteenth year, and though she has had many suitors, Miss Bergson has shown none of them special favour.

She became eighteen years of age recently, and her announcement, her friends say, is quite in keeping with her determination of character.

"The leap year privilege is usually regaded as a jest," Miss Bergson said. "I intend to make it a fact. There is no reason why a young woman should not propose when she sees a man who she believes would make her happy.

"There will be nothing sly about my method, none of those tricks that are supposed to be so dear to the feminine heart.

"When I find the man I want I shall propose to him unhesitatingly, and I shall not weep if he does not care to accept my heart. He will have the same privilege to reject that I shall ask."

Miss Bergson says she does not care what the colour of her husband's eyes may be, but that he will have to measure up to certain standards.

"First of all, he will have to be a real man," she asserted. "I don't care whether he is highly educated or not. Even though he has a college education, I shall not discard him for that if he fulfills my ideal in other ways. He must be big and masterful — no little, insignificant specimen for me.

"He must be big enough to crush me if he wanted to, but too gentle of heart to want to. He must like to live in the open. He must be able to manage a ranch. You know, I'll own a large one some day. He must be able to prove to me that he has had at least one real fight with a man as big as himself. But I don't want a bruiser, for I have two dear little dogs, and he must be willing to be kind and loving toward them if he wants to have me ask him to become my husband."

PERMANENT CURE OF PILES CERTIFIED BY MINISTER

Sixteen Years Ago This Man Was Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment—Had Suffered Keenly For Twelve Years

You might almost say that there is only one actual cure for Piles, and that is Dr. Chase's Ointment. Every day this conclusion is corroborated by reports from persons who had tried one thing and another without success. Some have even been operated on, only to have the old trouble return, and finally to obtain cure by use of this ointment.

Why not avoid waste of time, waste of money and needless risk with operations by using Dr. Chase's Ointment at once?

Some will say "that is all very well for itching Piles, but my trouble is from bleeding Piles." Well, here is a letter from a man who had bleeding Piles for twelve years, and suffered most keenly. For sixteen years he has had no return of the old trouble and naturally considers the cure permanent.

Mr. O. B. Peters, Salmon Arm, B. C., writes: "I was troubled with bleeding Piles for about twelve years, and suffered everything but death. I was so bad I could scarcely walk about, and though I tried many things, could get no relief. At that time I lived at Shuniar Lake, Ont., and a friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, saying he would guarantee cure. Less than two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me. That is sixteen years ago, and I am O.K. yet, so think you can consider the cure permanent. I cannot praise Dr. Chase's Ointment enough, as it saved me from a great deal of pain and suffering."

Rev. W. J. Beamish, Salmon Arm, B.C., writes: "I have been acquainted with Mr. O. B. Peters, and have always found him to be a man of his word. I can therefore most thoroughly endorse what Mr. Peters has written concerning the merits and value of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

A test of Dr. Chase's Ointment will soon convince you of its merits. Relief comes almost immediately, and cure follows persistent treatment. For sale by all dealers. Sample box free if you mention this paper and write direct to Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Bonaparte Helps In War as Civilian

Forbidden to Serve France as a Soldier, Prince Roland Directs Making of Maps

Has Given Most of His Time to Science, in Which He Has Made Great Achievements.

PARIS, Feb. 24.—Prince Roland Bonaparte, the only male descendant of the oldest branch of the house of Bonaparte having male representatives living, and consequently head of the family, according to the rules of primageniture, is taking a modest part in the war. Excluded from active service by the law of 1886, as a member of a family having reigned over France, he is attached as a civilian auxiliary to the geographical section of the army, and has helped direct the making of the millions of maps the field forces have required.

"I would have been glad to fight for France in the field," he said to a correspondent, "and I would have served disinterestedly. I have no imperial ambitions and no other desire than to serve as I can the cause of my country and the interests of science."

Physically, Prince Roland loks little like "The Little Corporal"; he is 6 feet in height and is built in proportion; what is characteristically Bonaparte about him is his energy, his Corsican complexion, and a nose that would look like Napoleon's had it no moustache under it.

"Yes, I suppose I am really the head of the house of Bonaparte," he replied to the correspondent's question, "but it doesn't mater much since empires and emperors have very little interest for me; and there has been a wonderful advantage in not being an Emperor nor even a pretender. I have gotten out of life a wonderful lot of fun and profit that I would never have known had I been an Emperor. I have climbed the Alps 260 times; Napoleon did it but once, and then it was neither for pleasure nor scientific research, but with the responsibility of a forthcoming military campaign on his mind. Pretending to the imperial sceptre is useless anyway, since the Bonapartist doctrine is the plebiscite."

When Prince Roland was excluded from the army after graduating from Saint Cyr, he turned to the study of the human race under the anthropologist, Dr. Roca. He has since seen nearly every specimen of humanity on its native soil. The zoology of the sea, botany, geology, geography, glaciers, and aviation subsequently occupied his attention in turn and furnished him with the material for eighty scientific works. Some of Prince Roland's discoveries in plant life have been of great value to the scientific world, as confirming the theory of the existence of an ancient continent in the Pacific, comprising parts of South America, Australia Madagascar and India.

The Prince lives on the Avenue d'Iena, in a spacious mansion big enough to be called a palace, but resembling more the quarters of an important public institution. There is an air of business all about the place. In addition to a million and more of natural history specimens, all catalogued and described in voluminous publications, there is a library of 200,000 scientific works.

The Prince's latest publication treats of 948 groups of ferns, among which are thirty-five new species and twenty-four hitherto unknown forms of old species. These latest discoveries bring the Prince's collection of ferns up to about 351,000 different varieties; his botanical collection all together comprises 900,000 to 1,000,000 specimens.

Prince Roland has very agreeable recollections of two visits to the United States, in the course of which he studied the country thoroughly. What appealed to him most was the remarkable development of American universities and the means for scientific research.

"America is doing wonders in scientific research," he said. "You are devoting more money to it than any other nation and science has now gone so deeply into the mysteries of nature that much money is required for further researches; America will one day lead the world."

As to the war and its complications, the Prince is obliged to maintain same reserve on account of his delicate position as member of a proscribed family and as father-in-law of Prince George, the brother of the King of Greece.

"When a nation goes to war," he said, however, "it should wage war to the limit, and when the adversary resorts to methods not countenanced by usage or by the common rules of humanity he should be paid in kind. I have no criticism to make on the policy adopted by the United States; it has occurred to me, however, that President Wilson is a prodigious note writer."

FEWER JOBLESS IN PARIS.

Most Persons Thrown Out of Employment at Beginning of War Are Again at Work.

PARIS Feb. 24.—No more remarkable signs of the business revival in Paris can be furnished than by the figures published of the progressive decline in the numbers of unemployed, especially during the last year.

Between September 23 and October 24, 1914, when statistics are first available, the number of relief tickets issued shows that the total of those who were without work or means was 257,436. This was just after the battle of the Marne, when the crisis was at its height. In the fortnight between February 14 and March 1, 1915, this number had dwindled to 150,864, or a diminution of nearly 70,000.

Since then the decrease has been regular and rapid. Between November 20 and December 4, 1915, there were but 78,291 of both sexes out of work. It is in the liberal professions that this decrease is the least marked; but the original numbers, both of men and women, in this category, were never very great.

OIL $5 A GALLON IN TURK CAPITAL

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 23. — The Esbjerg (Denmark) Avis prints an interview with a Danish officer of a merchant vessel who has just returned from Constantinople.

The officer states that prices of nearly everything in Turkey now surpass belief. The people are glad if a few articles can be bought at double the usual price.

Coal and coke no longer are obtainable, and wood, the only fuel on the market, has risen in price 200 per cent.

A gallon of petroleum is worth $5.

There is the greatest difficulty in obtaining bread, salt and flour, prices of which have been quadrupled. Sugar is 850 per cent. dearer, and rice is about 1,000 per cent. higher.

Only mutton is cheap, owing to the millions o sheep in Turkey, but that soon will become expensive, says the officer, on account of the heavy exports to Germany.

CANADA'S TRADE NEARLY DOUBLE IN TEN MONTHS.

OTTAWA, Feb. 23. — Canada's total trade for the first ten months of the current fiscal year has reached the enormous sum of $1,159,933,598 as against $809,778,427 for the corresponding period last year. The increase is due to the heavy increase in exports, which totalled 595 millions, as against 335 millions for the preceding year. Imports show a falling off, the total being 425 millions as against 510 during the preceding year. The balance of trade in favour of exports for the ten months was, therefore, in the neighbourhood of 170 million dollars.

For the month of January duty collected amounted to $9,902,556, as compared with $5,125,009 for January of 1915. For the ten months ending with January 31, the total duty collected was $81,267,980, as compared with $63,706,075.

For the month of January imports totalled 62 millions, as against 31 millions for January of 1915. Exports totalled 80 millions, as against 29 millions for January, 1915.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, attractive folks aren't wanted around so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

THE GERMAN OFFENSIVE AT VERDUN IS SHOWING SIGNS OF SLACKENING

No Attacks Were Made Through the Night and the Artillery Fighting Has Become Less Violent With the French Artillery Holding Its Own Along the Twenty-five Mile Front---French Are Organizing New Positions and Are Ready For the Next Assault.

RUSSIANS SCORE AGAIN OVER THE TURKS

PARIS, Feb. 25.—The Crown Prince's offensive in the Verdun region is showing signs of slackening, the War Office announced this afternoon. No attacks were made during the night it was stated, and the artillery fighting has become less violent.

The French artillery is now holding its own along a twenty-five-mile front, and there is every indication that the German offensive temporarily at least, has been checked.

The French, however, are organizing new positions behind Beaumont and on the heights east of Champagneville south of Ornes. Taking advantage of the lull in infantry actions they are making strong preparations to meet an expected renewal of heavy Teutonic assaults.

Russians Capture New Turkish Positions

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Feb. 25.—An official despatch from Teheran says: "After a series of battles in Persia the remains of the adversary troops were reorganized and concentrated in the region of Kermanshah and with the help of German and Turkish sappers occupied and fortified two mountain passes. News has now been received that our troops dislodged the enemy and are now pursuing the Turks who are in full retreat toward Kermanshah. Our forces captured three field guns, one mountain gun, a quantity of shells, ammunition waggons and field machine guns.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 25.—Severe blizzards and snowstorms are hindering the pursuit of Turks fleeing from Erzerum according to Tiflis despatches to-day. The Russian right wing, however, is making rapid progress toward Risch east of Trebizond. In Persia the Slavs have dislodged the Turks from powerfully fortified positions in Bideswith and Sakhne mountain passes. The Turks are retreating toward Kermanshah pursued by the Russians.

FRENCH CHECKING THE DRIVE ON VERDUN

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The French are now checking the great German drive on Verdun, and appear to be holding their own, except at a few minor points, according to special despatches from Paris to-day.

The Crown Prince's legions, sweeping southward, are now under heavy fire from three of the Verdun forts. At the same time they are exposed to a murderous fire from the French field redoubts and the trenches in advanced positions before the fortress.

The French artillery has maintained such a heavy bombardment that the Teutons have been unable to bring up needed supplies' trains, according to a Paris despatch.

Great battle fleets of French and German aeroplanes are in constant clasp high above the wood, and engaged in hurling down bombs upon the enemy artillery positions.

The check reported to have been administered to the advancing Germans may be only temporary. All Paris despatches to-day agreed that the titanic struggle in the Meuse woods marks the beginning of the Germans' greatest offensive blow since the drive on Paris was defeated at the Marne early in the war. One despatch quoted from what purported to be an order of the day issued by a German corps commander, informing his troops that they were bent on their "last offensive in France."

Germans Lose Heavily at Ypres

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 25.—The Telegraaf estimated to-day that the German losses on the Ypres front in the last three weeks have approached 17,000.

10,000 Prisoners Is The Berlin Claim

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, Feb. 25.—The War Office to-day claims the capture of six French villages five miles north of Verdun. The prisoners taken by the Germans in the recent offensive number ten thousand. Four villages were taken on the east bank of the Meuse river.

GREAT EXCITEMENT

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Excitement raged through every department of the Government to-day as conflicting forces fought over the programme to be adopted by the United States in their dispute with Germany.

The President after an hour's conference with House leaders obtained the promise only that they would refrain from interfering up to the point where they thought it necessary to avoid war. The President's cabinet after a two-hour session, declared itself solidly behind the President's determination not to concede to the demand that Americans be warned to keep off armed merchantment. It was resolved that the Lusitania case should not be closed while Germany's new decree threatened to invalidate her promise already given. The opposition in the Senate to the President took a new form. A resolution, by Jones of Washington, asking the President not to break off diplomatic relations with any country, and not to place the country in a position where it could not with honour avoid war.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The State Department to-day despatched a protest to Great Britain against the seizure of the vessel China in the Pacific several days ago.

Forced To Scuttle Their Latest Prize

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The British steamer Westburn, which was taken into Santa Cruz, Tenerife (Canary Island) by a prize crew from the German commerce raider that captured the liner Appam and sunk many other British ships, has been scuttled outside that port by her Teuton captors, according to a despatch received by Lloyd's to-day. The German officer had asked the hospitality of the Spanish Government, pending the making of repairs, but was informed he would have to leave in 24 hours or the ship would be interned. Whereupon he landed 326 prisoners taken from six British and one Belgium vessel, and in three hours steamed outside of Spanish water and sunk the ship, the crew returning to port in small boats to be interned.

PRESIDENT WILSON IS STILL STANDING FIRM

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Argument by Speaker Clark, Democratic House Leader Kitchin and Chairman Flood, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee to-day failed to move President Wilson from his policy toward Germany.

After nearly an hour's conference the President and House leaders were still in disagreement on the question of warning Americans to stay off armed merchantmen. That no action would be taken by Congress to-day at least, was the upshot of the conference.

The President emphatically told the House leaders he would not budge from his plan of insisting that Germany recognize every American right.

LIEUT. WALLIS ARRIVED HOME THIS MORNING

Ald. Edgar Extended Civic Welcome —Just Out of Hospital—Lieutenant Home For a Rest

INJURED IN ACTION

It would have been a lonely homecoming for Lieutenant Harold Wallis this morning had not the city been represented by Alderman Edgar, who extended to the young officer a cordial greeting on behalf of the Council and citizens, and drove him to the residence of his aunt, Mrs. Roger, 500 Park street, where he was received by his mother, with the glad relief of a maternal reunion, and by Mrs. Roger, who were waiting for him.

Lieut. Wallis enlisted at Valcartier as a private in the 16th Battalion with the First Contingent, and was through Langemarck. He was later wounded and has been suffering from the physical experiences through which he passed. Ex-Mayor Buller's Christmas greeting card from the city was received by Lieut. Wallis while he was convalescing in a British hospital. He still feels the effects of his endurances, and is now home for a further rest. On numerous occasions he saw many Peterborough chaps whom he had known here. Lieut. Wallis is remembered in Peterborough as a Collegiate student, and as a promising player with Jack Thirnbeck's speedy "Chieftains" that cleaned up everything in their class. Lieut. Wallis expressed his appreciation of the thoughtfulness shown by the presence of Alderman Edgar as a reminder of the city's further interest in him. Resting this afternoon he wished to forget his experiences for a time, and was glad to be back in Peterborough for a rest.

The programme included several musical numbers, also recitations. There was a large attendance and the proceeds will be turned over to the Belgian Relief Fund.

FALLIS IS BADLY BEATEN

Peel Returns Liberal Candidate by 305 Majority

BRAMPTON, Feb. 24.—Peel county has vindicated itself by giving the Liberal candidate, Mr. W. J. Lowe, a majority of 335, with six subdivisions yet to be heard from. The electors, both Conservative and Liberal, have demonstrated to the Province and to the Dominion that they have no room in their midst for a profiteering politician. Resentful of the action of Mr. James R. Fallis, former Conservative member, is placing himself between the farmers and the Dominion Government for personal gain, and his attempts to square himself by giving his share of the profits to the Peel Battalion, the electors turned out and polled one of the biggest votes on record. Every possible vote in Brampton was cast, and Mr. Lowe was given a majority of 164, as against Mr. Fallis' majority of 74 last election.

Of the 40 subdivisions in the constituency 37 were heard from. Of these 34 gave majorities for Mr. Lowe and 13 for Mr. Fallis. Three subdivisions could not be heard from to-night.

Lowe's aggregate majorities	658
Fallis' aggregate majorities	393
Lowe's net majority	335

MANY UNITS ON HUNT FOR RECRUITS IN CITY JUST NOW

52nd Battery and 59th and 80th Battalions Competing With the 93rd For Men But in Spite of the Disadvantage the Local Unit Continues to Grow---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

With the 93rd, 80th and 59th Battalions and the 52nd Battery all looking for men in Peterborough, it is evident that this city's record in enlistment has not been overlooked. It, however, is rather a handicap on the Peterborough Battalion that the outside units are allowed to work in this field, as every recruit secured by another battalion makes it just that much more difficult to fill the 93rd. The latter, however, are holding their own, and are steadily increasing in strength.

At the recruiting meeting in the Armouries on Sunday night Dr. L. H. Hughes, of Toronto will be the speaker.

The euchre contest at the recruiting rooms last night was a very enjoyable event.

Word has been received that Pte. Edward Dolemap, of the 21st Battalion, who was wounded some time ago, has recovered and has returned to duty with his battalion. Pte. Doleman's home is at 44 Lafayette Avenue.

The Lakefield Platoon of the 93rd Battalion and their friends had a very enjoyable social evening last night. The festivities commenced with a sleigh ride, after which the merry-makers returned to the Town Hall, where a supper was served and dancing and card playing indulged in. The affair was a great success. Capt. Bygott and Lieut. de Puyjalon were in attendance, and among the other guests were Sergt. Carter, of the 59th Battalion, and Pte. Elmer Johnston and other Peterborough members of the 93rd Battalion.

LINDSAY, Feb. 24.—The funeral of the late Lieut.-Col. F. Holmes Hopkins, B.A., LL.B., who was accidentally killed in a motor accident in England on January 30, took place here to-day under military auspices. The cortege left the residence of his father, G. H. Hopkins, K.C., at 11 o'clock and proceeded to St. Paul's Anglican Church. The pall-bearers were: Sergt.-Major Darraugh, Sergt. Major Ince, Quartermaster-Sergts. Coyle and Turner, Sergts. Doherty, Tracy, Edwards and Boyle. The honorary pall-bearers were: Lieut.-Col. Johnston, 93rd Battalion, Peterborough; Lieut.-Col. Smart, Port Hope; Lieut.-Col. Farewell, Port Hope; Lieut.-Col. Grant, Orillia; Lieut.-Col. Anderson, Lindsay; Lieut.-Col. Walker, Peterborough; Lieut.-Col. Ketcheson, Belleville, and Lieut.-Col. Adams, Belleville.

The service was under the direction of the Rector, Rev. Canon Marsh, assisted by Rev. Mr. MacConachie and Rev. Capt. C. G. Williams, Chaplain of the 109th Battalion. Canon Marsh, in his address, spoke feelingly of the many excellent qualities of the young officer, who, under his pastorate, had received the sacrament of baptism and confirmation. From the church the cortege proceeded to the Armouries, where the body lay in state until 2.30, the Armouries being visited by hundreds of friends and citizens. At 3 o'clock the military service began, followed by an address by the Rev. Capt. Williams. At the cemetery the usual military honours were paid.

Lieut.-Col. Hopkins, who was a partner with his father in the practice of law, was a native of Lindsay. He went with the 1st Expeditionary Force to England, and at the time of the accident had just returned from the trenches in France, where he had some exciting experiences. Lieut. R. H. Hopkins, brother of deceased, who was with him at the time of the accident, escaped with a few bruises.

Armourer Sergt. G. Howarth of the 80th Batt., Belleville, is home on leave for a few days. Sergt. Howarth has just returned from Quebec where he was attending the Armourers Course of Instruction at the Ross Rifle factory. He reports a very profitable and successful course and was fortunate in heading the class with a percentage of 99.09 per cent. on the examinations, the highest yet obtained by any attending those classes since the war started. The course included the Ross Rifle mark III., Colt and Smith, Wesson revolvers, and Lewis, Colt and Maxim Machine guns.

It Was Some Game.

The Band and the Signallers of the 93rd Battalion crowded more new hockey tactics and surprises into the game at Brock St. Rink last evening than has been seen in any contest since the national pastime was evolved from the one-time popular amusement "shinny-on-your-own-side." The Signallers won by 9 goals to 2, but the score was a mere detail that did not seem to interest anybody very much except the Signalling Sergeant who went up in the air enough to qualify for the balloon section. The Band supplied most of the

$3,095.95 Collected Yesterday For Belgians

Brings the Total Up to $7,625.15 Towards the Desired Ten Thousand—Campaign Closes To-night

HAVE YOU GIVEN YET?

Wednesday's collection,	$2090.20
Thursday's collection ..	$3095.95
City Council's grant	2000.00
Total	$7,625.15

The splendid figures noted above, speak volumes for the hearty response and kind generosity of the people of Peterborough to the movement now in progress, to raise ten thousand dollars for the relief of the suffering Belgians. It is expected that when the campaign closes to-night the desired amount will be exceeded. Adjt. McElhiney, who is covering the factories, has reported the result of only a small part of his canvas, but when the return of all the cards he has put out has been made, it is expected that an exceedingly creditable amount will be rolled up. It is the duty of all citizens to help along the worthy cause, to give something, however small the amount may be, to relieve the hunger and privation of these people who have done so much in the fight for liberty and right. If you have not already been canvassed, make your donation to-day, and thus assist in making a grand showing for the city of Peterborough.

Standing of the Teams.

When the Captains and teams met for supper at the committee rooms last evening, all spoke enthusiastically of the day's work, and when the various leaders announced their respective amounts, they were received with prolonged cheers.

Mr. Logie (Capt.)	$904.05
Walter Stocker (Capt.)	676.45
Jas. Picard (Capt.)	639.65
W. H. Dunsford (Capt.)	776.00
Jas. Edgar (Capt.)	648.15
R. B. Rogers (Capt.)	646.00
Basil Hall (Capt.)	239.75
W. J. Oke (Capt.)	181.80
Adjt. McElhiney (Capt.)	131.40

—(Incomplete)

Both Adjt. McElhiney and Fire Chief Howard stated that they preferred withholding their report until to-night. They had issued some fifteen hundred cards which they expected to be returned to-day.

The Mayor's Remarks.

His Worship Mayor Duffus was present last evening and took occasion to congratulate the several teams on the splendid results achieved. The basic principle of charity permeated this great undertaking and largely on this account it would be successful. It was a great inspiration to see all classes pulling together in such a worthy enterprise. Lieut.-Col. Logie recently said that this great world trouble had done more, than anything else, to bring people of all denominations and classes together. Incidentally His Worship asked "Why should not a splendid business organization like this gathering constitute our Board of Trade?" What an assistance it would be to the City Council, in the promotion of civic improvement and other municipal legislation.

Notes.

Joe Maher received a telephone call from two different sources this morning from parties who felt yesterday that they were giving all they could afford to give, to other campaigns. This morning he was asked to call and received two much appreciated subscriptions.

Joe Maher and R. M. Glover, on Joe Picard's team, had a very pleasing experience in the Utilities Office yesterday afternoon. The male members of the staff were on the list and responded handsomely. All the young ladies in the office, without solicitation, asked for cards, and filled them out for amounts which helped these members greatly in their returns yesterday.

Chief Howard and Adjt. McElhiney accused R. B. Rogers' team of "stealing the Brewery" from their list of factories. The Chief and the Adjutant went over yesterday afternoon but it had been previously "done". "They didn't even ask us if we had a mouth" the Chief was heard to remark last night.

LIKE A VISIT TO THE FRONT ARE THE WAR PICTURES

"Fighting In France" The Official Pictures Taken For The French Government to be Shown Under The Auspices of The Examiner

A WONDERFUL EXHIBITION

A visit to the Grand on Thursday, Friday or Saturday, of next week is like a "visit to the front." Everything that goes on on the fighting line is seen. A tourist in the north of France to-day, armed with a pass from Gen. Joffre himself, could not see more than these films show—in fact, not so much.

From the stirring views of the march past of the "Steel Walls of France" at the grand review, at which one actually is standing nearer to Gen. Joffre and King George of England than the luckiest visitor to the front could get, one jumps to the warfare in the skies and sees the swift flying machines, after being loaded with deadly bombs, soar away. There are two of these pictures of which no audience ever gets enough.

Then with a turn of the reel one sees how the enemy aviators are hoodwinked. A forest is seen, and what appears to be a perfectly good and proper row of high bushes bounds the wood just as one would expect a wood to be bounded. Suddenly all these bushes fall down and out rush immense armoured motor cars literally carrying this marvelous fake hedge with them.

Hedge Held Up By Cyclists.

To conceal the hiding force from the spies in the skies, the French have cut all the bushes at the roots, but the entire hedge is held up by men on bicycles, who ride out of the way as the motor cars swing out on the given signal to advance to the attack. Yet not once does a single branch of this long row of bushes quiver or give the slightest sign to the enemy that it is not what it appears to be, the same old hedge that has been there every time the aviators flew over and inspected it.

The burial of the dead scene tells its own grim, awful story. It is but a glimpse, a peep, as it were, at the truth that all sides of the appalling war may be realized. Death has ceased to have terrors for the men carrying out this last duty for friend and foe alike. But how their hearts must be scared with pain and sorrow.

All phases of the fighting are shown in these official motion pictures, which were taken by order of the Great General Staff of the French army for the national archives of France, and were lent by the French Government to the New York World, through its war correspondent, E. Alexander Powell.

The pictures have been shown in Montreal by the Star, in Ottawa by the Journal, in London by the Advertiser, and in several other large centres, and in each case under the auspices of a newspaper. The price of admission is only 15c for the top gallery, and reserved seats 25 and 35c. As soon as the plan is open telephone your order for seats to the Opera House.

Paardeberg Tea To-morrow Afternoon

It is to be hoped that all the Daughters of the Empire and their friends will remember the tea to be given by the Order in Peterborough on Saturday afternoon February 26th, in the tea room at Turnbull Company's store, to celebrate the Festival of Paardeberg Day.

CONUNDRUM.

What is the difference, if any, between Blain and chilblain?

PEEL A CONSERVATIVE VICTORY.

The Mail and Empire seems to think the defeat of Mr. Fallis a party defeat. It tries hard to break the fall. In its heading to the report of the election results, the Mail and Empire says: "Majority of 76 last election converted into a minority of 161." A well informed journal should not give black letter prominence to a big blunder in figures. Fallis' majority at the last election—1911—was 637. The true figure makes the defeat more pronounced. The organ also says, "the Liberals are jubilant over the victory and the Conservatives correspondingly depressed." No true, honest Conservative is depressed; he rejoices over the victory of honesty over graft. Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P. in a note in another column, hits the nail on the head. He says the result in Peel is a Conservative victory. The honour of the party was at stake—when a man who had discredited the party by —at least—equivocal actions, had the assurance to pose as the party candidate. It was honest Conservative votes killed Fallis, and signed Blain's political death warrant. Machine Conservative politicians have been shown that they can't and don't carry the honest Conservative vote of a riding around in their breeches' pockets.

PARTY LITTLENESS.

The Review in last night's issue had a little article—"Up and Down the Sidelines"—which read thus:

The local Provincial member for West Peterborough has been taking a fling at driving up the side lines of Peel County, in the interests of Mr. Lowe, the Liberal candidate.

Mr. Bain, in addressing a meeting in the interests of Mr. Fallis, at Brampton, said he had been told of an argument brought forward by Mr. G. A. Gillespie, of West Peterborough, who said, "We Grits have got to stand together. The Tories are divided and if we stand together we can win the County of Peel for the Grit party."

Mr. Gillespie was met to-day and while he had every confidence that Mr. Lowe would win, he said it would be a hard majority to pull down.

Our local contemporary will admit that the "local member" has something to show for his "taking a fling at driving up and down the side lines." It is not to blame for trying to take a fling at a political opponent but it is to blame innocently perhaps, for doing an injustice to Mr. Gillespie by quoting the words Mr. Blain falsely attributed to him. Anyone who knows Mr. Gillespie's moderation and fairness, and lack of extreme partisanship, could and would have said that he never used the words attributed to him by Mr. Blain, without the categorical denial of Mr. Gillespie that appears in another column.

Mr. Blain is a wiser man to-day than he was yesterday. It is to be hoped that he will take the lesson to heart or the fate of Mr. Fallis will be his, for by espousing this cause, he shares he guilt of Mr. Fallis that was so strikingly punished yesterday. Mr. Blain in the course he took played the role of the parish politician; and he knows now that the parish politician has fallen on evil days. He has got a hint that the man that condones and excuses and defends crookedness, as well as the man that commits it, will have short shrift. Mr. Fallis' craft was sunk, in the face of a 1914 majority of 637. Mr. Blain pulled in the same boat, and his 1911 majority was only 316. When popular indignation gets hot over crookedness and its defenders, majorities, big and little, melt rapidly.

IF YOU want to BUILD UP YOUR BUSINESS, you must USE THE PAPER that goes into the Home.

PATRIOTIC PEEL.

The electors of Peel yesterday expressed their opinion of the Fallis "rake-off" by practising the rake off themselves. They raked off the 637 majority of J. R. Fallis at the general election of 1914 and converted it into a majority of 335 for Lowe, the Liberal candidate in the Peel bye-election. This represents a turnover of nearly one thousand, showing that nearly one thousand of the honest and patriotic electors of Peel that voted for Fallis one year ago voted against him yesterday — not however against Fallis, but against the spirit of graft his person and candidature represented.

Yesterday's result in Peel was one of the most hopeful and important election results in our history. It shows that the people have come to the point of placing patriotism and principle above partyism. On a straight party vote Fallis should have been triumphantly elected; on a straight patriotic vote he has been triumphantly defeated. The electors of Peel took the true patriotic stand; they translated into action the glorious sentiment of the song, "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall!" They voted for the triumph of what the old flag stands for, honourable principle, honesty and square dealing. That is the essence of what we are fighting for to-day; that is what the electors of Peel voted to uphold; and in that consists the signal triumph of the election. The issue was not Fallis, the Conservative candidate nor Lowe, the Liberal candidate. It was far above personal and party considerations; the issue involved the very life of the nation the essence of all national high ideal and ambition of achievement.

We are waging war to destroy the slavery of German ideals and the practices founded upon them and we shall win. But we are waging war against a worse slavery—in its national meaning, national menace and power for evil—the slavery to narrow partizanship as a factor in the activities of public life and government. The war has done this much, it has toned down the virulence of party politics it has brought both parties to see that there is a higher ideal than the petty triumph of party—that the country and its interest—that the ideas the flag stands for, stand first, and party interests a poor second.

The result of yesterday's election is besides, a warning to governments that the people are not in a humour to be trifled with where honest dealing is at issue, with graft, extorted profits and sacrifice of the public money and sacrifice of our efficiency of service to the cause of the country and the Empire. It is a warning that any government that for considerations of party or policy winks at contract crookedness and blood-letting contracts will lose favour in the eyes of honest electors and invite the reproof that Peel administered yesterday, to self seeking and prostitution of representative responsibility to sordid ends and the sacrifice of the public good.

Rejoicing at the result of this election will not be confined to Liberals, whose candidate happened to be the candidate of the patriotic ideal, that was the real issue in the election. Every honest Conservative in Canada will also rejoice over the triumph of the spirit of patriotism, over the spirit of self-seeking, over the disregard of representative responsibility.

TO LEAP OR NOT TO LEAP

Everybody in America knows Inez Milholland, the beautiful suffragist, who started her career by stirring up feminist agitation in staid old Vassar college, scorned New York society, practiced law in the police courts and finally got herself jailed in England for rioting with Mrs. Pankhurst's "wild women".

There was amazement in the suffrage ranks when she suddenly became the wife of Eugene Boissevain. Feminists marveled that their dashing young general had consented to become the mere wife of a mere man. They wondered how young Mr. Boissevan did it.

Then came the most amazing act of Inez's amazing career. She calmly announced that she did the proposing!

The most beautiful of all suffragists further admitted that she had to pop the question three times before the man of her choice accepted.

Here is her advice to all girls who wish to propose:

"Let her go toward the man with extended hand. Let her put her case to him freely and frankly three times if necessary. I did!

"Leap year or any other year I am for woman's free education, free work and free speech in love as well as out of it.

"To me it is much more dignified to say the actual words 'Let us mate' than to resort to lures and to seek to place the responsibility elsewhere."—Boston, Mass., "Advertiser."

PRESTON SHOUTED

Now He Will Contribute a Fine to the Civic Exchequer.

OTTAWA, Feb. .— Joseph H. Preston, English-speaking member of the Separate School Board and supporter of the French bi-lingual campaign, was fined $20 and costs, or a month in jail, by Magistrate Ashwith on a charge of disorderly conduct during an invasion of the City Hall by a crowd of bi-lingual supporters a week ago. When the Council Chamber had become full the police tried to control the crush and Preston shouted to the crowd to rush the police.

A MINISTER ON THE VERGE OF A PRECIPICE

"It is within the knowledge of all what recently occurred in Manitoba. We know, from what happened there, that there is a man in the Federal arena standing on the verge of a precipice. That gentleman knows the great danger in which he stands. He knows that if investigations are carried on there further and other matters opened up, there is a possibility he will also stand where he would not like to stand. I refer to the Hon. Bob Rogers. Within the course of the last four months I have had occasion to meet Mr. Rogers several times. He asked to see me—there are others who know that, and Mr. Rogers cannot deny it. He knew that I had some influence with leading Liberals in Manitoba, and knew I was well acquainted with leading public men in politics there. His purpose in approaching me was to induce me to use my influence to call off the investigations which were being conducted there.

"He asked me to use my influence to pull off the law officers of the crown from following up those who had been caught. His request was to the effect that justice in Manitoba, so far as his political associates are concerned, should be stifled. He intimated to me that if all those things were not done then something would happen in Saskatchewan."

In these words, the Hon. J. A. Calder, a member of the Saskatchewan Government, one of the most well-informed and influential men in Canadian public life, accuses the Hon. Robert Rogers of an attempt to interfere with the course of justice in a criminal case; to shield his former colleagues of the corrupt Roblin Government from punishment for their crimes against good government, and to cover up transactions which, in Mr. Calder's expressive phrase, left Mr. Rogers himself standing on the edge of a precipice. The charge made by Mr. Calder is denied by Mr. Rogers, who asserts that the circumstances are the reverse of what has been stated, and that Mr. Calder approached him. The denial should not prevent the affair from receiving instant attention from Mr. Hudson, the Attorney General of Manitoba. Mr. Rogers is said to have threatened Mr. Calder with disclosures of corruption in Saskatchewan if the Manitoba investigations were continued and if the prosecution of his associates was not dropped. The answer should be prompt and decisive. Surely the law has a long enough and a strong enough arm to reach any man who seeks by menaces to prevent the punishment of evildoers? The threats of the Minister of Public Works were not made against the officers of the law in Manitoba, but they were made, according to Mr. Calder, with the intention that the members of the Saskatchewan Government should bring political pressure to bear upon the Attorney-General of Manitoba to drop the prosecution of Sir Redmond Roblin and his associates. If this is not an offence under the code, it assuredly ought to be. If Mr. Rogers cannot be reached directly for this offence he should be proceeded against in any way open to the Government of Manitoba. The further inquiries into the methods of the late Government of Manitoba, of which he seems to stand in fear should be pushed with all the greater vigor because of his threats. To relax the efforts to clean up the filthy mess would give rise to the belief that the threats of the Minister of Public Works have had some effect, and that the hands of the Manitoba Ministry have been tied.

Mr. Calder took the straight road when he refused to meddle in the judicial affairs of Manitoba and declared that "in so far as Saskatchewan was concerned, the Liberal party would hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may." If the Hon. Robert Rogers and the liquor men who have been put out of business in Saskatchewan by the Scott Government can blacken the reputation of the members of that Government we may be very sure they will leave no stone unturned to do so. The only personal charge which malice and hate can bring against Hon. Walter Scott, the Premier, is the assertion that the liquor interests contributed $1,500 to his campaign expenses three years ago. Here in Ontario it is estimated by men who should know that the liquor interests spent over a quarter of a million in 1914 to keep Whitney in and Rowell out of power, yet no one has the temerity to assert that the Whitney Government was "bribed" by the liquor interests.

If actual bribery of members was practised by the liquor interests in Saskatchewan, the prompt action of the Government in arresting the alleged bribers and the failure of the liquor men to tell the names of members of the Legislature to whom money was corruptly paid indicate that the Government and the Liberal party as a whole have nothing to fear. When the bribery charges come up in the courts the alleged bribers must either disclose the names of those to whom they gave money for votes and influence against prohibitory legislation or stand alone in the pillory under grave suspicion of having taken the money for their own purposes. The arrest of the leaders of the liquor interests in Saskatchewan proves beyond peradventure that the Scott Government is determined to force a full disclosure, no matter who may be affected by it. That is the answer to the threats of the Hon. Robert Rogers, the man "on the verge of a precipice."—The Globe.

GERMAN "FRIGHTFULNESS" HAS BEEN REPAID WITH INTEREST

Maximilien Harden is getting into a rabid state of mind over the mess that Germany has got into. Germany having thrust its neck into an ever-tightening noose as the result of trying to "lick creation," is now, through him and others like him, making ante-mortem threats of the most frightful character. It is like a murderer on the scaffold threatening to haunt the executioners and blast their lives forever with creepy horrors if they persist in carrying out the sentence. "Let's shake hands and forget about it" says Harden, in effect. "If you don't we'll let loose hell itself! We will lay waste fresh areas of the world and redouble our triumph of death!"

What he suggests as a last desperate ultimatum is that the Allies and Germany shall fix up "a moderate peace", which shall provide for "a little disarmament, a little international socialism, and the pooling of war expenses." Accept this, he says, or Germany will proceed to be "more frightful than ever."

Well, the Allies have managed to combat, for some nineteen months now, all the frightfulness and all the deviltry that the German mind could conceive, or that fiendish German brutalism could put into effect. They can face the finish without flinching. They have already inflicted on the myriad hosts of Germany more punishment than Germany ever conceived was possible any combination of nations could inflict. Germany finds that after having spent the full force of thirty years of intensive preparation for war, it has accomplished nothing more, in the sum total, than to make itself the Esau of the nations, and to poise itself toppling on the edge of utter and irretrievable ruin. Clinging desparately there, it cries: Stop! Stop! I've had enough—haven't you? Help to save me, or I'll clutch you and we'll both go down together!" It is the tragic shriek of utter desparation. But the world cannot afford to save Militarism Enthroned for further crimes. Germany has sealed its own fate.

"The Moving Finger writes; and having writ,
Moves on; nor all your piety nor wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a line,
Nor all your tears wash out a word of it."

INCREASED PRODUCTION

With the approach of the spring season and the beginning of another year of fruition, the country already is looking forward anxiously in an effort to determine influences, favourable or unfavourable, that may effect the outcome of the harvest. From the western Provinces reports come with the word that the land has been copiously supplied with moisture, and is in excellent condition to receive this year's crop as soon as the weather favours seeding operations. The heavy snowfall of the past few weeks in Ontario also insures favourable soil conditions in this Province. And in addition to these advantages which nature has given to agriculture this year, the farmers as a class all over Canada are in a much better financial position than they were at the beginning of the season of 1915. Altogether at this time, there is reason for optimism in Canada.

Big Item in the Agricultural Account.

A new item in the country's agricultural account for 1915 has been disclosed this week in the published returns from the dairy industry of the Province of Ontario. With cheese at an average price of 15 1-2 cents per pound all through the year, as compared with 13 1-2 cents in 1914, and with a season of the fost favourable kind in the matter of pasturage, the Ontario dairyman last year earned the largest income in the history of the Province. The following tabulated statement shows the extent and value of the dairy output of Ontario in 1915:

	Pounds.
Western Ontario's cheese output	26,500,000
Western Ontario's creamery output	18,350,000
Eastern Ontario's cheese output	90,000,000
Eastern Ontario's creamery output	3,000,000
Total cheese output for Province	116,500,000
Total creamery output for Province	21,350,000
Total value of cheese	$17,902,500
Total value of creamery butter	6,079,750
Grand total	$23,982,250

Another Big Season in 1916.

Speaking of the prospects in dairying for 1916 Mr. G. G. Publow Chief Dairy Inspector for Eastern Ontario, said recently:

"The output for the coming year will, of course, largely depend on the weather. But given a reasonably fair season for pasture, there ought to be an increase over 1915, and in 1915 there was an increase of 15 to 20 per cent. over the previous year. For one thing the number of milkers in eastern Ontario has increased. When our neighbours first removed the duty on cattle the high prices offered for these, coupled with feed scarcity and not too high prices for dairy products, led to wholesale selling. The sales were not all of poor stuff either. A lot of our best young cattle were disposed of. This year, with abundance of feed and high prices for products, there is practically no selling of grade dairy cattle, early all the public sales in eastern Ontario in the past fall have been of pure-breds and those sold have gone to improve our own working herds. Besides this, cattle never went into the stable in better condition than they did last fall, and they are doing well this winter. Our herds are also increasing in size. What is more important the are improving in quality as well. Aside from the effects of the exceptionally favourable season, there was an increase in the average milk production per cow last year of between 400 and 500 pounds. The unusually favourable season increased the average yield by a total of 700 pounds of milk per cow. The increase, aside from weather conditions, is due to better feeding and better breeding. And the good work is still going on. Everybody has shown a desire for further improvement."

SOLDIERS MUST SALUTE.

Military Order Restores Essential of Discipline Which Has Been Ignored in London.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—The order issued by the military authorities that non-commissioned officers and men must salute all officers whom they meet in the street was necessitated by the frequency with which this essential of British military discipline had been disregarded, especially in London.

It was noticed that many men overlooked or forgot the regulations regarding saluting, and instead of acknowledging the king's commission in the usual military fashion they paid no heed to any officer they passed.

"It must be borne in mind," says the order, "that the interchange of salutes, which should be as punctiliously performed by the officer returning the salute as by the soldier giving it, is an acknowledgment of His Majesty's commission, and as such cannot be too strictly observed on all occasions. The attention of all ranks is accordingly called to this most important and essential duty.

"The military police will take the names of all men whom they see passing an officer without saluting. The names will be communicated to units by the police. If a man is on leave he will be recalled, and whether on leave or not disciplinary action will be taken."

"At the front or in camp," says an officer, "men are not expected to salute every time they meet an officer, otherwise their arms would be working windmill fashion. They salute only on occasion, or when personally addressed by an officer. When they come to London they apparently forget to salute, and hence the new order."

If a soldier is carrying a baby, or parcels, or riding a bicycle, he salutes by turning his eyes to the right or left, according to the side on which he passes the officer. The eyes left or right salute must be acknowledged by the officer in the same manner as the hand salute.

AUSTRIA INCREASES TAX ON ALCOHOL.

ZURICH, via London, Feb. 23.—The Austrian Government has raised the tax on alcohol eight cents a litre, making the third increase since the beginning of the war. The tax now amounts to fifty cents a litre.

The Austro-Hungarian Government has agreed to increase the pay of army officers twenty per cent. after the end of the war.

FIGHTING IN FRANCE

Taken by Order of the Great General Staff of the French Army for the National Archives and Presented in Peterboro by The Evening Examiner at the GRAND OPERA HOUSE on THURSDAY, FRIDAY and SATURDAY, March 2nd, 3rd, 4th

THE OFFICIAL SANCTION

Ministère des Affaires étrangères — Cabinet du Ministre

REPUBLIQUE FRANCAISE

Paris le 30 octobre 191.5

Cher Monsieur Powell.

Je vous envoie les films cinematographiques que vous avez choisis. Comme je vous l'ai dit, ces films ont été pris par des opérateurs mobilisés sur le front de l'armée francaise avec l'autorisation de l'Etat-Major Général, Il est, bien entendu superflu de vous affirmer leur authenticité sans retouches qui est tout a fait hors de doute.

Veuillez agréer, cher Monsieur Powell, l'expression de mes sentiments les plus dévoués.

TRANSLATION

Minister of Foreign Affairs, Office of the Minister, Republic of France, Paris, October 30, 1915.

Dear Mr. Powell: I herewith send you the cinematograph films you have selected. As I have already told you, these films have been taken by the "operateurs mobilises" at the front of the French army with the authorization of the Great General Staff. It is, as you know, quite superfluous to affirm their authenticity, or to add that they have not been retouched. This is indisputable.

Accept, dear Mr. Powell, the expression of my heartiest best wishes.

FOURNOL (Bureau Chief).

WAR JUST AS IT IS!

NEVER until this great war has it been possible for people far from the fighting front to see history in the making. The French Official Motion Picture Operators have visualized the grim give and take of the conflict, and it is unfolded as an action panorama in these stirring pictures. The official sanction of the French Government was secured for The Evening Examiner by E. Alexander Powell, the famous war correspondent.

The troops in the trenches preparing to repel an assault.

HAND-GRENADE actions across no-man's land.

The preparation for the great Champagne drive.

These are but a few of the vivid scenes portrayed in the official pictures taken under the direction of the French army's general staff and on exhibition in Canada for the first time.

The Evening Examiner Positively Guarantees these WAR PICTURES to be the Best Produced since the War Commenced.

TORONTO, Feb. 24.—The above figures in connection with the campaign for signatures to the prohibition petition were announced by Mr. George A. Warburton, chairman of the Executive Committee of the organization.

One of three courses could be followed by the Government after the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred presented their monster petition for a "dry" Ontario, said Mr. Warburton. The Government might pass a prohibitory law abolishing drink until the end of the war; it might pass prohibition on its own initiative; or else it imght submit the matter to the electors. Should the first course be pursued it would be the work of the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred to see that liquor is not brought back after hostilities have ceased. If the matter should be decided by plebiscite, then it would be proved what the large percentage of names secured on the petition really meant. He did not expect the government would pass a prohibitory law on its own initiative.

While he expected that if the question of prohibition was put to the vote, some voters would be lost who had signed the petition, yet he expected that this would be more than made up by the number who would vote in favour of the measure, on account of the secrecy entailed.

"I am proud of the manner in which the people have rallied round us," said the speaker, "all the more because it has been such a hard task to convince them that prohibition was no partisan movement. And it shall never be." Mr. Warburton stated that in the places where the Personal Liberty League had done the most advertising, the prohibition movement had met with the greatest success. The movement was not a sudden burst of enthusiasm, not a spasmodic effort, but the culmination of years of work to oust liquor from Ontario.

No one thought that the canvassers would be able to secure so high a percentage of names. With only a few places to hear from, the average voters' percentage for Ontario was 77.8. In Toronto the percentage on voters that signed the petition was 91.2. Of the 44,733 people that had cast their vote at the last Ontario elections, no less than 40,805 had signed the petition. An average percentage for the province of about sixty per cent. was the very most that had been expected. The greatest surprise had been in Toronto.

All prohibitionists in the province were working together, contended Mr. Warburton, to lift the question of prohibition out of politics, and when once this was accomplished, it would never go back. The Citizens' Committee, the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and the Dominion Alliance were all in perfect accord.

Large Profits.

"Liquor is a damnable curse," declared Mr. Warburton. "I have had a hatred against the business ever since I was a boy. The average profit of liquor men is never less than 100 per cent. That is what the Ontario License Board expects them to earn. Mr. Flavelle, the chairman of the Board, told me of an instance where a woman who had a liquor license made 100 per cent. She was being robbed by one of her bartenders, and when he was removed the earnings leaped up to 160 per cent. The liquor men have known for the past ten years that prohibition was coming, and they have had time to prepare themselves, so I do not see where they have any case for a claim of compensation in the event of their licenses being cut off."

"The petition will meet with a favourable reception at the Buildings," said the speaker. "We have given no offence to Liberals or Conservatives. We have knocked nobody except the liquor men. We will not let up until we are victorious, with the blessing of God. Should we secure prohibition here the result will be a marvellous moral awakening, which will not only benefit Canada but also Great Britain and the overseas colonies. As an instance of how prohibition is getting hold of the people, I might mention in conclusion that in Tammany-ridden New York, which has far more saloons than churches, the Board of Education is having the children taught the evils of liquor. We are not in this for money, but with the intention of putting the liquor men out of business once and for all, and I have no doubt that we will succeed," concluded Mr. Warburton.

"We not only enlisted in our campaign," said Newton Wylie, general secretary of the Committee of One Hundred, "the support of all parties, creeds and races, but we also had parts for all the men, women and children to take in it. The women of Ontario are directly contributing $10,000, 10,000 women are giving $1 each—which is a fifth of the budget of the movement. In order to enlist the sympathy of the children of the province, we sent out an appeal, asking that the Sunday School children should, on a particular Sunday, give five cents each, and 100,000 children each gave that sum. The committee is particularly proud of this contribution, not only so much on account of its money value, considerable as that is, ($5,000) but even more hugely on account of the great moral effect on the children themselves of being committed at such an early age to the cause.

All Are Helping.

"The Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists and other Protestant churches are taking part in the campaign with their usual thoroughness. The Roman Catholics are giving us the most enthusiastic possible support. A large number of their bishops and priests are actively behind the movement. Among Anglicans, many clergymen who had previously taken no active part in furthering either local option or prohibition are working hard for the success of this movement. In a number of the larger Jewish synagogues in Toronto, on the Saturday before the canvas commenced, the rabbis urged their people to sign the petition.

The French-Canadians.

'Of the residents of Ontario 250,000 are French-Canadians, and we thought it imperative to establish definite contact with them. Accordingly, we appointed six Roman Catholic French-Canadian organizers—one for Prescott, one for Russell, one for the French-speaking sections of Glengarry and Stormont, one for the French-speaking sections of Ottawa's polling subdivisions, one for the French-speaking parts of Essex and Kent counties and one for the French-speaking districts of Nipissing and New Ontario. Then we appointed a seventh man to whom these reported in Ottawa. Each of them went into his own field of operations armed with credentials from the heads of the Roman Catholic Church in Ottawa. In the majority of places where these mene have worked, the local priest has himself become chairman of the local committee for obtaining signatures. French-Canadians have done remarkably well. It is noteworthy that the petition has been strongly supported by both Le Droit, the French-Canadian bilingual organ at Ottawa, which has been giving to it a front page- double-column editorial every day, and also by the Orange Sentinel of Toronto."

MURRAY STREET MEN'S ASSOCIATION

Annual Meeting Was Held Last Evening — Officers Elected

The Men's Association of Murray Street Church held its annual meeting last night—Mr. R. C. Read, president, in the chair. The every member visit was completed in five days, during which over five hundred members were visited by men who went out in the evenings, two and two, for the purpose. This was no financial enterprise, but was intended for social and spiritual purposes only. Fifty-four men took part in the work and made reports last night at the supper which had been provided by the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. The experiences of the men made it quite clear that the "Every Member Visit" is greatly appreciated by the people of this church, and can only result in an increase of interest on the part of both the visited and the visitors.

Officers Elected.

At the close of the evening the retiring president called for nominations for the year 1916. On motion of Mr. T. F. Matthews and Mr. R. Harding, Mr. L. J. Petit, B.A., was elected president, Mr. H. G. Webber, vice-president, and Mr. A. J. Raddon, B.A., secretary-treasurer.

The outlook for the year is most encouraging, and the new officers with the splendid company of men in the association, are capable of accomplishing almost anything in the way of church work.

The evening closed with a hearty vote of thanks tendered to the ladies on motion of Chief Thompson and Mr. Joseph Wearing, M.A., and responded to in a neat speech by Mrs. S. Cottingham, the vice-president of the Ladies' Aid Society.

The money was forwarded to a Polish relief committee in Switzerland, which the Bishop of Poland recommended as a safe medium for distribution.

ELLIOT'S DE LE RESORO

Annual Meeting of The Law Association

Three Members and a Student-at-Law Have Enlisted for Overseas Service During the Past Year.

OFFICERS ELECTED

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Law Association was held yesterday afternoon at the office of Mr. R. R. Hall. In the absence of the retiring president, Mr. W. F. Johnston, the chair was taken by Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C.

The following report for 1915 was read by the secretary.

To the Members of the Association.

The Executive committee beg leave to present the following report for 1915.

During the year three members of the Association and a student-at-law enlisted for overseas service. Major S. T. Medd, who was a member of the firm of Messrs. Hall & Medd, is attached to the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, which is now in England. On the departure of Major Medd from the city the members of the Association presented him with a piece of silver plate, suitably engraved. Captain J. M. Burnham, M.P., who is a member of the firm of Messrs. Ruddy & Burnham, is now attached to the 93rd Battalion at Peterborough in the position of paymaster. Lieutenant C. R. Widdifield who was a member of the firm of Messrs. Gordon & Widdifield, is now attached to the 93rd Battalion at Peterborough. Lieutenant Widdifield who was married recently, was presented with a travelling bag by the members of the Association. Lieut. John New, who was a student-at-law with the firm of Messrs. Gordon & Widdifield, is now attached to the 130th Battalion at Cobourg.

Two young barristers have joined the Association during the year, Mr. J. F. P. Birnie of Collingwood, who was with Mr. R. R. Hall, and who is now taking the Officers' Training Course with the Artillery at Kingston, and Mr. J. S. Strickland of Cornwall, who is with the firm of Messrs Bennet & Goodwill.

Radical changes have been made in the Library during the year. The Law Reports have been placed in alphabetical order instead of chronological order. The Librarian has endeavoured to complete the list of Statutes of Ontario and Canada and desires to thank those members of the Association who have co-operated to that end. There are still some volumes lacking and the Librarian would be greatly obliged to any members who could furnish the volumes still necessary. Some of the members of the Association expressed a wish to have the Statutes of the Western Provinces added to the Library and the Attorney Generals of several of the provinces have been kind enough to contribute the Statutes from their respective provinces.

The members of the Association are asked to co-operate with the Librarian in keeping the Library as intact as possible. No volume should be taken from the Library unless noted in a book kept for the purpose.

Respectfully submitted,
W. F. JOHNSTON,
President.
JOSEPH WEARING,
Secretary.

The following officers were elected for 1916.

President—Mr. R. R. Hall.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mr. A. E. Dixon.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. F. D. Kerr.
Treasurer—Mr. B. D. Hall.
Secretary—Mr. Joseph Wearing.
Trustees—Mr. D. O'Connell, Mr. W. F. Johnston.

Cutting Off Pay Of Missing Soldiers Is Hardship On Families

The Toronto Star says:

On what grounds does the Government discontinue the pay of a soldier who is reported missing?

Two particularly sad cases have just come to light in which the families of soldiers missing on the field of battle have come to great distress over this remarkable policy of the Government:

When a soldier is reported missing, the assigned pay, usually $15 a month, which is the money paid out of the soldier's earnings to his wife, is stopped at the end of three months.

At the end of six months, if the soldier is still missing, he is regarded as being dead, and the separation allowance also, $20 a month, is cut off as well.

Thus the monthly income of soldiers' wives and families, which averages $40 to $50 with the Patriotic Fund allowance, is reduced from, say, $50, the larger estimate, to $15 a month.

Pensions Are Slow.

Pensions, of course, are to go to the widows. But the pension arrangements are not commenced before the cutting off of all allowances, but after.

Such of these cases as are brought before the Toronto and York Patriotic Fund are dealt with by the Relief Committee, which sits most of each week. Each case is considered individually.

Now, the two cases to which these provisions of the Government so unfortunately apply are those of Mrs. John Harries, of 338 Main street, East Toronto, and Mrs. Leslie Carter, 231 Bain avenue, both of whose husbands were reported as dead yesterday, after being missing for months. Mrs. Harries has three children and Mrs. Carter has four.

The case of Pte. John Harries is this: On April 23 he was reported killed in action at St. Julien. In May he was reported missing instead. Yesterday he was reported dead. His mother, Mrs. Ida Harries, died yesterday of grief.

Thus, not six months, but nearly ten months, were allowed to pass before Ottawa regarded Pte. Harries as dead.

Pay Was Cut Off.

In August the assigned pay was cut off. But the separation allowance still goes on. With the assistance of the Patriotic Fund Mrs. Harries now receives $40 a month. But now that the death of her husband has been taken for granted, she expects that the $20 separation allowance will also be cut off.

She was able to go to work while Mrs. Harries, Sr., was alive and able to care for the three children. Now that source of income is also cut off.

It was eight months after being reported missing that Pte. Leslie Carter was reported as dead. Mrs. Carter, with four little children on her hands, states that since April she has not received either assigned pay or separation allowance from the Government, and the sole sources of support was the Patriotic Fund's allowance to her.

There is no branch of the Government in Toronto to which appeal can be made in cases such as these. The Hospital Commission concerns itself only with returned soldiers. Lt.-Col. Percy Marlowe, the A.D.M.S., who has done much for cases of neglect, is also concerned only with the returned men.

SILK INDUSTRY IS THE MOST STABLE

France Reports That of All Textiles This is the Least Affected by the War.

PARIS, Feb. 23.—The silk industry the most sensitive in France, subject as it is to most of the caprices of fashion, has shown greater stability than other textiles during the war. The total production in 1914 amounted to $28,000,000 less than that of 1913, but only $15,000,000 less than in 1911, when the total production was $80,000,000, after having gone to $90,000,000 in 1910.

The silk exports were $18,000,000 less than in 1913, but 1,500,000 more than in 1912.

Exports of silks to America have for several years followed quite a regular rate of progression that has not been disturbed by the war. In 1914 they amounted to $13,250,000, as against $9,750,000 in 1913.

England, however, took $18,000,000 less, the exports dropping from $42,000,000 in 1913 to $4,000,000 in 1914.

Italy took $250,000 more and Spain $500,000 more in silks than in 1913.

It will aid greatly in cleaning the painted walls if they are gone over with thin uncooked starched water.

JUPITER GETTING READY.

Planet in Some Million Years from Now May be Nice Place to Reside.

The planet Jupiter is undergoing some changes and is rapidly approaching the state of the earth, says the Ohio State Journal. Maybe it is getting ready for the future human race, after the earth and Mars have got through with it.

Of course, the human family will have to leave he earth some day. It will lose its atmosphere and dry up, so that no sort of animal life would be possible here. So Jupiter is getting ready for us. He has lots to do and it will take millions of years before he is prepared.

Already great clouds of steam are reported, which will in a few thousand years condense into oceans. And then there are mountains to be built and rivers to be dug; but all this will be attended to by the time the earth loses these conditions that have made it so happy an abode.

It is certainly a mighty dream, looking out on Jupiter in the western sky, to think that it is putting things in order for us in the sweet by and by. We hope to be transformed there when this dear old earth is wrapped in living flame and that big planet reposes in its rosy bed in the sunset sky, so to speak. Why not? Long ago we have depopulated the beautiful Venus and brought her love to this planet. May we not reappear on Jupiter and carry our genius with us?

Russia Likely To Remain Dry After The War

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—The Russian government will never resume the sale of Vodka or permit others to engage in its manufacture or sale. After the war, the present extraordinary measures affecting all liquor, will be revised probably along the lines of temperance reforms in the Scandinavian countries, which make a tax differential in favour of light wines and beers, because of their low percentage of alcoholic content.

This outline of the future attitude of the Russian government on the prohibition question is given in Russian newspapers that have just arrived in this city. The Ryetch, a Petrograd newspaper, reports a debate in the Duma in which the good faith of the government, in forcing prohibition was brought sharply into question, so much so that P. L. Bark, Minister of Finance felt it necessary to reply to the attacks that had been made. The debate occurred during the session of the budget commission when the question arose as to what should be done with 55 million vedros (726,260,000 gallons) of vodka now in government warehouses. S. E. Grianevitch, president of the commission, declared that the presence of so much vodka was a source of constant danger as the storehouses might be raided and their contents carried away by the thirsty population. He was particularly apprehensive about the supply near the front and recommended that it should be destroyed.

This declaration brought a left (opposition) deputy to his feet, who asked sarcastically why, if the ministry was acting in good faith and did not intend to resume the sale of vodka, the government should keep all this liquor on hand, and why only recently it had reduced a large quantity to 30 per cent. proof. A second deputy questioned the ability of the government to enforce prohibition and told of a wedding that he had attended at which the condition of the guests was not noticeably different from what it would have been if there had been no prohibition. He demanded that the Minister of Finance, M. Bark, make a categorical statement to the Duma declaring that the sale of vodka should be never resumed in Russia. M. Bark, in behalf of the government, replied to the criticism of the deputies.

"I find it necessary," said M. Bark, "to categorically announce that all insinuations that the government intends to renew the sale of vodka are unfounded. I categorically announce that the government will support prohibition and that there is no chance of a return to the former state of affairs. Therefore, I heartily indorse the recommendation to destroy the vodka stock. The question of permitting the sale of light drinks has not received any final action, as this matter is left in the hands of the city departments." (In a previous communication, M. Bark announced that after the war, the present extraordinary means to enforce abstinence would be revised on constructive lines.)

After outlining the future policy of the government, M. Bark told of the extraordinary efforts to enforce prohibition. Prison sentences were meted out to vendors of illicit liquor; drunkards were heavily fined and finally, as a last resort, the government had succeeded in increasing the poisonous substance in denatured alcohol. This action was taken, he said, against the advice of the medical board, whose members did not believe that it would deter the habitual drunkard.

The Ryetch quotes a member of the Petrograd City Commission to the effect that 119 Petrograd drug stores dispensed 504 vedros of alcohol during the three months preceding the prohibition law, while during the three months after the decree, they sold 1,111 vedros of alcohol.

"The representatives of the Revenue Department," says the Ryetch, "stated that from January 1 to September 1, Petrograd drug stores and hospitals obtained 154,128 gallons of pure alcohol, while cologne and cosmetic factories obtained 217,260 gallons."

NO APPETITE—LITTLE SLEEP

Symptoms of a Run-Down Condition, We Have a Remedy.

We ask every weak, run-down person in Peterborough to try our Vinol, with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not re-establish their health. Letters like the following give us confidence:—

"I am in the millinery business and on my feet most of the time. I got so weak and run-down that I lost my appetite and was unable to sleep, had a severe chronic cold and lost my colour. I learned about Vinol through a friend, and within three weeks after taking it I noticed an improvement, and soon gained in weight, health and strength. I am recommending Vinol to my friends and they also speak highly of it." Catherine Hoar, West Chester, N.Y.

In hundreds of cases where old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions have failed to restore strength and health, Vinol has succeeded, because while it contains all the curatives they do, its good work is not retarded by useless grease and oil.

"FEARS KAISER AND ME."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Representative Sells, Republican, of Tennessee, and ex-Congressman Woodruff, Bull Mooser, of Michigan, journeyed over to Oyster Bay to see Col. Roosevelt shortly before he started on his trip to the West Indies. They hoped to get a line on his attitude regarding Republican candidates and things political. The Colonel was out in the yard chopping wood, but he soon joined the callers. Now what did he say: Listen:

"I do not favour any particular candidate for President, but I am bitterly opposed to the re-election of President Wilson. There are only two men in the world wrom he fears — Emperor William and myself."

Mr. Sells said Col. Roosevelt expressed himself with all the emphasis at his command upon this point.

BRITISH CHURCHES DECLARE FOR WAR ON LIQUOR EVILS

Lord Robert Cecil Tells of Intoxicated Soldiers, and Declares Present Legislation Has Failed.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—"This conference, including the representatives of twelve Christian denominations in England and Wales, places on record the solemn conviction that the evils resulting from strong drink are so great and so hurtful to the moral and spiritual life as to demand unremitting and united endeavour on the part of the Christian churches to remove them."

This was the resolution moved by the Archbishop of Canterbury and adopted at a meeting in London today, convened by the Temperance Council of Christian Churches. The Archbishop of Canterbury, who presided, said everyone was agreed it was impracticable to look for general legislation on temperance, but never before was there such wide recognition of the urgent need for temperance. By united action and co-operation the churches, the Archbishop said, with the splendid example of the King before them, could accomplish much.

General W. Bramwell Booth, of the Salvation Army, said the judiciary of the country as a whole presented a most pitiable and melancholy spectacle when, while unanimously attributing an overwhelming part of crime and the poverty of the people to drinking, they went steadily on making provisions for maintaining facilities for drinking, sometimes even extending them by granting new licenses.

Mr. John St. Loe Strachey, editor and proprietor of the Spectator, said while the newspapers were required to get along with one-third less paper than usual nothing required in the making of beer had been subjected to restriction. The sale of intoxicants for the duration of the war, said Mr. Strachey, should be prohibited.

Lord Robert Cecil, Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, declared he had been shocked by the scenes he had witnessed at the King's Cross Station, where men just returned from the Front were observed under the influence of liquor. Lord Robert said he was of the opinion that legislation in the premises had failed and that temperance depended solely on the education of the public.

BUTTER SOON TO GO IN BERLIN

TICKET SCHEME A FAIURE.

Imperial Chancellor Blundered When He Permitted Wholesale Slaughter of Cattle Last Year.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—A despatch to the Express form Amsterdam, referring to the butter tickets scheme in Berlin, says:—"By ten o'clock in the morning the clamorous people received the sterotyped reply, 'the butter is all sold.' The crowd became riotous, and only the presence of a strong force of police kept order. The Tageblatt frankly admits the failure of the scheme and advocates that seven butter tickets be issued weekly of a different colour for each day, so that buyers will only be able to othain one day's supply instead of a supply for a week at a time. The Tageblatt also stigmatizes as the Imperial Chancellor's crowning blunder the permitting of the wholesale slaughter of cattle last year, which now prevents an adequate supply of butter."

More Restrictions.

Berlin, Feb. 24.—Communities, including Berlin, receiving butter through the so-called Central Purchasing Association—an association founded by the Government and under its control —must, in accordance with the order of the Imperial Chancellor, introduce butter cards before March 5 to limit the supply per person to a maximum of a quarter of a pound metric weekly. Children under two years are not considered in this estimate, and those between two and 14 years will receive half the stated quantity. Fat cards may also be introduced with a maximum of 180 grains of butter and margarine together, or a quarter of a pound of all kinds of fat. Persons receiving butter by post from outside point must report the amount received and have their butter cards correspondingly cancelled

Potato Cards.

At Dresden potato cards have been introduced, a maximum of seven pounds per capita being allowed weekly.

TRYING TO SAVE WOMAN MURDERER FROM EXECUTION

Mrs. Warren and Accomplice Sentenced to Die March 3, in North Carolina, For Killing Husband

RALEIGH, N.C., Feb. 24. — For the first time in North Carolina—if nothing intervenes to avert it—a woman will be executed on March 3 for murder. She is Mrs. Ida Ball Wargan, convicted with one Sam Christy of the murder of her husband. The man's excution is set for the same date.

Three stories of the crime have been told—by the woman, by her brother-in-law, Clifford Stonestreet, and by Christy, who is a Texan. The place of the murder was in Winston-Salem.

Mrs. Warren says she was born in Clemmons, N.C., and in 1913 was married to G. J. Warren. She grew tired of him and chloroformed him with the help of Christy, on August 17, 1914, at Stonestreet's home. Mrs. Warren was not arrested till the following April, when she confessed her share in the crime.

Christy said that he met Ida Ball in Winston-Salem in 1913 and that they went together to Lynchburg, Va., where they lived together under the name of "Kearns." Later they went to Franklin Junction, Va., where Christy got a job on the railroad as a section hand. There Warren, a railroad man, appeared and boarded at the house.

One day Christy came home to find the man and woman gone and $80 of his savings also missing. He followed the pair, but lost their trail. He said he intended to kill them if he found them. He went to Texas, where he married and settled down.

Then he received a letter from Mrs. Warren, telling of her marriage and adding that she was in trouble, and wanted him. He came north and with the woman and Stonestreet plotted the death of her husband. Mrs. Warren was to chloroform her husband while he slept and the other two were to come in then and help finish the work.

The unconscious man was garroted with a piece of rope. His body was placed in a trunk, carried to a nearby stream, and after being beaten till unrecognizable, was weighted down and thrown into the water. A freshet brought it to the top ten days later.

People came from all directions thinking the body might be that of some missing friend or relative, but the body was finally buried in Potter's Field, unidentified. Later the complaint of Warren's parents that he was missing directed attention and suspicion to Mrs. Warren, and she was arrested.

Christy and Mrs. Warren were sentenced to death, but Stonestreet convinced the jury that he had played only a minor part, and he escaped with a sentence of three years in prison.

Mrs. Warren is in Forsyth County jail, where the electrocution is to take place.

Many associations are endeavouring to secure a comutation of the sentence. Chief Justice Clark of the Supreme Court of the State affirmed the sentence of death without comment. The petitions carry simply the plea that Mrs. Warren, being a woman, should not be put to death.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles, and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hinz, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease.

Fear in Battle "Beautiful," Says One Soldier Who Conquered It

German newspapers print opinions of soldiers on their sensations when going into battle, especially their experiences in regard to fear. They quote from an interview in the Nouvelle Revue, in which a French captain says that every soldier, no matter how brave, is momentarily overcome by a sensation of fear when going into battle.

"I know that every time I lead my company into battle fear comes upon me, not only for myself, but also for my men. And, strange to say, in the midst of the battle, with bullets and shells flying all around us, fear is banished entirely. One thinks of nothing else then but to vanquish the enemy."

A wounded German officer gives his impressions as follows:

"There is something we learn in war of which we can have no conception in times of peace, and that is the beauty of fear. Yes, it is beautiful, and there is no disgrace about it. The beauty of it consists in the victory of the soldier over fear. He who experiences this awful fear on going into battle and conquers it alone can know the joy of living. It makes a man richer and nobler; it strengthens his character and develops his soul. He who once faces death and survives lives, so to speak, an entirely new and different life. Worldly and material things fade and lose their former value.

"It makes a man deeply religious —not so much in the way of a church goer, but a firm believer in God and immortality. And after that the soldier no longer has any fear of death. He looks upon death merely as an incident in life.

"War, after all, is a holy thing, and he who enters into it should be like one going into a church.

"When I again go to the front I will go gladly. I will have no fear, for that has been for ever banished, but I will go with a great earnestness, to do my whole duty and to work and fight, so long as God wills, for our beloved country."

CONTRACTS REPUDIATED.

German Ironmasters, Under Pressure of Their Government, Leave Dutch in a Hole.

ROTTERDAM, Feb. 21.—The repudiation of all iron contracts with Holland by the German ironmaster and the simultaneous institution of a government selling bureau, which offers goods at greatly enhanced prices, has caused a great deal of resentment in the trade in Holland. Dutch merchants, as a result of Germany's action, find themselves unable to fulfil their sub-contracts, and have therefore addressed an appeal to the Dutch Government to obtain from the German Government an explanation of this action and, at the same time, to demand that permission shall be given for the export of all goods contracted for before January 6, the day on which the prohibition was iushed.

The view is held here that if these contracts have been calmly annulled at the instigation of the German government, in order to obtain higher prices, that would be a precedent which might lead to dangerous consequences. The holding of this view is strengthened by the fact that Germany's output of articles referred to is much greater than her home requirements, either for war or peace purposes.

Don't fail to look around at once and see where you can retrench, but, above all, where you can prevent waste.

Free Wheat Is Voted Down By The Government

W. F. Maclean Voted With Opposition For Removal of Tariff

OTTAWA, Feb. 24.—Free wheat received is quietus in the House yesterday. At the funeral service the chief mourners were the members of the Liberal Opposition, plus William Findlay Maclean, B.A., the gentleman from South York. After sundry statesmen had sung the praises of free wheat, with Mr. Maclean joining in the chorus and the amens, Sir Robert Borden gave the signal for the dead march. As the result the resolution which had for its purpose the dropping of the tariff on American wheat so that the States would cancel the levy against Canadian wheat, was lost by a vote of 77 to 44, a Government majority of 33.

Many Wanted to Talk.

Hon. Mr. Rogers resumed the debate on the free wheat question, and when it became known that the intention was to take a vote before adjournment everybody showed an anxiety to participate in the talk. Many western members of the Opposition dug up old reasons why free wheat should be allowed. The vote showed a straight party division, except for that of W. F. Maclean.

"That is Canada's great opportunity," said Mr. Rogers. "We occupy a commanding position now. Would it be wise to make an arrangement whereby our grain would go through the United States and would be subject to their inspection?" To adopt the Turriff resolution would be to lower the grades in Canada.

Cruise, of Dauphin, did not fear that free wheat would hurt the flour industry. At any rate, the Government might provide for free wheat while the war was on, and build ships to carry it across the sea.

Alex. Morrison, of Macdonald (Man.), said removal of the duty would make it impossible for Canada to keep the surplus grain for Britain and the Allies, while Levi Thompson, of Qu-Appelle, said Canada was now exporting so much hard wheat as to glut the British market, whereas a splendid demand existed for such grades in the United States.

Further the N.P.

W. F. Maclean was sure that the democracy of the west demanded free wheat, and it was the duty of the Government in that way to further the national policy. He had made sacrifices in his time for the national policy, he said, and he feared that the United States Democratic party would abolish its tariff on Canadian wheat and then the Government would be in a pretty stew.

Hon. Arthur Meighen, Solicitor-General, gave figures to prove that the Government had provided facilities for the carriage of wheat across the sea. The Turriff resolution went to the root of the trend of Canadian legislation. The slightly higher prices in Minneapolis, as compared with Winnipeg, were due to local conditions, and would vanish if the duty was removed.

Grain Growers' Remedy.

If there was a combination between the millers and the grain dealers in the west, as had been alleged, the Grain Growers' Grain Company had the remedy in its own hands. It could offer to pay the just price for grain. Mr. Meighen said it would be unfair to the smaller millers to remove the duty. Why should not the Grain Growers' Association go into the milling business itself if it was dissatisfied

Don't for one moment lost sight of the fact that the Huns can be fought in the home as powerfully as in the field.

Don't forget that money will win the war and that, in the long run, the home will have to be taxed to find the money.

Gillespie Thinks Result in Peel Conservative Win

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—A paragraph appeared in Thursday night's Review quoting from Mr. Blain. In reference to my arguments used in canvassing the electors of Peel, I wish to say that such words as quoted by Mr. Blain were never uttered by me. I think Mr. Blain will realize by the result of the election that the day of poltician is gone. The electors will not be humbugged by such methods.

I consider the result is more of a victory for the Conservative party than for the Liberals. The party's honour was at stake; that will live long after Mr. Blain or Mr. Fallis. The Conservatives of Peel have, as it were, broken away from a bondage which will now set them free. They will be in a position to say to Mr. Blain: "We are now going to run our own conventions and you must act as our servant, not our master."

Yours, etc.,

G. A. Gillespie.

HAVELOCK YOUTH IS VERY ANXIOUS TO DON THE KHAKI

Son of Mr. James Thompson, M.P.P., Writes a Pathetic Letter to His Father---Uncle Arthur is "Dead Sure" of Being Chaplain of the 156th Battalion--Meeting of Belmont Women's Institute.

HAVELOCK, Feb. 24.—Master Charlie Thompson, son of Mr. Jas. Thompson, M. P. P., who resides at Brocheille with Mr. and Mrs Vanlerman, and who is 16 years of age is desperately anxious to enlist and writes his father the following pathetic letter as a plea for his consent. Mr. Thompson does not want Charlie to enlist until he is 17.

Dear Papa:—I have not heard from you since writing you two letters about my enlistment. I am writing you my reasons for wanting to enlist.

I should like the military life because I have been in the Cadets and Scouts and have drilled. Now please say "Yes" and I will be the happiest boy in the country. I cannot do my work properly at school when I see my friends enlisting and I am left out. Within the last three weeks four of my friends have enlisted. Please answer quickly.

Reasons for Me Enlisting.

2.—I promised a boy that I would enlist when he did.

3.—Uncle Arthur is dead sure of being chaplain of the 156th Battalion and he would keep me straight.

4.—The 156th is a Leeds and Grenville Battalion and I know about 160 of the fellows who are in it.

5.—They want boys about 15, 16 and 17 years of age for buglers.

6.—I think I might be able to persuade some others to enlist.

7.—I want to see something of real war and maybe do some good. It doesn't trouble me much if I should get killed because that is part of the game.

8.—I will not be contented until I can get a uniform on.

9.—I told you that I could fix my school work all right.

Biggest Snowfall of the Season

Invested Peterboro' This Morning —Will Be Welcomed by the Farmers

The biggest snowfall of the season arrived during the night, when nearly one foot of snow was accounted for. Citizens who went to bed early last evening found a big surprise in store when they awakened this morning. Some of the snow-plough contractors were a little slow in getting out, with the result that many of the citizens were compelled to wade through the snow. The contractors have had a very light season. It is one of those winters when the city might have saved money by undertaking this work on their own account. The worst difficulty this winter has been with the ice. The city has used more than the maximum amount of sand in an effort to keep the streets in a safe condition. Even with these precautions there has been an unusual number of cases of broken limbs, due to the slippery condition of the sidewalks.

The present snowfall will be of material value to the farmers, as it will serve to cover the wheat and clover which up to this time, has been exposed. So far as can be learned, little damage has resulted to these crops. The next month or two will occasion more anxious moments than the preceding ones.

spectacular features, introducing some of the most thrilling acrobatic and balancing feats ever seen outside of a circus. Some of the musicians did everything but stand on one ear. The best man on the ice was Harry Worrall for the Band—at least he was down on the ice most; while for the Signallers Arthur Edward, who was introduced for a few moments in the second period was in great form. Bandsman Clary in the nets qualified for the Victoria Cross by the cool manner he faced the enemy's fire. The Pioneers intended to challenge the winners, but after looking the game over, decided it wasn't worth while. All the bandsmen who were not in the game were on hand to encourage their comrades with a little incidental music. If the musicians on the ice had played as well as those on the side the game might have been closer. As it was the Signallers hadn't much trouble. They were ahead 3 to 2 at half time, and ran away in the second half. Pte. Harry Flewett refereed the game ably, assisted by Pte. "Scottie" McKinlay, whose advice from the side was a feature. The guilty parties gave their names to the referee as follows:

TURK LOSSES HALF MILLION

Battle of Verdun Has Developed Into the Greatest Contest Since Battle of Ypres in Autumn of 1914

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The German drive against the French fortress of Verdun won further successes Wednesday night and yesterday with the evacuation by the French of the four villages of Brabant-sur-Meuse, Haumont, Samogneux and Ornes. With the capture of Samogneux the Germans brought themselves within five miles of the nearest fort of the Verdun group, Fort Canville, and at Ornes they are about the same distance from Fort Douaumont.

The battle line, which the recent German victories has bent in the centre in the wooded country north of Beaumont until it resembled a loosely-drawn letter M, has now been straightened by the Germans, the French withdrawing under pressure from Brabant-sur-Meuse, Haumont and Samogneux on the western flank, and from Ornes on the eastern flank. Beaumont, which forms the basis of the present Fresh centre in this salient, is still holding out against repeated desperate attacks.

Front Still Intact.

The French War Office, while admitting the withdrawal from the villages named, and the loss of considerable terrain, points out that the French lines have not been broken at any point. Paris despatches express confidence that the line will continue to remain intact.

The French official report admits that on both wings the French lines have been withdrawn, one part behind Sabogneux, the other to the south of Ornes, and considerable terrain abandoned, but the French front has not been broken at any point. The report says:

"Between the right bank of the Meuse and Ornes the enemy has shown the same ferocity as on the preceding day, and multiplied his furious attacks, leaving on the ground piles of dead without having succeeded in breaking our front."

Although the village of Beaumont is still held by the French, marking the point of a wedge projecting into the new German line, the woods to the north-west, north and north-east of the village, in which desperate fighting has been going on since the beginning of the offensive, have been occupied by the Germans. L'Herbebois, in this part of the salient, also is in the hands of the Germans, the French having retired to positions in a ravine just to the south.

The German advance was made only at a cost of heavy losses according to the French communiques and was accomplished slowly thereby giving the French opportunity to withdraw in good order from those positions which it was found impossible to hold without suffering useless losses. Thus, so far the retreating French have been able to establish themselves firmly in the positions to the rear, maintaining the integrity of their line in spite of their loss of ground.

In the region to the north of Perdun the Germans continued to bombard with the same intensity the French front from the Meuse up to south of Fromezey, but the artillery activity slackened a little between Malancourt and the left bank of the Meuse. No infantry action has occurred as yet in this region.

The contest has already developed into the most serious battle since the Battle of Ypres, in the Autumn of 1914.

It is estimated that the Germans have concentrated about half a million men between the plains of Champagne and the Woevre. The veteran Field Marshal Count von Hausseler is acting as adviser to the Crown Prince in conducting the offensive. Count von Hausseler formerly was in command of the fortress of Mets, and is well acquainted with the country.

The plan with which Field Marshal von Hindenburg succeeded in Russia is being followed. Two hundred thousand men are massed on a narrow front of several miles between Brabant-sur-Meuse and L'Herbebois, advancing in close formation, 12 deep. They are mown down by machine guns, but take up the advance again, their heavy artillery active all the time.

The German losses are extremely great. Whole units have been wiped out, but the troops are sticking to the assault with wonderful tenacity.

Prisoners say that on the eve of the battle General von Deimr Leing, commanding the Fifteenth Army Corps, issued an order, in which he said:

"I hope that in this final offensive against France the Fifteenth Corps will distinguish itself as it has done hitherto."

Notwithstanding their terrible losses, the Germans have not advanced more than 2,000 yards on a front of the same extent. Nowhere have they pierced the French line. This line, which before the battle was a semi-circle, including in its circuit Forges, Brabant-sur-Meuse, and Haumont, is now more or less a straight line through Samogneux, Beaumont and Ornes.

Ten Men to Every Three Feet.

The Temps in its military review estimates that the Germans are employing on the average ten infantrymen to every three feet of front where the attack is fiercest north of Verdun—that is, over a line eight miles in length between Brabant and Ornes. The reviewer maintains that the operations are not necessarily preliminary to an attempt to besiege Verdun, but comprise an attack upon a wide part of the front of which Verdun forms a part of the rear support. The attacks, he declares, are still held within the first-line works, while there are three other lines at strategic intervals behind the first. These lines are more solidly constructed and more elaborate in their nature than the first lines, as work on them could be done at leisure without the workers being within the reach of the German fire.

Voice of The People

Editor of the Examiner:—

Permit a grumble to say a few words, in hopes of starting someone else. I was somewhat surprised on reading the other evening, that the lady of prison fame (Mrs Pankhurst) was being invited here to lecture.

Who wants her here? Are our hands not full enough now. What good is to be derived from such a personage. If her work in England had to cease during the war, why bring her here to stir up strife at home. Cannot German sympathizing do enough to annoy, and disturb the nation, without raising a civil war and contention in our own cities, to mob and maybe members of parliament; smash merchants' windows, fire respectable houses, and blow up public buildings. If Americans had such objections to her placing foot on American soil, from her conduct in England, why favor her coming to the colony to extend her unlawful doings. Is there not a writer, man or woman, to speak out in the way to be heard and prevent such disturbers of the peace coming into our midst. Yours truly,

LUCY RIGHT.

BERLINERS RUSH TO JOIN

Recruiting Has Been Quite Satisfactory This Week.

BERLIN, Ont., Feb. 25.—With the proposal to change the name of the city, and the active work of the Recruiting Committee, there has been an encouraging rush of young men to the recruiting rooms this week. Up to noon yesterday 27 had been attested, and about half as many were rejected. Personal letters were sent to all eligible men in the city, and the response has been most satisfactory. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bayliss of this city have contributed four sons for overseas service. Three are at the front, one of whom has been wounded twice, and a fourth is training with the 118th Battalion here.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Band Concert, Hockey And Skating To-night At Brock Street Rink

In addition to the hockey game at Brock Street Rink to-night between the 93rd Battalion and the Electrics there will be skating afterwards and the 25c. admission covers both.

The proceeds are for the Belgian Relief Fund and the game will commence sharp at 8 o'clock, so as to allow for the skating. The game itself will be worth the admission price as the teams have furnished a great battle every time they have met, and the rivalry between the two is enough to make a battle out of any game. The Band of the 93rd Battalion will be on hand to provide music. The ice is in good shape and altogether it looks like a big night's amusement.

The Electrics' line-up will be picked from the following, all of whom are asked to be at the rink at 7.30 o'clock—Legros, Spratt, Lowes, Hamilton, Cherrett, Long, Graham, Evans, Montgomery, Kennealley.

Pennants Had Too Much Speed For Americans Last Night

The Pennants hung up their fourth straight win in the City League series last night when they walloped the Americans 8 goals to 3 in a fast game. It was a clear-cut victory for the Murray street aggregation, who had too much speed and cleverness for their older opponents. The youngsters gave perhaps their best exhibition of the season. They showed a clever combination, playing very unselfishly, and with it they had good stick-handling ability and a bunch of speed which enabled them to back check the Americans into the ground. The Pennants were ahead 2 to 0 at the end of the first period and 6 to 1 at the close of the second and were never in trouble.

Some of the Americans made the mistake of continuously going after a lot of long range shots to handle not only cost them the sympathy of the crowd, but was a poor policy in face of the combination of the winners. Perry was the worst in this respect. Some of the stuff he pulled off was very raw and the League officials would do well to keep an eye on this boy's work. Butt ending [illegible] N. H. A. stunts are out of place in a City League game, and the American player has been an offender all season.

All the Pennants had a share in the victory. O'Brien was cool and steady in the nets. The Americans gave him a lot of long range shots to handle and he blocked them cleverly. McIntyre and Mulhern were a strong defence, checking and rushing well. All the forwards gave a good account of themselves, with Kennealy and Bartley shining.

For the Americans, Jackson and Richardson starred. The former never let up and did some fine stick handling and rushing. McDonald in the nets, although he had hard luck with one shot that barely slid in, made some good stops.

The Pennants had a two goal lead at the end of the first period, although from the side it looked as if the youngster had really scored four. Two shots apparently found the nets but the goal umpire had paralysis of the arm. He was removed on the second dispute.

The youngsters came back strong in the second period and scored twice in quick succession. The Americans scored on a neat combination rush, but the Pennants retaliated with another pair of two pretty individual plays by Lapp and McIntyre. It was 6 to 1 at the turn and the Pennants opened the third period by grabbing the first score, Kennealy doing the trick on a neat rush and shot. The Americans got two in quick succession, but the Murray street gang were not through, and Lapp added another on a pass from Frost before the final bell rang.

Canadian League Catcher Is Released By Connie Mack

Connie Mack has decided at last what players he will take upon the training trip to Jacksonville. Twenty-eight players will compose the squad, most of them being youngsters. Some of them, however, performed with the Athletics last year.

There are three pitchers who are classed as veterans, Joe Bush, Weldon Wyckoff and Rube Bressler. The other hurlers are Crowell, Myers, Morrisette, Weaver, Nabors, Ray, Sheehan, Richardson and Aldworth. All of these, with the exception of Aldworth, who is a senior pro. from San Antonio, Tex., received trials with Philadelphia last season.

Morisette was with Richmond Va., where he won 16 and lost 25. Lack of control was his fault, as he passed 149 batters. Myers and Ray are graduates of the North Caroline League, Myers having led the league pitchers with 29 victories and 10 defeats, while he was almost last with 8 victories and 20 defeats. Nabors, a big southpaw, won 12 and lost but 1 in the Georgia-Alabama circuit; Richardson, a right hander, won 19 and lost 14 in the Western Association; Sheehan about broke even with Peoria. Weaver is a Philadelphia semi-pro. Myers, judging from his work with the Athletics, last year, is the best prospect.

Wally Schang will do most of the catching with three new men, Perkins, Murphy and Meyer, as assistants. Murphy hails from the New York State league, Perkins from Raleigh, N.C., and Meyer from the Three-I League. All are the owners of strong whips. McAvoy, the former Canadian Leaguer, who has been catching for the Athletics for two years, is to be released.

Stuffy McInnis is the only infielder who will not have a battle on his hands. Young Malone will try to crowd Nap Lajoie off second, Crane and McConnell, two North Carolina men, will fight it out at short, while Pick, once with the Leafs, and Witt a college boy, are the candidates for third base.

That completes the list of players that Mack now has and hopes to organize into a machine to beat Cleveland out of seventh place. Quite probably he will have to make some changes, and perhaps try out other players at short or third.

In addition to Catcher McAvoy Mack intends releasing Pitchers Knowlson and Wilbur Davis, Infielders Damrau, Healey and Seibold and Outfielder Davies, the latter having quit baseball to enter business.

CURLING

Ex-Mayor Bradburn hasn't been seen around the curling rink since the bonspiel, in fact hasn't been down town if all reports are correct. It is learned that he has been confined to his home with the La Grippe, the price of winning first honours in the consolation series. Mr. Bradburn, with only half a day's experience of bonspieling, had growing misgivings that he had been inveigled by "Pete" Lang into a situation where he had to back against a wall and slave his way out. And that is just what the bonspiel developed for the former Mayor, who has since been in the hands of doctors, nurses and that sort of thing. Among those who doubtless went up to the house to sit up with him was Skip Lang. If he didn't, he overlooked one of his official duties. Of course, in condoling with his "second stone" the skip, who is accustomed to dealing in minute figures, outlined the work Mr. Bradburn had laboured through. He vowed that each member of that rink, including Guy Ac-assessor Henry and Corp. Jack Moore, had hurled four tons of rock five miles in a day and a half, with few and brief intermissions for lunch and other things.

Taking an average of the number of rocks in a field, Skip Lang was able to show by comparison how many acres Mr. Bradburn had cleared, and the length of stone fence this would have provided for. Altogether it was a formidable statement and an indication that bonspiels are not exactly joy affairs, and entail more hard work for mere business men than they anticipate. Small wonder that the ex-Mayor resolved to pass up bonspiels at least with a fighting rink that he and Skip Lang assembled.

It may not be too personal to remark that among the coming curlers Mr. E. G. Patterson has to be reckoned with. Since joining the local club a few years ago, he has shown steady improvement, and has been playing a very good game this winter.

In last night's scheduled games, McDermid defeated Brightman by 14 to 8; George Giroux won by 17 to 11 from W. G. Ferguson, by getting five on the 11th end; Ray Best snatched a win from W. H. Denham by 10 to 8, and Dr. Greer defeated George Hill by 12 to 11. Half of the Doctor's score represents a six end, which paved the way to his final win.

Greatest War Brain Bred Since Nelson

London Papers Demand That "Jacky" Fisher Resume Naval Command.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The British Weekly, which recently suggested Lord Northcliffe as Air Defence Minister, now cries for Lord "Jacky" Fisher to resume the naval command, "lacking whom," says the Weekly, "England will lack the greatest war brain she has bred since Nelson. The greatest war ever waged has produced very few war brains. Only one man has beaten the Germans in brain power and that man is Lord Fisher."

CASTLE A GOOD SPORT

Had to Dance a Last Performance to Square Himself Before Leaving to Join the Allies' Air Squad

The Castle has just danced for the last time. The biggest crowd the Hippodrome ever held has applauded and tossed flowers and chatted cheerfully about Irene's flimsy frocks and Vernon's tailless tunic. Most of the women had devoted moments of special discussion to the topic of Irene's new white wig. Practically all of the men had looked the monster house over and wondered how many thousands of dollars were pouring in the box office as the essential and important product of the Castle's last night on the stage.

Many had wondered what share of it Irene and Vernon would get, and the more vulgar had observed that Vernon was a sublimated simp for walking out of a show where he was getting his half of $1,500 a week to go over and afford a physically difficult target for expert German wing shots. A good many people had remarked casually that Vernon spoke but little and Irene not at all, but that was nothing to astonish. It was to be conceived that Vernon had nothing in particular to say, and that Irene had realized that she is a looker, exclusively. There were even Castle fans present who remembered their throbbing sorrow when Irene—in "Watch Your Step"—first spoke in public, and the sense of personal bereavement which came when she sang.

Of course, there was some gossip about the separation of Vernon and Irene. There's been such a lot said about it, you know. But that didn't amount to much, because Vernon had denied it and then they wouldn't be dancing together, you know, if all those stories were true. So no one paid much attention to that except some people who had seats on the edge of the stage where they happened to be able to see and hear when Vernon met a squad of reporters.

"Oh, that's absurd," Vernon was saying to them, "Why should I separate from my wife? She is a charming woman and we have no differences. Yet, I'm going away, but I'm an Englishman and it seems to me that it oughtn't to be difficult to understand why I'm going away. I can't see why you should draw any conclusions that are unfair and unkind to my wife."

Of course that went round from one to another on the stage, and the gossip about the separation died.

And then the man who knew things conversed confidentially with his friend in a retired corner, off stage. "Great business," he said. "A little more than six thousand—not quite sixty-two hundred. The Castles got about twenty-eight hundred for their share. They split it; fourteen hundred apiece. And that's Vernon's bank roll. You see he went up to see Dillingham and told him he needed money to go to Europe and join the army flying corps. Nothing new. He hasn't a nickel. Just can't keep money. Told Dillingham that he had a couple of thousand dollars owing to him for something or other and offered to turn over the claim for about 50 per cent. cash, so he could go over. "Won't lend you any money, Dillingham said. 'Make you work for it.'

"'How?' Vernon asks.

"'Dance a Sunday night at the Hippodrome for me. Give you 50 per cent. of the profit. Irene can come in from the show and go back again on a midnight train.'

"'I'd rather not,' Vernon said. 'Stopped dancin', y' know. Got all I can do to get my pilot's license. Not an easy trick, this flying thing.'

"'Gotto do it,' Dillingham says, 'if I want money. Guarantee a thousand for your part.

"'Good enough. Vernon says. 'When do I do it?'

"So you see, he goes over to get shot at with just what's left on this fourteen hundred in his kick. And I wouldn't give you $8 for it if he don't sail quick."

"How about Irene?" asked the friend of the man who knows things. "Has she—"

"Got it? Has she? Scads! The polo ponies belongs to her, and the Long Island, and the motor cars, and she's got an income of more than $80,000 a year from corset and toilet articles and things that are named after her. Irene's a good little business woman. She's on Easy Street."

And the conversation ended here on account of the commotion which was caused by Mrs. Castle's departure to take the midnight train back to the show.

Few Parisians Now Pay Rent

At the beginning of the war, in view of the profound disturbance caused by the mobilization in the commercial, industrial, and social life of the nation, the government issued, among other moriatoria, one applying to house rents. Although intended primarily for the relief of small rent payers—soldiers called to the colours, chiefly—the moiatorium was in reality much wider in scope; and although landlords were authorized to take legal proceedings for the recovery of rent in cases where they could prove the ability of their tenants to pay, they found in actual practice that their position was too weak, and most of them have abstained from any serious attempts to enforce their rights.

It is doubtful if the government intended the moratorium to be extended for the duration of the war, and many persons believe it would have been wiser to have at least limited its scope after the first three months. Instead, the measure has been prolonged from quarter to quarter, and the situation has now grown so acute that an early solution is essential. Paris, indeed, as well as the whole of France for that matter, quickly settled itself down to the comfortable practice of not paying its rent.

That there have been abuses goes without saying. Persons who were quite able to pay their rent, not having suffered in any way from the war, have not hesitated to take advantage of the moratorium. Gradually there has grown among the public a firm conviction that at the end of the war the government would be obliged to pass some sort of law exonerating tenants generally from a certain proportion of the rent they might owe at the time. It was a dangerous belief.

First of all, Mr. Briand, the Premier, shattered the fond hopes of those who could but would not pay, by declaring publicly that all tenants in a position to do so must be made to fulfill their liabilities. Then, for the anuary quarter, the moratorium was timidly modified so as to compel government and other public officials, as well as the Bank of France employees drawing regular salaries, to pay their rent.

The question is an extraordinarily complex one, and it is no wonder that the government shirked dealing with it for so long. It is complicated by the number of different categories of tenants and landlords, and by the hopelessness of expecting the small rent payers to be able ever to settle the arrears which the law has allowed them to accumulate. It is obvious that a soldier who has fought for his country for eighteen months or two years, during which time he and his family have been deprived of their ordinary resources and obliged to subsist on the modest separation allowance granted by the State, cannot decently be asked to pay two years' back rent, even in instalments. It is highly probable, moreover, that if such men were worried by landlords there would be serious trouble in the country.

The landlords imprudently clamour for payment in full. Their argument is that, as the State made the law which caused the loss, the State must be held responsible and ought to indemnify completely the landlords.

The tenants, vigorously supported by the Socialist party, are opposed to all idea of the State reimbursing the landlords, because, they assert, the money would have to come from the taxpayers' pockets, and thus the burden would still be borne by the tenants.

The magnitude of the question may be gauged by the fact that the rents unpaid since the war in Paris alone amount to $400,000,000.

JUST GOOD ENOUGH TO BE DANGEROUS?

IF Poor Advertising Mediums were ENTIRELY worthless, they would not be Dangerous. For they would not, then, make any appeal whatever to sensible advertisers.

But an ADVERTISING MEDIUM which has a LITTLE MERIT is like "a little knowledge," "a dangerous thing." Some Business Men there are, always, who—for considerations of "cheapness" etc.—will either rely upon such mediums wholly, or give them an absurdly large part in their Advertising Campaigns.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

EYE TALKS SERIES

NO. 13—EFFECT OF SUN'S GLARE ON EYES

SOME people find they feel the glare of the Sun acutely through their glasses. The lenses are suitable for correcting all errors of vision, both for near and distant use, and possibly are the finest quality, may even be Dr. Fowler's famous "Pebio" glasses. The eyes, however, are extremely sensitive to strong light, and a beautiful bright day brings real discomfort.

This is all unnecessary, and if you report the fact to Dr. Fowler he will show you his "Acto" lenses, which are an exceptionally high-grade glass, with a very slight tint of green, so clear as to be un-noticeable, yet sufficiently opaque to catch the glaring rays as they strike the glass, and soften them so that they strike the eyes evenly distributed all over, and not in needle-like points as they feel to a sensitive eye.

If you have such trouble, let Dr. Fowler change your lenses, and try them out a few days—That's the way to prove their value.

REGIMENT NO. 2S IS DROPPED FROM ARMY.

"In the National Museum in Vienna there are flags draped in black behind which is a dramatic story to which I have seen reference in one or two publications, says the London Daily Mail correspondent:

"They are the flags of the Twenty-eighth Regiment of the line, consisting of Bohemians only and of men of Prague, the capital of Bohemia. These men intended to desert to the Russians, and seeing before them what they thought were Russian regiments, they threw down their arms and held up their hands in token of submission. But the 'Russians' were Prussians. The Bohemians did not know that the round cap of the Russian soldier is practically the same as the Prussian.

"The Prussian officers immediately saw the situation, turned on the machine guns, and massacred a great many of them. The rest were taken prisoners, and then as a punishment, out of every five men one was shot, and one officer out of every three. The rest were sent to the most dangerous part of the fighting line and very few remain. The draped flags in the National Museum are the signs of their disgrace. The Twenty-eighth Regiment no longer exists in the Austrian army list."

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

Mr O. N. Gordon will address a meeting for young men at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon at 4.15 o'clock. G. Douglas Carlisle will render a vocal solo. As this meeting is of special interest a cordial invitation extended to all young men to attend. We would like to see the 93rd battalion well represented at this meeting and take this opportunity of extending to them a personal invitation to be present.

M. F. S. Sheppard, Military secretary of the Y. M. C. A. National council was in the city Thursday conferring with the officers of the local Association regarding plans for work among the local soldiers. Mr. Sheppard expects to return to Peterboro next week for a further conference with the local members of the Board of Directors.

It is a pleasure to state that 7 Dormitory rooms have been rented during the past week, bringing the number occupied up to eighteen. There are still 6 vacant rooms which we expect to fill soon. As young men are coming and going constantly we trust that the friends of the Association will recommend the Y.M.C.A. dormitories to young men who want a comfortable home with club privileges.

For a few months he has been a resident of the west end, and last week moved to a farm near Norwood, which he bought from Mr. William Scott.

Major (Dr.) Perry G. Goldsmith, formerly of Peterborough, recently returned from England on a short furlough, has been appointed a lieutenant-colonel for meritorious service, and appointed to the staff of the new Canadian Eye and Ear Hospital at Folkestone. At the beginning of the war Dr. Goldsmith was attached as medical officer of the Queen's Own Rifles, and went to England in that capacity. He was sent on to France before the Canadian contingent was ready, and spent some months at Boulogne, where he was attached to a British Hospital in high capacity. Major Goldsmith established an eye and ear clinic there, and some time later was transferred back to England. He expects to return to England shortly

COMMANDER'S ADIEU IS CARRIED BY SEA

Four Messages Written After All Hope Had Been Abandoned.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—A bottle has been picked up from the sea containing last messages from the commander of Zeppelin L-19, which was wrecked in the North Sea, addressed to the commander's parents, wife and little son. The last message stated that the airship had dropped and the crew was drowning, says a Reuter despatch from Copenhagen.

The yacht Stella picked up the bottle containing the messages from Commander Uhle, near Gothenburg. Four letters were found, two addressed to the parents of the Zeppelin commander, and one each to his wife and child. The letters were written at successive periods. The third states that the airship was then 100 metres above the water, that the motors had failed to act, and that all were expecting at any moment to drop. The fourth letter states that the airship had dropped and the crew were drowning.

The L-19 was wrecked in the North Sea shortly after the Zeppelin raid over England, on January 31. It is believed to have been one of the Zeppelins which took part in the raid having been damaged either by British anti-aircraft guns or by Dutch territory at a low altitude.

The captain of the British trawler King Stephen, reported he had encountered the L-19, in a sinking condition in the North Sea, but did not attempt to rescue Germans, as they outnumbered his crew.

Rev. D. A. Casey to Edit Canadian Freeman

We learn with pleasure that the Rev. D. A. Casey, of the Diocese of Peterborough, whose transfer from the pastorate of Bracebridge to that of Norwood was lately announced, has accepted the editorship of The Canadian Freeman of Kingston. Father Casey's contributions, in prose and verse (the former under the pen-name of "Columbia") have been among the most interesting features of The Catholic Record of London. The new editor of the Freeman, we understand, enters upon his duties in two weeks. His doing so will be a distinct gain to the cause of Catholic journalism in Ontario.—The Catholic Register.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, N.Y., Feb. 25.—The President's position, outlined in his letter to Senator Stone, removed some uncertainty in Wall Street to-day and the market, which slumped yesterday was steady during the first hour. Traders were still nervous, however, and such price changes as were marked up were irregular and on a narrow margin. Crucible and American Can developed a weakness, while Reading sold above 70. American Woolen was active.

American Locomotive, Baldwin and Crucible went slightly higher later in the forenoon and in the early afternoon trading practically the whole list turned higher, the rail road and coal stocks joining more speculative issues like war industrials in the upward climb. Reading gained two points and Chesapeake and Ohio a point. U. S. Steel turned active and higher, and American Can, American Locomotive and Baldwin gained from one to two points.

Funeral of Mrs. Chas. Farr

The funeral of Mrs. Charles Farr took place in Regina and was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Urie, of Francis and Pleasant View Presbyterian churches.

Besides the bereaved husband only two brothers, Russel and Stuart Drummond, of Tregarva, were able to be present, as the other members of both families live at a distance, and were unable to be here. Among the out-of-town mourners were a number of friends from Bedley and Brora.

The late Mrs. Farr was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Drummond of Keene, Ont., and came west five years ago, settling with her husband near Bedley, where she found a wide circle of friends.

Besides the two brothers mentioned Mrs. Farr had two brothers and one sister, Mrs. Major Thompson, Bridge of Allan, Scotland, one sister, Miss Lila, on the hospital ships plying between the Aegean Sea and Great Britain, and one brother still at home with the father and mother.

The floral tributes, which were very beautiful, were as follows: Wreath the husband; sheaf, the Pleasant View Church Ladies' Aid; sheaf, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Partridge, Regina; spray, the Misses N. and I. Renwick; spray, Russell and Stuart Drummond; and spray, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Renwick, Regina.

REEVE McINTOSH SPOKE AT GOOD ROADS CON.

County Council Represented By Roads and Bridges Committee

The Peterborough County Council was represented at the Ontario Good Roads Convention this week by the members of the Committee on Roads and Bridges.

F. A. Eason, deputy reeve of Otonabee, was on the resolutions committee, dealing with proposed amendments to the Ontario Roadways Act.

Mr. McIntosh, the reeve of North Monaghan, set out his views of County roads system and the reasons why every county of similar conditions to the County of Peterborough should take the initiative by adopting a system of county roads consistent with local conditions. He stated that the first thing necessary was to get into the harness, after which familiarity would be a source of education most essential to the successful prosecution of county road building. It is not necessary but detrimental to the project to launch out heavily. Cautious movement at the onset would be less costly as a source of education, yet as beneficial as a prelude to a continuous county road building. He further stated that the County of Peterborough had appointed a special committee to deal with the mater of the county adopting a road system and he felt sure that the County of Peterborough would recognize the proposition of the government in the interest of the people by co-operating in so far as local conditions permitted. He was ably supported by Messrs. Ketchen, Eason, Squire and Crough, other members of the County Council who also took part in the discussion.

SHORTAGE OF MEN IN BRITAIN

Results From Conscription Bill Disappoint War Office.

LONDON, Feb. 26. — The recent statement that all the married men who attested under the enlistment plan of ord Derby will be called up by July was unofficial, but there seems to be little doubt as to its accuracy. It is stated that private hints have been given to banks and other large institutions to enable them to make timely provisions for the replacing of such employes as are called to the colours.

It is no secret that the results of the compulsory bill have been disappointing to the authorities and that the War Office is short of men in training. Ample accommodations for a large number of men have been provided, but the stream of recruits is not flowing in sufficient volume. It is probable, for this reason, that the Gov't has just decided to give official recognition and status to volunteer training corps throughout the country. These corps, it is believed, will aggregate nearly 400,000 men, and the importance of the step lies in the fact that they will now come under the control of the War Office, which will employ them for home defence, thus relieving regular troops for foreign service.

The Hull recruiting committee has passed a resolution to the effect that serious injustice will be done married men who attested under the Derby scheme unless the Government enforces compulsory military service for all unattested married men

Britain's Volunteer Corps Will Add 400,000 Men to the Army

Will Be Used for Home Defence, Releasing Regular Troops For Active Duty--All the Groups of Married Men to Be Called Soon

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The government has decided to grant official recognition to all forces affiliated with the volunteer training corps under the volunteer act of 1863.

The importance of this step in the present crisis cannot be overestimated, as the effect will be to bring the volunteer training corps, which contains between 300,000 and 400,000 men, under control of the War Office for home defence employment thereby relieving regular troops for more active service overseas.

Lord Derby's acceptance of the chairmanship of a joint naval and military board to control the British air service was announced in the House of Commons this afternoon by the Premier. The position is not a salaried one.

All the groups of married men who attested for service in the army under the Lord Derby scheme will be called for service in batches, according to reports Friday.

Beginning on April 29 with the younger groups, the men of twenty-four to thirty-five years of age will be called out, and subsequently the men will be summoned as follows:—May 13, men of thirty-four to thirty-six years; May 27, men thirty-seven to thirty-nine; June 10, men forty to forty-two, and June 24, men aged forty-three to forty-five. The oldest group, men forty-six years of age, will be called on July 8. These arrangements are provisional.

SEIZES THIRTY-SIX TEUTON VESSELS.

LISBON, via Paris, Feb. 26.—The Official Gazette publishes a decree under which thirty-six German and Austrian merchant ships lying in the Tagus River were seized by the commander of the naval division here Wednesday.

It appears that the seizure was under a law passed by Parliament on February 7. The Premier in an interview affirms that the seizure is not an act of war, but simply a measure in the public interest.

The Portuguese Minister in Berlin has been instructed to explain to the German government the significance of the seizures and give assurances that the rights of the owners will be respected. Portuguese crews have been placed on board the ships seized.

TO ENLIST NO NATIVES.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—A suggestion was made in the House of Commons Thursday that African natives of Zululand and Basutoland be permitted to volunteer for the campaign against German East Africa. This plan was rejected by Mr. Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for War, who said he considered the enlistment of natives as undesirable and impracticable.

Germany Returns Supply Of Milk

Taken as Evidence That Food for Babies Can Be Sent.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—An interesting sidelight on the German post office in war times was disclosed by the receipt by the Citizens' Committee for Food Shipments of two 6-lb. cans of milk powder from Berlin.

These two packages were part of the 600-lb. shipment that left New York on the ... Stockholm January 2, consigned to different addresses in Germany and Austria-Hungary. Each can was sent by first-class mail, registered. The returned packages bear the official stamped information, "Moved without leaving forwarding address."

Dr. Edmund Von Mach, executive chairman of the committee, said: "I sincerely hope that this visible evidence will tend to refute, once and all, the ridiculous contentions set up regarding the German Government. The post office in Germany is being conducted to-day just as honestly and as methodically as ever. The pleasantest thing, however, is the direct confirmation that Great Britain has no intention to stop milk shipments intended for babies in the Central Empires."

AS WE GROW OLDER

our minds are quite as active as in former years but our strength does not respond when we need it most; perhaps the kidneys are weak, the liver torpid, rheumatic pains or stiffened joints beset us, and we cannot easily throw off the colds that winter brings.

What we need is the rich cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion to renew the blood and carry strength to every organ of the boby, while its glycerine soothes the respiratory tract, and its hypophosphites strengthen the excitable nerves.

Scott's Emulsion is a scientific oil-food, of unusual benefit to those past fifty years—particularly during the colder seasons, it imparts warmth and creates strength. One bottle will prove its worth. No harmful drugs.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

CHAPTER II.

THE FEAST OF SAINTE BARBE.

On the morning of December 4 in that same year a postman walked up the narrow path leading to the front door of Mere Pitou's house in the Rue Mathias, Pont Aven, and handed in a bundle of letters. The family was at breakfast, the petit dejeuner of coffee and rolls that stays the appetite in every French household until a more substantial meal is prepared at noon. The weather was mild and bright, though a gusty sou'westerly wind was blowing; so door and windows were open.

Barbe saw the postman ere he unlatched the garden gate, and rose excitedly, nearly upsetting a cup in her haste.

"Why, what's the rush?" cried Ingersoll. "And who in the world are all these letters for?"

"Father dear, have you forgotten the date? This is Barbe's name day," said Yvonne.

"Oh, that's the explanation of to-night's festivity," laughed Ingersoll. "Sorry. It quite slipped my mind. Of course she has wagonloads of friends who make a point of remembering these things. Lucky Barbe! And, by the way, Madame, what about those pictures which the Lady of Le Faouet was to dispose of? It's high time she was getting busy. Here are three months sped and—if anything rather a slump in Ingersoll. Actually, my best commission thus far is a series of picture postcards of Le Pouldu—with benefit deferred till next season."

"Perhaps the good saint knew that you kept your tongue in your cheek while you were seeking her help," retorted Madame.

"Impossible. It was lolling out. You ungrateful one, didn't I climb the hill twice for your sake?"

Barbe exchanged a friendly word with the postman, who was well aware of the cause of this sudden increase in the mail delivery at the cottage. Then she ran in.

"One for you, M'sieu'—all the rest for me," she announced gleefully.

Ingersoll took his letter. It bore the Pouldu postmark and the printed name of a hotel. Usually such missives came from brother artists; but the handwriting on the envelope was essentially of the type that French hotelkeepers cultivate for the utter hamboozling of their foreign patrons. Yvonne glanced at it with some curiosity, and was still more surprised to see the look of humorous bewilderment on her father's face when he had mastered its contents.

"I take back everything I said, or even thought, about Sainte Barbe," he cried. "Learn how she has squelched me! The proprietor of the chief hotel at Le Pouldu offers four hundred francs for a picture of the place with his hotel in the centre. Certainly four hundred is a heap short of a thousand, which was the sum I named to her saintship; but then, a hotelier isn't a dealer, and he promises to pay cash if the sketch is delivered in a week, because he wants it for a summer poster. Yvonne, have you finished breakfast? Run and find Peridot, there's a dear, and ask him if he can sail to Le Pouldu this morning. It'll save time to go by sea, and the tide will serve, I know. If Peridot says the weather is all right, drop in at Julia's, and invite Tollemache. We'll lunch gloriously with my hotel man, rub in the best part of the drawing afterward, and be back here in good time for the feast."

Yvonne hurried out. The hour was half-past eight, and the tide in the estuary of the Aven was already on the ebb. But she had not far to go. The Rue Mathias (nowadays glorified by a much more ambitious name) was not a minute's walk from the bridge that gives the village its name. Another minute brought her to the quay, where the brawling river escapes from its last millwheel, and tumbles joyously into tidal water. She was lucky. Peridot was there, mending a blue sardine net, — a natty, square-shouldered sailor, unusually fair for a Breton, though his blond hair was French enough in its bristliness, as a section of his scalp would have provided a first-rate clothes brush. He touched his cap with a smile when she appeared, and in answer to her query raised to the heavens those gray-green eyes which had earned him such a euphonious nickname.

"Yes, Mademoiselle Yvonne, we can make Le Pouldu by ten o'clock with this wind," he said. "We may get a wetting; but it won't be the first. Is—er—is Madeleine coming?"

"Not to-day. She promised to help Mere Pitou with to-night's supper. You will be there?"

"Wind and weather permitting, Ma'mselle. We go in your own boat, I suppose?"

"Yes. Can you allow fifteen minutes?"

"There will be plenty of water for the next half-hour."

Yvonne raced off again, this time to the Hotel Julia, not the huge modern annex, — that dominates the tiny marketplace of Pont Aven,—but the oldtime hostelry itself, tucked in snugly behind its four sycamores, like some sedate matron ever peering up in wonderment at its overgrown child across the street. In winter the habitues — the coterie of artists and writers who cluster under the wing of the famous Julia Guillou—eat in the dining-room of the smaller hotel.

Crossing the terrace, a gravelled part of the square shielded by the trees, Yvonne met Mademoiselle Julia herself, bustling forth to inspect eggs, poultry, and buckets of fish. This kindly, outspoken, resourceful-looking woman has tended and housed and helped at least two generations of painters. In her way she has done more for art than many academies.

"Is Monsieur Tollemache at breakfast, Mademoiselle?" inquired Yvonne.

Julia smiled broadly. Evidently it was the most natural thing imaginable that the pretty American girl, known to everyone in the village, should be asking the whereabouts of the stalwart youngster who would never be an artist, but was one of the hotel's most valued guests.

"Oui, ma cherie! I heard him shouting to Marie for three boiled eggs not so long ago. Out of three eggs one hatches a good meal. And how is your father? I haven't set eyes on him this week."

"He is so busy, Mademoiselle. There is so little daylight."

"Bring him to dinner on Sunday. We're roasting two of the biggest geese you ever saw!"

"He will be delighted, I'm sure."

Then Julia marched to conquer the venders of entables. There would be a terrific argument; but the founder of modern Pont Aven would prevail.

Yvonne looked in through an open window of a delightful room, panelled in oak—on every panel a picture bearing a signature more or less eminent in the world of colour. Tollemache was there, tapping his third egg.

"Lorry," she said, "Father and I are sailing to Le Pouldu. Will you come?"

"Will a duck swim?" was the prompt reply. "When do we start?"

"Soon. Be at the quay in ten minutes."

"By the clock. Plenty of oilskins in the locker?"

"Yes."

She sped away. A Frenchman, an artist who knew the Breton coast in all weathers, shook his head.

"Dangerous work, yachting off Finisterre in December," he said. "What sort of boat are you going in?"

"Ingersoll's own tub, a vague—a sardine boat, you know."

"First-rate craft, of course. But mind you're not caught in a change of wind. The barometer is falling."

"Oh, as for that, we'll probably have Peridot in charge, and he was born with a caul; so he'll never be drowned. Even if he's not there, Ingersoll and Yvonne are good sailors, and I'm no fresh-water amateur."

"Well—good luck! I only ask you not to despise the Atlantic. Why is Ingersoll going to Le Pouldu at this time of the year?"

"Don't know, and don't care. It's an unexpected holiday for me; so my Salon study of the Bois d'Amour in winter must miss a day."

The Frenchman sighed; whether on account of the doubtful prospect before Tollemache's Salon picture or because of his own vanished youth, it would be hard to say.

"What a charming peasant girl—and how on earth did she acquire English with that perfect accent?" said a woman, a newcomer.

"She is the daughter of a celebrated American artist," explained the Frenchman.

"But why does she wear the Breton costume?"

"Because she has good taste."

"Oh! Is that a hit at current fashions?"

The Frenchman shrugged his shoulders. "Madame asked for information," he said. "To wander off into an essay on clothes would be impolite."

Before nine o'clock the Hirondelle, registered No. 415 at Concarneau, was speeding down the seven kilometers of the Aven estuary on a rapid-falling tide. Owing to the force and direction of the wind it would have been a waste of time to hoist a sail, even in those reaches of the winding river where some use might have been made of it. Tollemache and Peridot (whose real name was Jean Jacques Larraidou) rigged two long sweeps, and Yvonne took the tiller, keeping the boat in midstream to gain the full benefit of the current. In forty minutes they were abreast of the fortlike hotel at Port Manech, the summer offshoot of the Hotel Julia, and a steel-blue line on the horizon, widening each instant, told of the nearness of the sea. It was an uneven line too, ever and anon broken by a white-capped hillock.

Peridot, pulling his oar inboard, poised himself erect for a few seconds with an arm thrown round the foremast, and gazed steadily seaward. "She'll jump a bit out there," he said; though the fierce whistling of the wind drowned his words. He was aware of that, because he converted both hands into a megaphone when he turned and shouted to Yvonne. "We'll take the inside passage, Ma'mselle."

Before attempting to hoist the foresail he rummaged in a locker and produced oilskin coats and sou'westers. There was no delay. The four donned them quickly. Yvonne had changed her Breton dress for a short skirt and coat of heather mixture cloth, because coif and collar of fine linen were ill adapted to seagoing in rough weather.

Peridot held up three fingers. The girl nodded. Peridot and Tollemache hauled at the sail, and Yvonne kept the boat in the eye of the wind until three reefs were tied securely. Then the Hirondelle swung round to her task. She careened almost to the port gunwale under the first furious lash of the gale, and a sheet of spray beat noisily on oilskins and deck. But the stanch little craft steadied herself, and footed into her best pace.

Ingersoll dived into the cabin, and reappeared with his pipe alight, the bowl held in a closed and gloved hand. Tollemache made play with a cigarette. Peridot clambered aft to relieve Yvonne.

"We'll make Le Pouldu in little more than the hour," he said.

"It's blowing half a gale," said the girl.

"Yes. If the wind doesn't veer, we should have a record trip. But we shouldn't start back a minute after three o'clock."

"Oh, my father will see to that. Moreover, we're due at Mere Pitou's at six."

Peridot showed all his white teeth in a smile. Madeleine would be there. He meant to marry Madeleine. There was no use in asking her to wed until after the Festival of the Gorse Flowers next August, since her heart was set on being Queen. Once that excitement was ended, Heaven willing, Madeleine Demoret would become Madame Larraidou.

In taking the rudder the man was not showing any distrust of Yvonne's nerve; but there was just a possibility that a crisis might call for instant decision, when the only warning would come from that sixth sense which enables fishermen to develop in counteracting the sea's fitful moods.

Many a patient has recovered health by the help of OXO. It frequently succeeds where other foods fail, on account of the ease with which it can be assimilated.

OXO CUBES are always ready, always just right. With their aid a cup of OXO can be made fresh at any moment, while beef-tea takes hours to prepare.

For invalid delicacies, too, OXO CUBES are splendid. So much so, that many nurses now use them almost exclusively for that purpose instead of meat.

NEGLECTED COLDS
VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be but a slight cold. Your head becomes stuffed up; you start to cough; an irritation in the throat follows; it gets lower down; settles on the lungs; you start to raise phlegm of a greenish, yellowish color sometimes streaked with blood, and you cough persistently.

You think perhaps you are strong enough to fight off this trouble, but colds are not easily fought off in this northern climate. Colds if not attended to will sooner or later develop into some serious lung trouble.

Mrs. Willis H. Mosk, Lower Ship Harbor, N.S., writes: "Last winter I took a severe cold on my lungs, and I would cough and spit up phlegm and blood. I had the cough for nearly a month, and I got medicine from the doctor, but it did me no good. I thought I had consumption. My friends advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I did, and it gave me great relief. I am the mother of ten children, and I always keep a bottle of 'Dr. Wood's' in the house. I will highly recommend it to all, especially to all who have little ones to care for."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the best cure for coughs and colds. It has been on the market for the past twenty-five years. It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

He had been refused, but he declined to believe it.

"Then I am to understand that this is your final answer, Miss Stubbles?"

"My final answer."

"Nothing can move you?"

"Nothing."

"Then my life will be a lonely one and my fate a harsh one, for my uncle with whom I lived has just died and left me—"

"That fact somewhat alters the case, Henry. I can not be harsh to one who has sustained such recent bereavement. If I could believe that you are sincere—"

"Sincere! Oh, Miss Stubbles!"

"You have certainly made an impression on my heart. Give me time to think of it."

"How long?"

"After all, why think of it? Henry, I am yours."

"Oh, Genevieve!"

"Your poor uncle! Was he long ill?"

"Three days."

"It is too bad! You say he left you—?"

"Yes, he has left me."

"How much?"

"How much! I said he had left me. He had nothing to leave. I am alone in the world now, homeless, penniless, but with you by my side—why, she's fainted!"

A SPLENDID WAY TO REDUCE ONE'S WEIGHT

There is, perhaps, no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 25 or 30. However young our form may appear, our figures "give us away."

The cause of this over-stoutness is that our stomachs pervert the food we eat into fat because there is not enough oxygen in the blood to produce a proper combustion to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orlene in capsule form, and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orlene taken at meal times gives you all the benefit of the food you eat, and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissues from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of about a lb. a day, and no sickness is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1949, Montreal, Can.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

A Clean Mouth:—During the quarter of a century that I have been teaching the natural laws of health, there have been many fads and fears as well as fights and triumphs in the field of preventive medicine. At a meeting of medical men only last year one of the most eminent members of the profession, noted for his skill in surgery and also for the size of his fees, said that during the coming decade there would be less surgery and a general return to old-fashioned internal medicine, less poisons and opiates and more of nature's remedies.

Another man, who is a leader in making popular, practical, common sense ideas is said to be the authority for the statement that neglected teeth and general unclean condition of the mouth was the principal reason why rural residents and especially farmers were old, broken down and ruined in health before they had really begun to live. All authorities are agreed that the farmer has much the advantage over the city man in the opportunities for good health and long life, but the actual facts show that the city man lives longer and is freer from sickness than his country cousin.

The idea has always been held forward that it was the steady grind of hard manual labor that caused the farmer to break down at an early age, but I do not agree with that idea at all. I was born and brought up on a farm and I know what farm work is. My father learned the trade of a blacksmith, but found farming much easier. I became an expert machinist and also a carpenter. I can build a house from the ground up and do good work. I have been in commercial business and for many years in professional life. Give me the same sanitary surroundings on a farm where they cost less than they cost in the city and I can make a better living with less labor and more comfort than I can in almost any other line of work.

The facts are that filthy teeth are responsible for a big share of the early breakdowns of farmers and laboring men. Anyone of common judgment will confirm this statement if he will examine the mouth of a dozen men or women over 40 years of age from any occupation of life and examine only those that never clean their teeth.

The last thing that every one should do at night before preparing for bed is to thoroughly brush and clean the teeth. A good tooth paste, powder or liquid cleanser should be used, but perhaps there is no better agent than fine, common table salt. After brushing them vigorously with the salt, then take water into the mouth and brush them again, all around, up and down, back and forth, then rinse them well and the clean pleasant feeling amply repays you for the effort.

If the teeth have not had the care of a dentist and are covered with tartar, you cannot hope for good health until you give the dentist a chance to remove the cause of your trouble.

Dear Doctor:—I now come to you for advice in regard to inflammation of the bladder, and ask that you tell me what to do as I do not find it mentioned in your lectures. The disease has come on me since suffering with La Grippe, which I cured by following your directions in the lecture upon that subject. Many thanks for that.

I think I am somewhat better, but have streaking pains occasionally in the left of abdomen if I exercise too much. I have had kidney trouble for many years, and much of the time there is a sediment in the urine. One of my sons is troubled in the same way, but has pain in the back. The doctors calls it Lumbago.

Now Doctor, I have much faith in your methods of doctoring, do not use coffee or tea, take instead hot water with lemon and salt before breakfast, eat whole wheat bread toasted, and all the fruit we can get in this country, which are oranges, lemons, apples and prunes. I try to drink a lot of water every day and am gaining upon it a little.

MRS. M. H.

(Answer) It cannot be easily determined whether the urinary difficulties have their seat in the bladder or whether the kidneys are at fault without making a thorough chemical analysis of the urine, but from the information furnished me, I am rather inclined to think that there is an inflammation of the neck of the bladder, and that the kidneys are comparatively normal. The fact that there is a sediment in the urine is no indication in itself that the kidneys are weakened in any way. In most cases of that character the bladder is responsible for it. Not very long ago I mentioned in a lecture about the home method of treatment I considered best for ailments of this character, and there are many who have followed the directions with very good results, and have found the simple and inexpensive. I mentioned the diet which I consider [illegible] regulated in cases of that kind. Coffee and alcoholic liquors must be abandoned entirely. Sweets and starchy foods as well as meats, should be avoided. Succulent vegetables such as asparagus, turnips, onions and others are excellent. Fish is permissible, and milk should be taken freely. A milk diet I have always found excellent and many cases of inflammation of the bladder which did not yield to any other method of treatment were entirely overcome with the air of the milk diet. Frequent baths should be indulged in and you are wise to take the sitz baths every now and then, although I think twice a day rather too much. I mentioned in my lectures about the value of marshmallow root for internal use, especially if there is irritation present of scalding while urinating.

To overcome any pains of soreness in the region of the kidneys or bladder there is a safe and reliable method of treatment given in the Home Health Club book, Vol 2 under the heading Lumbago.

I may mention that in one of the Home Health Club volumes there are a number of herbs described as well as formulas, some of which would prove of great merit in your case and could be very easily secured from your druggist. This book, "Medicinal Plants of America" would be of great help to you on many occasions.

THE BASKET INFLUENCE IN SPRING FASHIONS

Victoria Quilled and Pleated Trimmings Favoured

A Touch of Fur Still in Evidence

NEW YORK, Feb 26.—Dame Fashion would not be the artist that she is were she not influenced, more or less by every passing fancy. The influence of the Russian ballet has been direct and noticeable. We may glimpse the Bakst note in the brightly coloured jewelry, real and artificial, now so much the vogue; in the quaint, hand-made trimmings, quillings, pleatings, cordings and puffings which serve to trim so many of our summer frocks of silk and cotton.

The New Umbrella Skirt.

The matinee for the Russian dancers given at the opera house in Paris early in the year, was the first real important social event in France since the beginning of the war. The large house was crowded to the doors with a beautifully gowned, enthusiastic audience. When this same company appeared recently at the Century Theatre in New York, we were quite as enthusiastic, and they received an equally favourable reception. Night after night the house was crowded with gorgeously gowned women and men in evening dress. Our graceful little dancer, Florence Walton, was [illegible] evening frocks [illegible] everyone else to wear time." Ruth St. Dennis was seen on another evening, tall and distinguished looking, watching with professional interest every graceful movement of little Lopokowa and her co-dancers.

While some of the fantasies were rather weird to our Western eyes, all were poetical, the very embodiment of romance, fascinating and inspiring.

La Syphides and Papillons come nearer to the modern costume than the others; the costumes of the first are simple to a degree, of pure white tulle against a background of moonlit garden, so real that one can fairly hear the whispering of the trees as their branches intermingle, and the rippling of the water back of the small marble temple. The skirts are full and billowy, and the bodices tight and basque-like. The costumes of Papillons are of the early Victorian period; and they are directly responsible for the present vogue of hand-made trimmings.

Quilled and Pleated Trimmings.

For taffeta and the printed silks which are now so high in Fashion's favour, for the crisp organdies and daintily figured voiles and crepes, there is no more practical or effective trimming than cording, smocking or shirring.

Many of our dance frocks for summer will be of organdy or net; an unusually pretty imported frock of net, shown recently in one of our exclusive shops, was made with an extremely full skirt, gathered at the waist, equally wide top and bottom; the skirt was hung over a crinoline hip stiffening, and the entire dress was trimmed effectively with quaint, pointed ruffles. Another effective summer evening gown displayed at the [illegible] was in white georgette crepe beaded with opaque white beads. The bodice was cut in bolero effect, and the skirt was a charming contrast to the full skirt of the net dress, being pleated to fall straight and narrow-looking from waist to ankles. A narrow beaded girdle encircled the waist and caught up a straight panel in the back, to carry out the bolero effect.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISSES' DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

This dress could very well be made by the fingers of the little miss who will wear it. It combines simplicity and beauty in an unusual degree.

The blouse has absolutely no ornament except the wide turnover collar at the neck, which is only a trifle low. The closing is in the centre of the front and there is just a suggestion of fulness above the belt. The sleeves are plain and fitted to the arm. They may be shortened to the elbow and finished with the wide cuff provided for the purpose in the pattern.

The skirt has a yoke which may be made in a single piece. To the lower edge of this is attached the gathered three gore skirt. Both yoke and main portion of the skirt fasten in the centre of the front. The lower edge of the skirt measures 1¾ yards in the medium size.

These dresses are made of plain colors and also of checks, plaids and stripes. Sometimes the yoke is varied by being made of fancy goods when the balance of the skirt is of plain material, but more often a single color scheme is preserved throughout.

The dress pattern, No. 7,621, is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Medium size requires 3⅝ yards of 44-inch material, and ⅝ yard of 36-inch contrasting goods to trim.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents; or 2 for 25c.

Paderewski Gave All His Money To Poles, Returns To His Piano

Ignace Jan Paderewski has decided to return to the concert stage, from which he retired a short time ago. Generally speaking, such a happening is not unusual among professional artistes. A real diamond-of-the-first-water water singer, actor or musician is expected to "farewell tour" at least three times, and each reappearance is the signal for the gibing grin and the satirical smile of the critic. Paderewski's case is different. He is so poor that he has to go to work again. When he retired he had accumulated an ample fortune of something like $2,000,000, and now it is all gone. And Ignace Paderewski has neither lost it in foolish speculation, nor wasted it in riotous living. His fortune has been used to relieve the acute distress of his countrymen, of his beloved Poland.

The sorrowful tale of the destitution of thousands in that war-ruined country is heartrending. There starvation, sickness and untold privation are the every-day experience of 12,000,000 people. Few of the young and able men have been left, owing to the grim demands of war, and the victims are for the most part composed of aged men and women, cripples, invalids and little children.

Paderewski could not witness this spectacle of human misery with equanimity. His heart was tuned to sympathy and the desire to alleviate the pain and suffering, so he gave way the golden harvest which his genius had garnered—every dollar he had—to help his stricken countrymen, and to lift from them the crushing weight of famine and war. He has literally stripped himself bare for suffering Poland. Paderewski truly has "owned the ties of blood and race" as few men have.

And now he begins again. Once more he is to delight us with his wonderful playing, and in a recent letter written to his American agents, he appeals for the "prompt, warm-hearted, free-handed support of the American public in the tour he is about to make so that he can make money enough to live and somewhat to give to the people of his native land."

We predict huge success to Paderewski's itinerary.—News.

To Remove Roughness, Chaps, Freckles, Lines

If your skin is chapped, rough or harsh, dab a liberal amount of mercolized wax on the face and allow it to remain over night. When you wash off the wax in the morning, fine, flaky, almost invisible particles of cuticle come with it. Repeating this daily the entire outer film skin is soon absorbed, but so gradually, there's not the slightest hurt or inconvenience. Even the ruffest complexion yields to this treatment. The underlying skin which forms the new complexion is as fresh and youthful looking you'll marvel at the transformation. It's the only reliable way to actually discard an aged, faded, freckled, blotchy or weather-beaten complexion. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, is sufficient in most cases.

If wind and cold make you sallow and frown, you are bound to cultivate wrinkles and crow's feet. To overcome these, bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel.

"Please stop at Regret street!" said the passenger inside the bus, curtly.

"Right, sir," replied the conductor obligingly.

Presently he rang the bell and the bus stopped in the middle of a wide and very muddy street.

"Here you are, sir," said the conductor.

"Can't you drive a little closer to the curb?" growled the fussy passenger as he prepared to alight.

"Right, sir!" said the conductor again. Then he shouted loudly to the driver—"Pull up closer to the pavement, Bill! The great cleans his own boots!" — Tit-Bits.

"TOWARD OUR TRENCH CAME RUSHING A HORSE AMBULANCE, THE DRIVER LYING DEAD ACROSS THE SEAT."

The above incident comes from the Western front—somewhere in the district where the pollard willows break the line of the shell-scarred plain. The eye-witness who describes this event was in a support trench, part of a system of entrenched lines in the district of ——. "Toward our trench," he writes, "came rushing a horse ambulance, swaying violently from side to side. It was coming straight toward us across what was once flat meadow land. Shells were exploding all round it. Then as it approached we could see that it was masterless. The driver was lying dead across the seat. He had been shot through the heart by a wandering bullet. Some of our men scrambled over the parapet and rushed toward it and managed to stop the horses on the very brink of the trench."

NAVAL ACTIVITY IN CANADA.

Part of the Canadian Vickers plant at Maisonneuve, near Montreal, with a British man-of-war in the floating dry dock. In the foreground are five submarines, part of the order obtained from the British government by Charles M. Schwab. The parts were manufactured in the United States and assembled at this plant. No mention of the undertaking was permitted in Canada and the plant became the most heavily guarded in Canada. Some of these submarines proceeded direct to the Dardanelles and are supposed to be those which did some marvellous feats in the Sea of Marmora and even in the Strait, where, on August 29, they sank two Turkish transports in the Bay of Akbachi Sliman and two others between Nagara and Gallipoli. It is known that American built submarines have journeyed from this side of the Atlantic to the coast of Ire and, then to the Mediterranean and as far as the Dardanelles, where they have been operating against the Turks with considerable success. Four boats made the journey (about 7,000 miles without a mishap of any kind and at the rate of about eight miles an hour. The journey from Montreal, where the Schwab boats were built, to the Dardanelles is by far the longest ever made by a submarine and rendered insignificant the performance of the German built boat, about which there was so much talk, which went from Kiel to the Adriatic.

EDUCATING THE RICH

PETER McARTHUR DREAMS OF A NOVEL SCHOOL.

Just by Way of Making Education Really Universal Instead of Limiting It to the Farmer and the Worker He Suggests a Class for the Capitalist and the Captain of Industry.

THE following passage from Peter McArthur's new volume of essays "In Pastures Green," contains kindly humor and a wealth of common sense which will make an appeal to the citizens of rural Ontario:

Since moving to the country I have been greatly impressed by the spread of education. Those who are set in authority over us seem to think that education is a remedy for everything. If the farmers are not prospering the cry goes forth, "Educate them." When the high cost of living begins to pinch in the cities they trace the whole trouble to the farmer, and then someone yells, "Educate him!" If the farmer complains about the exactions of the middlemen, the answer invariably is "Educate him." No matter what "Educate him."

Once in a while a reporter representing the press, our modern palladium of freedom, calls on a canning magnate and tells him in a deferential tone that the farmers are complaining because he is not paying enough for tomatoes on the beef and is charging altogether too much for catsup. The great man looks at the paragraphical serf with a baleful eye, scatters some benzoate of soda on a pile of bills, puts them into his vault and snarls: "The farmer is grumbling, is he? Then educate him."

Another trembling representative of the above-mentioned palladium calls on a high financier and tells him that the farmers are complaining because the last issue of watered stock he unloaded on them had typhoid germs in it.

"Oh, they are, are they?" sneers the plutocrat as he pecks a tainted million in a deposit vault and wipes his hands on his overalls. "Then why don't you educate them?"

While I sat on a corner of the voluminous report of the Department of Education meditating on these deep matters in a playful spirit I began to wonder what would happen if the farmers got to thinking, like everyone else, that education is a national cure-all. If they once get this into their heads they will want to educate a few other people who are standing in the way of progress. They will want to start night schools in Toronto and Montreal to educate a few plutocrats into right ways of thinking. Does not your imagination kindle at the prospect? The class-room would be the smoking-room of the Millionaires' Club, and the little scholars would be sitting around in large, kind-looking armchairs, smoking expensive cigars, toying with slim-necked glasses, and letting their second chins rest comfortably on the bosoms of their dress shirts. Unobtrusive imported waiters would be sitting about noiselessly, taking orders and promoting good cheer. Enter Bill Simmons, instructor in true economic doctrines. Bill's necktie is climbing over his collar, but no one dares to smile, for he is carrying a well-oiled harness tug in his brawny right hand. Hanging the tug suggestively over the corner of the mahogany desk, he takes his place on the costly Ispahan rug, thrusts out his chin truculently, and opens the proceedings with a few well-chosen words. Thus Simmons:

"The House Committee informs me that after last night's session some of the hollow-stemmed glasses were full of cigarette ashes, and that there were cigar stubs in the silver-plated champagne-coolers. Now, I want it distinctly understood that if I catch any dollar-besotted financial degenerate up to tricks like that I shall dust his swallow-tails so that he will eat his meals off the onyx mantelpiece for the next week and then I shall kick him several paraasangs down the street. Do you get me?" (Oh, yes, he would talk like that. You have been educating him, you know.) "The class in elementary economics will now step forward."

Prompt at the word Sir Philabeg McSporran, Senator Redneck, Mr. Gosh Whatawad, and a few others step to the edge of the rug, where they stand with thumbs at the seams of their trousers legs, heels together, and their toes well apart.

"Now, my pretty ones," says Bill, "if a railroad is built under a government charter, with the assistance of the public treasury, and is then presented to the company that built it, to whom should that railroad finally belong?"

"To me," pipes Sir Philabeg, who is a High Financier and understands how to manipulate the market.

"Wrong," says our bold bucko from lot 17, seventh concession of Alfalfa township. "It will belong to the people—at least sufficiently so to justify them in regulating its operations so that it will serve the best interests of the community. You may go to your seat, Sir Philabeg, and figure it out, and I will come around with the tug in a few minutes and see that you have it right."

Then the grim instructor goes on: "What is a Big Interest?"

"A corporation that contributes liberally to our campaign fund," says Senator Redneck, with a knowing smile.

"Wrong!" booms Simmons. "The Biggest Interest in this country is farming and after that comes labor—both engaged in producing the real wealth of the country. If anyone is to get special privileges the farmers are the ones that should get them. You may go to your seat and figure that out, and I will see you when I get through with Sir Philabeg."

And so it would go through the whole educative evening.

PROVED ITS WORTH.

Dramatic Test That Was Made With a Bullet Proof Shirt.

"A well known war correspondent, who is a personal friend of mine," writes a correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, "tells an amusing story. While in Paris at the beginning of the war in 1914 a French inventor persuaded him to obtain an opportunity for demonstrating the usefulness of a thin chain armor shirt, which he claimed would resist any bullet or bayonet.

"A sample shirt had been hung up and fired at with satisfactory results, but it was with a certain journalistic skepticism that my friend attended the official demonstration at Hendon later. Anyway, to oblige the inventor he put on one of the shirts to show its comfort and flexibility. It was then that the French inventor achieved a dramatic effect, for he whipped out a Webley automatic and blazed away straight at my friend's chest.

"He is still alive to tell the tale," adds the correspondent. "Before he had recovered breath a war office official grasped him warmly by the hand.

"'Sir,' he said, 'you are a brave man!'

"My friend disappeared with becoming modesty. He had gone where he could get a stiff brandy and soda!"

GETTING AN EDUCATION.

After the Age of Thirty is the Time to Start in Earnest.

According to the Saturday Evening Post, the best time to get an education—perhaps the only time—is any time after one has passed thirty. The stuff that one learns before twenty is not meant to be remembered. It is only a placing of the chutes and an arrangement of the bins for the permanent contents. From twenty to thirty one is all torn up with courting, marrying and getting a foothold in life. After that is the time for education—from then on until death or senile debility.

A man or woman past thirty is exactly at the most favorable period for mastering knowledge, training the mind, forming the taste. Some systematic effort is all that is necessary. Notice the silly and tiresome ways in which enormous numbers of people spend some of their holidays. They know what to do with their working hours, but not with their leisure.

Most of them by a little direction and a little systematic effort might develop some special interest. Boys quickly tire of mere aimless and painless play. Naturally they want a method and a goal in it. Having a goal is exactly what gives zest to the game.

And having a goal is both easy and delightful. To study anything with interest, from logarithms to caterpillars, gives one fun and profit at the same time. Try it.

Convinced.

"This time she is positive she is in love."

"What convinced her?"

"His income."

To forgive a fault in another is more sublime than to be faultless oneself.—Geneva Seed.

Would Wake Up With Smothering Spells.

There is nothing that brings with it such a fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The terrible smothering, choking up and sinking feeling is caused by the heart and nerves being in a deranged condition, and calls for prompt relief.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in all cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, tone up the nervous system, and the trouble which is the cause of so much fear and anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. Wm. McElwain, Temperance Vale, N.B., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I must say Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are all right. Some years ago I was troubled with smothering spells. In the night I would be sound asleep, but would wake up with my breath all gone, and think I would never get it back again. I was telling a friend of my trouble, and he advised me to use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. He also gave me a box which I tried, and I had only taken a few of them when I could sleep all night without any trouble. I did not finish the box until some years later, when I felt my trouble coming back. I took the rest and they have cured me entirely."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Membership in the Personal Liberty League
Of Ontario

THE flood of applications received from all parts of Ontario for membership in the Personal Liberty League, is gratifying acknowledgment of the service we are endeavoring to render.

To thinking people "Temperance in all things" is a platform of unquestionable soundness, and in an era where popular government offers a weapon in the hands of fanatics, to destroy our hard-won liberties, it is well that organized effort be made to counteract the shortsighted follies of misdirected enthusiasm.

To the thousands who have expressed a desire to identify themselves with the movement we offer congratulations as well as thanks. When fanatics are threatening those who oppose them with all manner of social and moral ostracism, it is easier to sign a petition than range on the side of the thinkers.

It is desired to express special thanks to those who have accompanied their applications for membership in The Personal Liberty League of Ontario by donations of cash. This is indeed an earnest of approval, and though we purposely refrained from asking new members to share in the heavy expense of our campaign, the spontaneous support is warmly appreciated.

It should be quite understood that membership in the League will not involve any expenditure on your part.

It is hoped that the membership will grow daily. The campaign is proceeding without interruption, with the one end in view of saving Ontario from a Prohibition that does not prohibit, and preserving the liberty of the individual from the inroads of freak legislation.

For the benefit of those who feel that they would like to assist the cause in a concrete manner, and who realize the heavy expense of such a campaign, contributions will be received by the Secretary of The Personal Liberty League at the Head Office, 15 Wilton Avenue, Toronto.

Application for membership cards should be sent to The Personal Liberty League of Ontario, Head Office, 15 Wilton Avenue, Toronto.

No fees are required for membership in the League.

Fill out the application for membership and forward to the Secretary of The Personal Liberty League.

C.P.R. CLAIMS EXEMPTION?

Report That Charter Rights Remove It From Operations of War Tax.

Ottawa, Feb. 24. — Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, declined to discuss to-day the report that, by virtue of its charter rights, the Canadian Pacific Railway claims immunity from the operation of the new budget.

It is understood that the attention of the Minister has been drawn to the matter, but what will be done about it or whether this claim, if urged, will be combated, is a question to be discussed when the budget gets into the committee stage. That the C. P. R. has formally communicated such a claim to the Minister or the Government could not be learned to-day, but in any even the argumento is being put forward. The outcome of it largely hinges upon an interpretation of the charter rights of the company and whether by virtue of those there is immunity from federal taxation. Under the new law the C. P. R. would have to contribute upwards of a million as a start off.

The Power of the People

By REGINALD WRIGHT KAUFFMAN,

Author of "House of Bondage," "Jim," "The Girl Who Goes Wrong" and "My Heart and Stephanie"

SYNOPSIS.

Dudley Larnigan, district attorney, attacks the liquor and vice trusts. He is killed by an agent of a secret society, the committee of fifteen. His son, Bruce Larnigan, is elected district attorney and takes up the fight. Bruce is in love with Dorothy Maxwell, whose father is head of the insurance trust.

Bruce Larnigan is decoyed to an evil resort in an effort to frame him up. He has the police commissioner present. A fire starts in a tenement. Larnigan saves the children of Dow, one of the conspirators. This man agrees to expose the trust. He is murdered by the gang.

Stanford Stone, head of the graft syndicate, insists Larnigan must be killed. Guards are posted in the park to kill Larnigan in his automobile. Dorothy Maxwell, over the dictaphone, hears the plot. Two more conspirators are killed and Larnigan again escapes.

BRUCE LARNIGAN, despite his successes over the graft syndicate since his election as district attorney, began to feel after his miraculous escape from the plot to kill him in an explosion in the new subway, that his chances of success along the lines he had so far followed were almost hopeless.

Gradually, it seemed to him, tremendous forces were being arrayed against him. The whole power of the city administration was on the side of the enemy. The mayor, with all the departments he employed, showed open antagonism. The newspapers, with the single exception of the Independent, were either openly hostile or sneeringly indifferent. A great many people who, it seemed to him, should give him enthusiastic support were decidedly lukewarm in their attitude. To Dorothy Maxwell, his fiancee and practically the only person in whom he was now able to confide, since he did not want to worry his mother with the details of his troubles, he told of his growing feeling that he was on the wrong road.

"We thought it was a wonderful thing when I was elected district attorney, dear," he said to her. "But the office has tied my hands again and again. Things that I could do if I were a private citizen I am barred from even attempting. Just for one thing—this graft conspiracy, I am convinced, is country wide.

"It isn't confined to New York alone. But as district attorney I can't go outside the city. My jurisdiction stops there."

"But you can go outside to get evidence," she suggested.

"The minute I do that they'll accuse me of neglecting my duty to pursue a fantastic conspiracy that, they say, has no existance at all except in my own brain. The best thing they say about me is that I'm visionary—a lunatic! Most of them say, whether they actually believe it or not, that I'm a crook."

"It's an outrage," said Dorothy, with flashing eyes.

"Well, what do you think? It seems to me that I ought to resign as district attorney at once. I've been talking to Bart Nash. He's the editor of the Independent, you know—the man who gave Jim Stevens a job when Jim was fired for helping me to get the goods on the traction grafters."

"What does he say?"

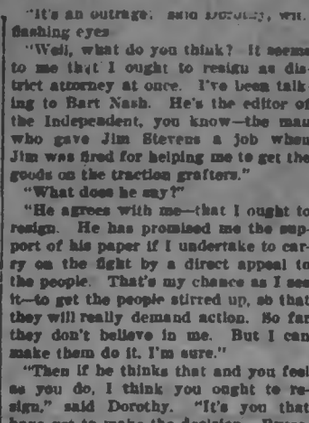
"He agrees with me—that I ought to resign. He has promised me the support of his paper if I undertake to carry on the fight by a direct appeal to the people. That's my chance as I see it—to get the people stirred up, so that they will really demand action. So far they don't believe in me. But I can make them do it, I'm sure."

"Then if he thinks that and you feel as you do, I think you ought to resign," said Dorothy. "It's you that have got to make the decision. Bruce, I'm with you whatever you do."

"That settles it," said Bruce. "I thought you'd agree with me. I shall resign at once. And the first move in my new fight will be against the grain trust."

"I didn't know there was one."

"There is, and a particularly mean one! It's responsible for the rise in the price of bread. There's plenty of grain, but they're creating an artificial shortage to send up prices. There's no reason at all for the rise. It's the worst sort of crookedness. I shall go to Chicago at once. That's the place where I can get the evidence, though it's St. John Dodson, right here in New York, who is my final quarry."



"Leave things to me. I'll get through somehow," said Tom.

"Mr. Dodson!" said Dorothy, deeply shocked. "Why, he's one of papa's best friends!"

"That's just the trouble," said Bruce grittingly. "It's because men who are universally supposed to be honorable and decent, and who occupy fine and high positions, are at the bottom of all the crookedness that it's so hard for me to reach them."

Stanford Stone, the secret head of the graft syndicate and Bruce's great enemy, was not deceived by Bruce's resignation of his office, which filled some of Stone's associates with delight.

"He hasn't given up," he said. "Don't be fooled for a minute by his resignation. That's just a blind. He's going to keep on fighting, and it's more important than ever to put him out of the way. I know, for instance, that he's going to Chicago tomorrow to try to get evidence against Dodson and his grain shortage. Black's gone, but I've got another man to follow him."

So it came about that there traveled with Bruce, following him as closely as his own shadow, a desperado known to the police of a score of cities as Red Mike. Mike meant to earn his money.

With Bruce gone, Stanford Stone left no move unmade in New York that might help to achieve his object. His first blow was struck at the Independent. A hint was enough. With one accord advertisers withdrew their support until the paper faced a staggering loss. And Stone went further. His agents approached stockholders, who frightened by the loss of earnings, were glad to sell their holdings. So Stone came into control of a great block of Independent stock and was able to apply for a receivership and so force the suspension, for a time at least, of the paper's publication.

At his instance, too, suits were brought against Bruce for criminal libel and for heavy damages by the men he had accused in connection with the traction trust exposure. These were strike suits, which could not succeed when they were brought to trial, but it was not Stone's purpose to let them come to trial. They served as an excuse for attaching Bruce's bank account and his home, and this was done. Bruce's mother was terrified by threats of ejectment from her home, and Stone relied upon her pleadings to induce Bruce to abandon his fight, even if his well laid plans to put Bruce out of the way should not succeed.

Even so, however, Stone was not content. He felt that Bruce still possessed one thing that he coveted—the love of Dorothy Maxwell. The engagement of the two had not been announced, but it was a more or less open secret. And now Stone, relying upon his hold over Roger Maxwell, her father, ventured openly to go to Dorothy and ask her to marry him. He was promptly refused, but would not take his answer. He wanted reasons, and Dorothy reluctantly told him of the plot to kill Bruce that she had overheard by means of the dictaphone in his office. To her amazement, Stone made no denial.

"I am his enemy," he said coolly. "I admit it. What of it? Your own father is associated with me. Larnigan's success would mean even more to him than to me."

"I don't believe you!" cried Dorothy desperately.

But she did. It explained so much that had troubled and mystified her. And Roger Maxwell, when she begged him to deny what Stone had said, couldn't do it. Indeed, he let her see that he was, to some extent at least, in Stone's power. It was a dreadful dilemma that Dorothy faced, with Bruce a thousand miles away, engaged, as she knew, in a bitter and perilous struggle.

"I've ordered the price back. For God's sake take them away," said Dodson.

And, even so, she did not know how great were the perils that dogged Bruce's trail. Red Mike, like some skulking beast of prey, waited for his chance to strike. A dozen times he held his hand, inspired by the animal cunning that was his, waiting to make sure.

Meanwhile Bruce found plenty of evidence. He was disturbed by the news that came to him from Bart Nash and Jim Stevens, but decided that it was better for him to stick to his own part of the work instead of going back to help them. He felt that he was on the trail of real facts, which would prove terribly damaging to the enemy.

At last there came the chance he had waited. A man he had bribed told him of a plan to send a schooner out on Lake Michigan from Chicago heavily laden with grain.

"Go along," he told Bruce. "You'll see something worth while."

And Bruce did. Concealed in a boat, he saw the crew, under orders from the captain, dumping the perfectly good grain into the lake. It was to that Dodson's men were creating the shortage he was using as his excuse for raising the price of bread to the poor! This Bruce knew would serve his cause; the facts would speak for themselves. And he had a small camera with him, with which he took photographs of the dumping.

It was that, however, which was his undoing. He had to expose himself as he took the pictures, and some keen eye among the men saw him. In a moment he was dragged from the boat.

"It's a spy!" cried some burly ruffian.

And a moment later Bruce was fighting for his life. He fought well, but the odds were too great. He was overpowered in no time and savagely beaten. But then the plotters made a fatal mistake. Left alone Bruce might soon have died. But they threw him overboard.

The cold water revived him to some extent, and he was able to cling to a floating spar that came providentially within his reach. And an hour later he was spied from the deck of a yacht and picked up. He was unconscious when he was dragged on board. When he came to an hour later a strange man bent over his cot.

"Are you Bruce Larnigan," he said hoarsely, "like the papers in your pocket say?"

"I am," said Bruce, astonished at the other's emotion.

"Bruce—I'm Tom—you're my brother!" said the stranger.

It was a wonderful tale they made of it, between them. Tom left home in a fit of boyish passion years before. He had disappeared, and the family had long since believed him dead.

"I didn't have the heart to go home a failure, Bruce," he confessed after he had heard Bruce's story. "But, by the Lord, I'll go home now and do the work you set out to do! You'll be in a hospital for a spell, old chap, and you're lucky at that. But leave things to me. I'll get through somehow."

So Tom went east in Bruce's place. He carried a letter to Dorothy Maxwell, and he carried also an absolute determination to defeat the graft syndicate and do Bruce's work until Bruce recovered.

But his arrival at home dismayed him. He learned of his mother's sufferings, and he learned, too, that Dorothy Maxwell, the girl Bruce loved and trusted, was engaged to Stanford Stone.

"I'll play a lone hand, then," he said defiantly to himself. "I'll not deliver Bruce's letter. But I'll get this man Dodson by myself."

Chance guided him to a meeting of the poor held in protest against the rise in the price of bread. Tom Larnigan seized his chance. In a moment he displaced the speaker.

"This is a time to act—not to talk!" he cried. "Follow me! I'll lead you to the man who raised the price of bread!"

With a roar like that of a pack of wolves the crowd followed him, growing greater at every block, until at last it stormed the doors of the great office building in which St. John Dodson had his office, surged up to his office, and beat down all guards and barriers until it was at his very door. Then Tom went in alone to find the great man cowering at his desk.

"Shall I let them in," he asked, "or will you yield, you cur?"

"I've ordered the price back to the old figures!" cried the frightened Dodson. "For God's sake take them away!"

Tom believed him. He told the crowd they had won their fight. And, even as he spoke, a shot rang out. Dodson had killed himself.

At once Tom and his mother went to Chicago, to find Bruce somewhat improved. He smiled as he heard of Tom's first blow at the forces of graft.

Regulate Kidneys AND Relieve Constipation

Gin Pills are acknowledged to have the largest sale of any proprietary medicine in Canada—an achievement solely due to their remarkable virtue as a Kidney and Bladder remedy.

But users of Gin Pills have discovered that this invaluable remedy also acts as a mild cathartic. The evidence of hundreds of letters we have received establishes the very logical fact that in compounding a medicine to heal and tone up the Kidneys and Bladder certain of the ingredients have a stimulating effect upon the other organs, especially the bowels.

It is important to know, in the case of constipated patients, that Gin Pills do not act harshly on the bowels; there is no griping, but a gradual and gentle restoration of the function. Try Gin Pills for constipation. In thus relieving the bowels, you safeguard yourself against possible Kidney trouble.

Gin Pills are 50c. a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50 at your dealer's. A trial treatment will be sent upon request, to 10

That was eight months ago. I began to improve almost with the first dose. No other medicine I ever used acted so pleasantly and quickly as 'Fruit-a-tives', and by using it I recovered from the distressing Stomach Trouble, and all pain and Constipation and misery were cured. I completely recovered by the use of 'Fruit-a-tives' and now I weigh 208 pounds. I cannot praise 'Fruit-a-tives' enough". H. WHITMAN.

TALE OF DEATH FALSE.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26. — Absence of all proof to substantiate a story published this afternoon by a New York paper to the effect that a New Yorker was killed by an automobile here to-day, while rescuing a newsboy from the path of the motor, points to the belief that the story was a fabrication. According to the New York paper, the accident occurred early to-day at Broad and Walnut Streets. The man who was killed "emerged from the Ritz-Carlton" and was struck by an automobile "in which were seated Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Morton, the former a prominent Philadelphia merchant." Papers in his pockets, the story ran, showed that his name was "Henry Bennet, 3 East Fourteenth Street, New York, and that his wife, Helen H. H. Bennet, was suing him for divorce.

Investigation showed to-day that the policeman who was on duty at Broad and Walnut Streets from Saturday night to 8 o'clock on Sunday morning observed no accident of any kind. Inquiry at every hospital within a radius of a mile from Broad and Walnut Streets brought the reply that no victim of an automobile accident had been brought to them. Coroner's Detective Frank Paul said that no accidental deaths from an automobile had been reported to him.

No "John Q. Morton" is to be found in the Philadelphia city directory. The Ritz-Carlton management said no one named "Henry Bennet" had been registered at the hotel.

Defy Dyspepsia!

Among the symptoms of Dyspepsia or Indigestion may be mentioned a heavy, cutting pain soon after eating; a distended, full feeling of the stomach and bowels; belching of wind and flatulence; a burning sensation in the stomach, which indicates acidity; heartburn; palpitation of the heart; oppression of breathing; pain under the ribs and shoulder-blades; headache through the temples and eyes; dizziness, coated tongue and constipation; sometimes nausea or vomiting.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt is the natural specific for all these conditions. Being an antacid, it immediately relieves the acidity of the stomach and stops the fermentation. It stimulates the secretion and muscular action of the stomach and bowels, and overcomes the constipation. When its use is kept up the normal action of all the organs of digestion is re-established.

Uses of Coal Oil.

A little added to the starch will keep irons from sticking. A few drops in the water when washing the windows will make them shine. It is fine to clean sinks and wash basins. A good way to oil clocks is to see how large a space is in the back of the clock. Then put a tiny dish or bottle of kerosene in the clock and leave it uncovered. In a few days the effect will be noticed, for it oils the clock perfectly. Oil can be placed on a cloth and left there, but of course that is likely to make an ugly stain on inside of the clock. The dish or bottle is best.

The Battle Of Verdun Increases In Intensity

The French Troops Make Heroic Resistance

The French Forces Are Resisting Heroically With Shell for Shell

Battle North of Verdun is Continuing Fiercely, the French Troops Resisting Without Counting Sacrifices--French Are Sending Heavy Reinforcements to Scene of Great Battle---Defence is Now Under Personal Direction of General Joffre.

THE FRENCH STATEMENT IS OPTIMISTIC

PARIS, Feb. 26.—The French forces resisting heroically the German assaults have taken up new positions backed by Meuse hills, the War Office reported this afternoon.

The battle north of Verdun is continuing, said the official statement. According to the last information French troops ar resisting the Germans without counting sacrifices. The French artillery is replying shell for shell to the German fire.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The Optimism of the French official statements this afternoon, which did not admit the German claim of the capture of Douamont fortress near Verdun, considerably encouraged Britain and led to the belief that Verdun could and would hold out against the German battering ram. It is evident the French are sending heavy reinforcements to the scene of this great battle, and under the personal direction of Joffre, master of strategy, are bending every energy to defeat the Crown Prince's objective.

Germans Claim The Capture Of Big Fortress

Berlin Statement Says That Douamont, Only Four Miles From The Out Skirts Of Verdun Has Fallen Before The German Attack---Berlin Report However Lacks Confirmation From Paris

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The strong French fortress of Douamont defending Verdun from the northeast, and but four miles from the city's outskirts, has fallen before the German attack, according to an official statement telegraphed here from Berlin to-day. It is feared here that the whole French force defending Verdun from the north and northest has been driven back into the fortress under the most terrible stroke driven by the Crown Prince's army since the Verdun fighting began. The fall of Douamont marks the first breach in the forts of Verdun, and indicates that the whole of the great French fortress is now seriously threatened by the Germans' mighty smash.

The Berlin report thus far lacks confirmation from Paris.

GERMANS COUNT ON THE AMERICAN CONGRESS

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Feb. 26.—Germany counts upon the American Congress to force a backdown from President Wilson in the controversy over armed merchantmen, the United Press learned to-day.

Officials here refuse to comment for publication, but the general feeling is that if the matter is referred to Congress, a resolution will be put through warning Americans not to take passage on belligerent armed ships.

TWO BRITISH BOATS SUNK

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The British steamers Denaby and Tummel have been sunk with the probable loss of nine lives according to despatches received here to-day.

GERMANY MAY DECLARE WAR

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Advices from both Madrid and Berlin to-day made it appear certain that the seizure of German and Austrian ships by Portugal will be followed by declarations of war.

The German Foreign Office still lacks official confirmation, but the Berlin press urges prompt demand on Portugal for the release of the seized ships. Madrid advices said Portuguese officials frankly admit that they expect Germany to declare war.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—With the initiation of the new German U-boat campaign against armed merchantment only four days away, it appeared unlikely to-day that Congress will interfere effectively before that date, and its consequences arrive.

ZURICH, Switzerland, Feb. 26.—German newspapers arriving here to-day advise the German people not to expect too great results from the present operations near Verdun, but to remember that the casualties must be fearfully heavy to the attacking force. It is officially announced that the Kaiser is present on the Verdun front.

MANY FUNERALS TO LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY

Sixty-five funerals since New Years will have passed through the Little Lake cemetery on Monday, establishing a record, it is believed, in Peterborough's mortality for any similar season. Infants, children and elderly persons are most numerous in the deaths represented by the interments. Old persons were taken off mostly by pneumonia and the after effects of la grippe.

IMPRESSIONS OF PARIS AS SEEN IN WAR TIME GUISE

Everywhere The Determination To Go On To a Decisive Victory Is Found As Well As A Belief That Victory Is Sure To Come

STEELY DETERMINATION

By T. P. O'Connor

(Copyright, 1916, Central News.)
(By T. P. O'Connor.)

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Never in my long political career have I spent a week so interesting, instructive and moving as the week of the visit of the British section of the Franco-British Parliamentary Association to Paris.

The composition of the mission itself, with British Liberals, British Labour men, British Tories, and Irish Nationalists all working together in perfect harmony, and terms of intimate private social friendship, was a striking symbol of the absolute extinction of all party feeling and the absolute solidarity of all races of the British Empire, produced by the common apprehension of German domination and common hatred of German atrocities.

It was a strange sign of strange times to see John Dillon seated beside Evelyn Cecil, nephew of the great Lord Salisbury, who two decades ago was Ireland's most formidable enemy, and who sent Dillon several times to prison; and Hugh Law, Nationalist and son of the former Whig Lord Chancellor, walking arm in arm with Lord Balfour of Burleigh, a good old Scotch Tory peer who was often a member of Tory cabinets. Mr. Wardle, the new leader of the Labour party, with Mr. Gladstone another Labour member, were very welcome. Finally there was Lord Bryce, whose eminent position though a lifelong Liberal, commended him to the universal and delighted acceptance of all parties and evidently helped to make the mission popular and influential. In Paris it found a boundless welcome. The first notable event was the speech of M. Clemenceau, so moving, so vigorous that many pronounced it the greatest of his life. The French Parliamentarians, all men grown and self-controlled in politics, wept openly, and the British representatives shares their emotion so much it was found impossible to proceed with any formal business-like sittings.

We came to a reception by the Senate when the President, surrounded by half of the senators, gave us a warm welcome. Later there was

ANOTHER BIG SLAV VICTORY

Kermanshah, Important Persian City is Captured From Turks and Russians Expect to Join British at Kut-El-Mara in Two Weeks

WIN IN ARMENIA, TOO

PETROGRAD, Feb. 26.—The important City of Kermanshah has been captured by the Russians after a three days' battle, according to delayed despatches received here to-day. The Russians are expected to march toward Mesopotamia forming a junction with the British at Kut-El-Amara, 150 miles away, within two weeks.

News of the city's capture came as a great surprise. The latest despatches reported Russians pursuing a mixed force of Turks and Persian irregulars officered by Germans toward Kermanshah, but declared the city's natural defenses so strong that a long struggle probably would precede city's capture.

The capture of Kermanshah from the Russian standpoint is only surpassed by the victory of Erzerum.

Advices received here to-day said the Turks in Armenia after a battle have been driven back to a point nine miles from Bitlis.

Comments on Peel Result

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—"Merely a passing incident of local trouble," was the way Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works, in an interview here to-day regarding the defeat of J. R. Fallis, Conservative M.P.P., of government horse-deal fame. F. F. Pardee, M.P., Chief Liberal Whip, commenting on the same subject, said: "It proves Ontario is thinking hard these days. It was quite a government slump."

To-morrow morning, at George St. Church, Rev. R. G. Peever will discuss the permanency of the Scriptures, his subject being "Will the Old Book Stay the Bible?" Twelve Thousand Dollars For Suffering People of Belgium

Highly Successful Three Days' Campaign Brought to a Close Last Evening—$9,942.05 Secured by Various Teams.

$4,170.50 YESTERDAY

Great was the enthusiasm at the rooms of the Belgian Relief committee last evening when it was learned that nearly twelve thousand dollars had been raised for the suffering people of Belgium. The exact amount collected by the canvassers during the three days was $9,942.05, which with the city's grant of two thousand dollars, makes a total of $11,942.05. Some returns, such as the hockey match last evening, the Stephen Leacock lecture, and the subscriptions of private individuals which have been made to-day, are not included in the above amount. These will bring the grand aggregate of over twelve thousand. $4,170.50 was collected yesterday, the best day of the entire campaign. As the different captains announced the results of their day's work there was great cheering. The people of Peterborough have once again proved their kindliness and generosity towards a worthy cause.

The Totals.

The following are the results of the several teams on the third day and also the grand totals

The Speeches.

After the reading of the reports of the teams by the team captains, President Harstone called on some present to make a few remarks.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood, treasurer of the fund, was the first speaker, and congratulated the city on its generosity on this and other occasions. He assured the meeting that the money subscribed would be devoted solely for the object for which it was given. The distribution of the fund is in charge of a highly efficient and honourable body of business men, and has as its patrons His Honour the Governor-General of Canada, Premier Borden and other prominent citizens of the Dominion, whom all looked up to and honoured. It was suggested that some of the money subscribed here could be used in purchasing products of this city, such as cereals, and the purpose would be well served in this manner.

Mr. R. R. Hall.

Mr. R. R. Hall said the returns given at the meeting and the result generally was highly creditable to the city of Peterborough, the residents of which may always be counted upon doing what they are called upon to do and even more.

Mr. F. D. Kerr.

Mr. F. D. Kerr quoted figures to show that through our giving during the past three days, 396 Belgian people will be assured of sustenance for a year. The result redounds to the credit of the citizens of Peterborough. On this occasion the spirit seemed prevalent that in succouring the homeless and hungry Belgians every man felt he must be up and about his Master's business. The weak and suffering in Belgium needed our care, and in the giving, it would not be sacrilige to feel that "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto

ANOTHER DRAFT FOR 52nd BATTERY TO LEAVE ON MONDAY

Seventeen More Artillerymen Off to Join the Unit at Kingston---Forty-five Have So Far Been Accepted---To-morrow Night's Recruiting Meeting--To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Recruiting for the 52nd "Belmont" Battery during the past week has been very satisfactory in spite of the fact that three other units have been recruiting in this territory. Up to date over sixty men have been examined by the doctors and forty-five have sworn in as members of the Battery. Each day sees new men sworn in, and if the present rate of recruiting continues it will only be a matter of a week or two till the full quota has been secured.

Those in charge are gratified with the response to the call of the Battery and especially when we consider how little real effort is being made to secure recruits. Practically all the men have come forward without any soliciting or urging, except possibly a little on the part of men who have already joined where they endeavour to get their chums to come along with them. "We are all 'Pals' and it will be a pleasure to be among us," is the motto of the Battery.

Monday morning will see another large draft leave for Kingston. Seventeen have so far made arrangements to leave and everybody should turn out and give them a good send off. The following are the men who go to take their places in the "big game for big men":

Walter O. Hooper, 504 Rubidge Street.
John Ellam, 174 Dublin Street.
Maurice B. Pringle, 536 Harvey Street.
Patrick Carroll, 191 Reid Street.
Albert E. Dryland, 121 Romaine Street.
William A. Toms, 508 Chamberlen Street.
Francis G. Allen, Morrow Street.
Robert H. Pilling, 164 Aylmer Street.
Charles Rusted Hampstead, Toronto, Ont.
Joseph Rogers, Frank Street.
Roland J. Laplante, 230 Rubidge Street.
Thomas M. Williamson, 186 Reid Street.
Martin Gorham, 49 Maria Street.
Herbert R. Boyle, 18 Stewart Street.
Henry E. Raynor, 176 Dalhousie Street.
Wilbert T. Rexan, 64 Hunter street
Herbert James Butcher, 254 McDonnell Street

Rev. W. L. Baynes-Reed, former Curate of St. Luke's Church, has been appointed Chaplain of the 75th Battalion, C.E.F., with rank of Major. He will be remembered by many Peterborough citizens.

Pte. Gordon Smith of the 73rd Overseas Battalion, Royal Highlanders of Canada, C.E.F., of Montreal, is spending a few days with his aunt Mrs. R. J. McWilliams, 273 Park Street, previous to sailing.

Pte. Ernest Tucker has received a letter from Pte. F. Dainton, asking that his thanks be conveyed to the members of St. John's Church and also the members of the Peterborough Choral Society, for the parcels they so kindly sent him. He is now somewhere in France, without a fixed address for a time, and is well and happy.

Sergt. Geo. W. Allen, a Peterborough member of the 10th Battery, 1st Canadian Contingent, who was badly wounded early last year when he was blown into the air by a shell and who returned from the front some time ago, is going back to the front if the Medical Board at Kingston declares him fit. He will join the howitzer battery, commanded by the officer under whom he served before Col. King, D.S.O., of St. Catharines. Sergt. Allen is the fourth Peterborough man to get back into khaki after having been wounded and sent home.

Three employees of the Examiner, John Ellam, foreman of the bindery, Martin Gorham and Herbt. Butcher, are leaving with the draft for the 52nd Battery on Monday morning.

When at Christmas time the members of the Trent Canal staff contributed a package of letter pads, pencils, etc., to be sent overseas in the Kitchener League box, Mr. W. A. Logan wrote on the back of one of the pads, "May the soldier into whose hands this pad falls, have success in the field and granted a safe return to Canada."

Somewhere in Flanders, Feb. 7th.

Dear Mr. Logan,—You will probably be surprised to know that one of the writing pads you sent in the Kitchener League box fell into my hands and was very welcome, especially when I noted who it was from. I do not mean that you will be surprised that it was welcome but rather the fact that we should think of each other through the medium of the C. K. L. I cannot write that "we are having the time of our lives," but are having an experience of our lives, and this experience is in combatting mud, mud, mud. Presently, how we are beating the mud, we hope to extend our activities to Fritz (you can probably guess who Fritz is), and hope to have similar success and even more.

The people at home are more than kind and I assure you it lightens our task to know we are ever in the minds of the people "over 'ome."

Kindest regards to Mrs. Logan and family.

CONGRATULATIONS.

Mr. R. R. Hall is to be heartily congratulated upon being elevated to the honourable position of president of the Peterborough Law Association. This is a mark of confidence on the part of his professional brethren, of which he may be justly proud. The legal guild is one of the learned professions, and simple membership of it implies an honourable distinction; not to speak of being head of a body with so much head. Mr. Hall has for years practised his profession in Peterborough, in which he achieved and has occupied for many years a prominent place. He is to be congratulated upon so practical and complimentary recognition of his professional standing and personal qualities.

A GOOD RECORD.

Peterborough is to be congratulated and thanked, with many thanks for its splendid response to the appeals for support of the Belgian Relief Fund. The people gave Scripturally—"good measure. . . . running over"—$2,000 more than the $10,000 objective. In thus giving, not only patriotism, but concrete Christianity—Christian charity—was represented. We not only held out a helping hand to our gallant allies in the fight, but gave the "cup of cold water" to our sore-stricken brethren of Belgium. We exercised the highest function of human relationship and of our divine affiliation. As one of the speakers at the closing meeting of the campaign last night remarked, there is aptness in the Scripture language:

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

The giving to the Belgian Relief Fund yesterday was a Christian act of the highest kind, though many may not have realized it. This war and the obligations it imposes, have roused our deeper natures, and unsealed latent sources of good we may not have before realized. We do not want to be boastful, but we think Peterborough has reason to be proud of what she has done in the way of patriotic contribution — with the highest percentage of recruiting to several different arms, and with a total contribution to relief of the effects of war—Patriotic Fund, British and Canadian Red Cross and Belgian Relief of nearly $150,000. Sometimes giving for a good cause is hard work from the material and resources point of view; but when the heart is in the cause and the giving, it becomes easier.

A BLOW AT THE SYSTEM.

The smashing blow dealt by the electors of Peel on Thursday was not directed against Fallis, the knight of the painted steed. A rogue by any other name would have been hit as hard. The blow was directed against the system of which he was an exponent, as well as consequence. While the idea of condemning the patronage system may not have been in the minds of the electors yet such condemnation was involved in their action. The unpatriotic profiteering of the Fallises the Garlands and the Fosters, and thousands of other unspecified and undisclosed "graften" was the direct fruit of the patronage system, which was so energetically and eloquently condemned by Sir George Foster, in his manly speech in the budget debate. There is evidence to indicate that the fringe has only been raised, by the half-hearted and inconclusive investigations that have been made in regard to peculations, if not frauds, that have been committed in the furnishing of war supplies. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has demanded investigation of the work done under the protection of the Shell committee. There is reason to believe that immense waste has been permitted by largely confirming orders to firms or individuals "in good standing" or the party patronage list. We should know the truth so that we can apply punishment and if possible compel restoration of unrighteously extravagant profits. If Sir Robert Borden hesitates to procure adequate investigation, his hesitation should end in view of the verdict of Peel. The electors both of his own party and of his opponents, have shown that while they declare a party truce in the interests of patriotic, united and effective endeavour, they have declared for no truce with spoliation and robbing of the country and the country's war chest, by profiteers working either under the aegis of the patronage system or under the impulse of independent and unattached cupidity. The people are waking to an appreciation of the wickedness of permitting profiteering by the few at the expense of the many who are making sacrifice. The waste and worry of this awful war are endured for the benefit of us all, and all should share the struggle and the sacrifices we are called upon to make for ourselves and our fellow citizens. It is a great thing to realize that we are coming to a state of popular mind, to a national condition, under which crookedness and "graft" cannot safely shelter themselves under the wing of a political party.

PATRIOTISM AND PRODUCTION.

This war enlists every agency of our Canadian civilization, from the grandam's knitting needle to the most ponderous shell making machinery. While the soldier's the thing, the soldier's equipment—the best of arms, abundance of ammunition, good clothing and above all, good boots, are of prime importance. But the indispensable thing, the matter of greater importance than munitions is, food. The feeding of three or four million soldiers three times a day is a tremendous task. Then the home people in Britain must be fed, to keep them fit for supplying the requirements of the army and navy. Great Britain depends largely upon outside sources of supply, and Canada is looked to for a large share of the mother country's food supply. In this view our production is the measure of patriotism. Last year this country nobly responded, and Canada produced the largest quantity of foodstuffs in her history. This year the demand is more urgent, for there is a far larger number of soldiers under arms; in fact, the demand is inverse ratio to our capacity of production. We have of course, the same area of tillable land; but labour to make it productive is scarcer than last year. The recruiting sergeant has taken thousands of farmers' sons and farm labourers. Besides, it is not often that another as fruitful year follows an unusually fruitful year, such as last year was. It will be difficult therefore for Canada to respond as fully as might be done to the injunction to produce more.

Farm labour is the difficult part of the problem. Some have suggested a movement to get the retired farmers who are vegetating in our villages, towns and cities, back to the land. If all retired farmers were willing to return to farm life a large proportion of them would be physically unfit — wouldn't "pass the doctor." But with the retired farmers of the country mobilized there could be found a great many still fit for active service on the farm. In these days of universal machinery, there isn't a great deal of "bone labour" in farming. A man who couldn't swing a scythe or cradle as in the old days, could drive a reaper or mower or hay rake or hay tedder; and this is work one often sees women doing. But if all the retired farmers physically fit or otherwise could be impressed into farm work there would still be shortage of labour to attain even the average, not to speak of increased production. Then there are the idlers of our cities, the "slackers," or the unfit, who have not gone to the war. But it would be useless to employ ordinary methods to induce them to go to the farm. There would need to be conscription in their case. It has been suggested that there should be some form of mobilization of the idle muscle of our cities; some form of militiary organization that could exercise moral or physical compulsion to get these city idlers upon the farm. Their service might not be of the best, but with a labour famine on the farm, poor labour would be better than nothing at all.

Then the farmers themselves might effectively cooperate to deal with the labour supply. If county organizations were formed with two or more active agents in each township, alert to find out the farm labour needs, and with a list, both of applicants for works and farmers needing help, the two might be more readily and effectively brought together. Organization and preparedness is as much needed in dealing with the farm labour and unemployment question as with the military end. Unless something is done we shall be disappointed if we expect increased farm production this year.

FALLIS NOT REE-PEELED.

The Conservatives of Peel saved the Conservative party from the Conservative machine.

They also refused to whitewash Mr. Fallis, though Mr. Richard Blain, M.P., generously supplied brush, pail and wash out of his stock. And they spoke as patriots on the great issue of the day, namely, that men ought to serve the state in time of war and in a matter of war service without pride, and without preferment.

It is equally creditable to the Liberals that they offered to allow any Conservative other than Mr. Fallis to have the seat by acclamation. So Mr. Fallis brought it on himself; and his advisers.

The farmers of Peel know a horse trade when they see it.

Mr. Fallis side-stepped all the good advice that was given him, but the voters of Peel took it and followed it.—Toronto World (Conservative.)

IN EARNEST.

If the British landowners are ready to turn over their forests to the wood cutters to supply the demand for timber in the trenches they are really in earnest. Many would rather burn their houses down.

5,000 FACTS ABOUT CANADA.

The public will welcome the new issue for 1916 of "5,000 Facts About Canada," the popular and valuable cyclopedia of Canadian dates, compiled by Frank Yeigh of Toronto, the well-known writer and lecturer on the Dominion. No up-to-date and intelligent Canadian can afford to be without this "hardy annual," which is a revelation in concrete form of the wonderful growth of our country in a single year, despite war conditions; indeed, it circulates all over the world, and as such is a splendid advertisement. The chapter of "War Facts" is, by the way, both timely and illuminating. Fifty other chapters are devoted alphabetically to every phase of our national life, from Agriculture to the Yukon, while several sketch maps are of high value. Copies may be had from newsdealers or by sending 25c. to the Canadian Facts Pub. Co., 588 Huron Street, Toronto, Canada.

Library Changes.

Certain changes have been made in the library which require a word of explanation.

The Library Committee have decided that in order to insure better results for the public, selections from all the better works of fiction and the standard works in other classes of literature shall be placed in proper sequence on a table where the public may have a chance of seeing what the library contains. These books will be changed from time to time. It may be as well to add one word in this particular. Many of the very best of the volumes of fiction are in bindings that look dingy beside the newer and cleaner volumes lately issued from the press. They may be assured, however, that not a volume is placed upon the table without the knowledge that it has stood the approval of critics and readers alike. Many of the older volumes referred to are probably unknown to the majority of the present generation. That does not alter the fact, however, that they are still regarded as classics. In this category may be placed such books as John Inglesant, Ben hur, All Sorts and Conditions of Men, Annals of the Parish, Anne of Geierstein, Beauchamp's Career, Bleak House, Book of Snobs, Chaplain of the Fleet (this last book is popularly regarded by the casual title reader as relating to the sea. It has no connection with it whatever, but has to do with the abuses rampant in the old debtors' prison in London); Cloister and the Hearth, Cranford, Emma, Eugene Aram, Fair God, First Violin, Frankenstein, Griefenstein, Guy Mannering, Handy Andy, Harry Lorrequer, Hereward the Wake, Hoosier Schoolmaster, House of Seven Gables, House of the Wolf, Jane Eyre, John Halifax, Gentleman, Kenelm Chillingly, Kidnapped, Lamplighter, Last Days of Pompeii, Les Miserables, Lorna Doone, Manxman, Mary Barton, Mehalah, Mecah Clarke, Midshipman Easy, Mill on the Floss, Moonstone, Mosses from an Old Manse, Mr. Isaacs, Mr. Verbant Green, Old St. Paul's, Our Village, Peg Woffington, Pere Goriot, Pilot, Put Yourself in His Place, Quo Vadis, Ravenshoe, Robert Elsmere, Scottish Chiefs, She, Silence of Dean Maitland, Phra the Phoenician, Ten Thousand a Year, Thaddeus of Warsaw, Tom Cringle's Log, Undine, Vanity Fair, Vathek, White Company, Woman in White.

In putting down this list one or two works have been cited which would more fittingly come under the head of literature, such as Undine and Vathek. Of course, the list might be almost indefinitely extended but the above are within the reach of readers of the Peterborough Library, and if they are anxious to make an acquaintance with some of the books that their fathers and mothers used to enjoy, they cannot do better than make a start on any of those mentioned.

Juvenile Section.

A change has also been made in the juvenile section of the Library. It was found that the children were not getting the full benefit of the books in their section owing to their inability to find any particular volume that they were seeking. To remedy this as far as possible, works mentioned in the catalogue now in course of preparation, have been placed in a separat compartment and only books of minor value left on the open selves. If boys and girls hereafter need books on any particular subject they can apply at the desk and receive what they require.

PATRIOTISM IS STILL LINKED WITH AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION

C. C. James, C.M.G., made a fine speech at the annual luncheon of the National Exhibition directorate, and his wise words should have equal attention to those of last year. The need is even more urgent. He precluded his remarks with a tribute to the farm boys of the country, who were doing their duty, he said, and would do it. They would serve their country by remaining at home, perhaps, but as their country calls them they will go.

Production of food was Dr. James' important message. All that he had said last year, he declared, was an underestimate of the necessity. This important statement from Dr. James, who is the greatest agricultural authority in the country, should receive the most earnest attention. There have been statements to the effect that the farmers will not be so keen to produce large crops this year as last, not only on account of prices, but for lack of labour. This need was recognized both by Hon. James Duff and by Dr. James. The need is all the greater to-day for food, and we are handicapped by the demand for men at the front.

Germany has been organized in agriculture as in all other things. A commission, of eighteen outstanding men had had the matter in charge. The report of that commission was of the highest interest. Everybody was organized under it and the people were informed what they should eat. It was not till a year later that Great Britain beagn to take up this necessary work. She had been slow but she was thoroughas the organization of the army exemplified. There were at least a million at the front, and two million ready to go, and another million about to get into uniform. Three hot meals a day had to be prepared for all these men. Time had to come from somewhere, and they never failed to come.

The war would cost Canada five hundred millions, and in that sense the war would last fifty years. The great strain on the British Empire would come the day after peace was declared. But if the war were to stop to-morrow British agriculture would be stronger than when the war began. Her flocks and her herds were greater. Her acreage under the plough was greater. Dr. James thought that Canada should emulate this, and rival it as far as possible. He hoped that the Exhibition authorities would encourage agriculture by means of the prize list or in any other practicable way.

Whatever can be done to let the farmers of Canada hear this message of Dr. James ought to be done. He speaks for the nation and speaks with a complete sense of his responsibility in the matter. The shortage of labour alone makes it necessary that every nerve should be strained to increase the output thus restricted and to increase it to the utmost. A great deal might be done by organization to employ labour for this purpose.

There is still a large amount of labour unutilised in the country. There are many men physically unfit for the trenches who might distinguish themselves in a hay field, or with a spade or hoe. There is a large amount of idle muscle in the cities which would be all the better for a summer holiday on the farm. If this labour was organized in a semi-military fashion it might be possible to replace much of the expert labour that has been taken from the rural districts with help which would not be expert, but which might serve, and which would improve with practice. A city man cannot get his muscles into the swing of country life in a day, nor in a week, perhaps, but in two or three weeks his strength returns upon him, and his appetite develops and before he knows it, he has become a real man.

There is room for some practical man to take up the idea of a farm brigade for agriculture purposes. In Germany it would be compulsory. In Canada it should be a matter of good will and pleasure, and there should be no hanging back. A man may be constitutionally afraid of going into battle. Nothing but laziness can make him afraid of the farm. — Toronto World.

Paris le 30 octobre 191.-5

Cher Monsieur Powell.

Je vous envoie les films cinématographiques que vous avez choisis. Comme je vous l'ai dit, ces films ont été pris par des opérateurs mobilisés sur le front de l'armée française avec l'autorisation de l'Etat-Major Général. Il est, bien entendu superflu de vous affirmer leur authenticité sans retouches qui est tout à fait hors de doute.

Veuillez agréer, cher Monsieur Powell, l'expression de mes sentiments les plus dévoués.

Fournol

TRANSLATION

Minister of Foreign Affairs, Office of the Minister. Republic of France, Paris, October 30, 1915.

Dear Mr. Powell: I herewith send you the cinematograph films you have selected. As I have already told you, these films have been taken by the "operateurs mobilisés" at the front of the French army with the authorization of the Great General Staff. It is, as you know, quite superfluous to affirm their authenticity, or to add that they have not been retouched. This is indisputable.

Accept, dear Mr. Powell, the expression of my heartiest best wishes.

FOURNOL (Bureau Chief).

WAR JUST AS IT IS!

NEVER until this great war has it been possible for people far from the fighting front to see history in the making. The French Official Motion Picture Operators have visualised the grim give and take of the conflict, and it is unfolded as an action panorama in these stirring pictures. The official sanction of the French Government was secured for The Evening Examiner by E. Alexander Powell, the famous war correspondent.

The flight of armed, bomb-loaded airships sent forth to meet the enemy in the skies.

The troops in the trenches preparing to repel an assault.

HAND-GRENADE actions across no-man's land.

The preparation for the great Champagne drive.

These are but a few of the vivid scenes portrayed in the official pictures taken under the direction of the French army's general staff and on exhibition in Canada for the first time.

The Evening Examiner Positively Guarantees these WAR PICTURES to be the Best Produced since the War Commenced.

MONTREAL IRISH UNITING TO FILL 199TH BATTALION

Irish Protestant Benevolent Society and St. Patrick's Join Forces For An All-Irish Unit

SHAUGHNESSY'S SON ADJUTANT

MONTREAL, Feb. 25. — After working side by side for sixty years on similar, but distinct, lines, the two great Irish societies of Montreal, St. Patrick's Society and the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society, have come together in joint action for the first time. The issue is "the good of the Empire," and the immediate occasion is the founding of the 199th Battalion, Irish-Canadian Rangers, under Lieut.-Col. H. J. Trihey.

Committees representing the two societies met at an informal dinner at the Engineers' Club and announced the plans that have been drawn up for giving a concert on St. Patrick's night under the joint auspices of St. Patrick's Society and the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society. E. McG. Quirk, president of the former body, was accompanied by Edward Quinn. With Dr. F. W. Gilday, president of the Protestant organization, were A. McA. Murphy and Laurence Earle. The concert will be staged in Windsor Hall, and the proceeds will go to the regimental fund of the 199th Battalion.

The uniting of the two societies for work towards a common object has an unique significance at this time, for both organizations will this year celebrate their sixtieth anniversaries.

In outlining the object of the gathering, Mr. Quick said that during the period from 1856 to 1916 St. Patrick's Society and the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society had worked side by side with the best of feeling. In the very beginning, the two societies had been one, but as Montreal grew and as the number of immigrants arriving increased, it was found that the single organization could not cope with the work. So there was a friendly separation. Since that time the two bodies, although engaged in kindred benevolent activities, had maintained a clear line of demarcation.

"But where a great question arises, such, for example, as the good of the Empire, we are together," declared Mr. Quirk.

The president of St. Patrick's Society explained that when Col. Trihey announced recently that he had offered an Irish-Canadian battalion to the Militia Department, and that the offer had been accepted, arrangements had been already started for the concert to be given by St. Patrick's Society on March 17, replacing the annual dinner, which was given up since the war began. Mr. Quick went to Doctor Gilday, president of the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society, and suggested united action by the two societies. The response was immediate. Both organizations had gone to work with a will, with the aim of giving the best Irish concert ever given in Montreal. Their Excellencies the Duke and Duchess of Connaught had promised their patronage, while every effort had been made to provide a fine programme.

Doctor Gilday said that he and Mr. Quirk had gone to New York in quest of artists, and, with the aid of Lieut. Edmund Burke and Edward Quinn, had secured the best. The singers would be Miss Marie Morrissey, contralto; Edgar Schofield, bass-baritone; John McCloskey, tenor, and Miss Laura McCaffery, of Montreal. Lieut. Burke was to sing, but he has been called away on his military duties. The chancel choir of St. Patrick's Church would also appear. It was hoped that Lord Shaughnessy, whose son was adjutant of the 199th Battalion, would give the address at the concert.

The aim of the two societies, as announced, is to make the movement national, as well as local. The union of the Protestant and Catholic Irish societies for patriotic purposes, will, it is believed, have an important effect in bringing about unity of effort in the crisis now facing the Dominion and the Empire.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

FRANCE AND ITALY REACH AGREEMENTS

PARIS, Feb. 21.—The Milan Stampa, summarizing the results of the French Premier's recent trip to Rome, says that besides an accord upon political and military policies the French and Italian governments reached technical agreements concerning munitions, under which expert Italian metal workers will be sent to French munition works.

Agreements also were reached, says the newspaper, concerning the exchange of products between the two countries and for arranging common facilities for transport. The Stampa adds that the decisions reached already have been approved by the Italian Cabinet and that they will be put into effect immediately.

No man is so much of a failure in life that he doesn't think he is qualified to write in and tell the editor how to run the paper.

There is only one thing that you get so regular in a country hotel as roast beef and brown gravy, and that is roast pork and apple sass.

SAYS WE BECOME CRANKS ON HOT WATER DRINKING

Hopes every man and woman adopts this splendid morning habit.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone, its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

NEWFOUNDLAND GALLANTRY AT THE DARDANELLES

An interesting account of the bravery of Newfoundland members of the Dardanelles forces is contained in the following letter from a Newfoundland staff officer to a correspondent in England:

"I learned the following particulars of the affair in which Donnelly got the Military Cross and Sergt. Green the D.C.M. It seems that Donnelly was sent out with a small party of our boys to take a small hill between our lines and those of the enemy, which the latter were using as a snipers' post very effectively. Not hearing from him after a while, a party of another regiment was sent out to look for them, but these went only a short distance in front of their own trenches, took cover, and, coming in after dark, reported that they had been able to find no trace of Donnelly's party, and that they believed them to have been wiped out.

Gallant Fight Against Odds.

"When this news got over to our lines our boys were not satisfied with the report, for they were sure they had seen signs of Donnelly's party after the others had made this report. So they sent out a small party under Lieut. Ross, who advanced a bit and received a challenge. 'Who goes there?' to which he replied, thinking, as the challenge was in good English, that it was from our own party, 'Newfoundland.'

"'Advance, Newfoundland!' was thrown back, and Ross walked forward, and was at once shot down. The speaking had been done by a German, with a party of sixty or seventy Turks. Our boys opened fire at once, and the small party of some seven or eight repulsed the Turks and brought Ross in. Sergt. Green held on to this position, and sent word back that he had not found Donnelly, so our boys feared the worst.

"To their delight, however, who should appear at breakfast time but Donnelly, shouting for some breakfast. His party had captured the hill with small loss, and were still holding it. The hill was named 'Caribou Hill!'

An Ambulance Hero.

"Another remarkable feat I have heard from eye-witnesses and others, and all have agreed on the whole story. John Fitzgerald, who was a member of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, and joined as a stretcher-bearer, went to the aid of a Private Ebsary, who was shot down in front of the trenches. While he was bandaging Ebsary he was shot through the leg, but continued to bandage. A moment or so later he was shot through the thigh, but still continued to bandage his comrade until he had finished.

"He called back to those behind after his second wound what had happened to him, but assured them that he could carry on. When he had finished the work he stepped back to take shelter behind a tree trunk, but was shot through the groin and killed. Is that not almost a case for a posthumous V. C.?"

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

57th Chapter Daughters of Empire Had Busy And Successful Year

Reports Presented at the Annual Meeting Show That Much Good Work Along Patriotic Lines Has Been Done.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

The fourth annual meeting of the 57th Chapter of the I.O.D.E. was held in the Green Parlour of the Y. W. C. A. on Thursday evening, February 24th, and was largely attended by an enthusiastic gathering. Five new members were added to the roll —Misses Lillian Rush, Marion and Maude Rush, Florence Hamilton and Mrs. G. Gilleapie. The reading of the reports showed a busy year's work and much good accomplished. Mrs. T. A. S. Hay reported 83 visits to soldiers and comforts distributed. Mrs. Sharpe, George Street, said 301 visits had been paid to members. Votes of thanks were passed to Mr. and Mrs. Hill, and all those who contributed to the programme for the musicale; also to Mr. Gray for his assistance at the Christmas dinner for soldiers. Letters were read from Lieuts. Hubbs and Fitzgerald, Capt. Lech, Drs. Young and MacPherson Majs. Carruthers and Gray, Miss Plummer, Mrs. Clegg and Pte. Henry, thanking the Chapter for gifts for the men overseas.

The election of officers was postponed until the next meeting, which will be held on the last Thursday in March.

After the reports were read, and many new plans for the coming year discussed, the meeting dispersed, all enthused with new interest, and eager to make the coming year even better than the last.

The following reports were presented:

Cor-Secretary's Annual Report.

When last year's report was written it was thought that it would go down in our Chapter's history as the one year in which our Empire was at war. But another year has rolled by, and it is with sadness that we have to record another year of war and stress and strain of war work, sadness and sorrow in many homes, and the end of it not in sight. But although we are awed by the awfulness of the great struggle, although we have been called upon to make many personal sacrifices, as a nation, we were never stronger, never more firmly knit together, never surer of ultimate victory than now.

Naturally, the work of the Chapter for this year has been for the helping on in every way possible, the efficiency of our soldiers, and as ours is the sometimes hardest part of staying at home, we have bent our energies to supplying comforts for our boys who have gone away, helping to make the time pass pleasantly for those who are here yet, keeping in touch with, and extending sympathy to, the parents and loved ones of those who have already given their lives for the Empire. We feel that in spite of numerous other duties, much has been accomplished and the boys in khaki, whether of our own Regiment, or not, feel that we are their friends.

At the beginning of the year on the discontinuance of the War Committee, as such, it was decided to keep up the supply of wool, and have socks knitted for as many of our boys as we could supply. Since then a very splendid work has been carried out by this department, and the hearts and, incidentally, the feet of a good number of the boys have been cheered by contributions from our Sock Fund. The details of this work will be shown in the Convenor's report.

Early in the year also $20.00 was sent to Miss Plummer for handkerchiefs for our boys in France. In April a donation of $50.00 was given to Captain Gray for field kitchen for 2nd contingent, and later a photo of this particular field kitchen was sent to us.

Later on, handkerchiefs were sent to men of the 4th Contingent; $20.00 were spent for chocolates and cigarettes for the 4th Battery. Then, at Christmas every boy who has gone from Peterborough was remembered in some way—those in France, by Christmas boxes, containing fruit-cake, chocolate, gum, candy, plum-pudding, etc., and an extra pair of socks. Those in England, by sending boxes of Northern Spy apples, and the Battalion at home, by apples and oranges, with cigars for the officers.

Then, between Christmas and New Year's a dinner was tendered to the returned soldiers and their wives or mothers, which was much appreciated by the men. The Y. M. C. A kindly gave the use of their dining-room for the occasion.

In regard to entertainments, early in the year, a very successful and enjoyable musicale was given at the home of Miss Morrow, during the summer, a garden fete at Mrs. V. Eeartwood's, and just recently another very successful one was made possible for us, by Mrs. Hill's kindness in giving the use of her beautiful new home.

The principal way of raising funds however, has been through the tea room, which has been open all fall and winter.

During the last month, we have changed our quarters to the top floor of the Turnbull building, where there is much more room. Mrs. Lech gave a painting, which, with another anonymously donated, was sold for a good sum.

In other minor ways our fund has been augmented and several friends have been very kind in their donations.

Col. Walker is to be thanked for a $50.00 donation to the wool fund.

The Cheese Board gave us $50.00 P. C. I. Athletic Club, $50, and Mr Conway has several times given us $5.00. Miss F. Davidson gave $25 as a result of the sale from knitting-needle holders. It would be impossible to mention all the sources of help or the many people who have in various ways assisted in our work. The delegate was not sent to Halifax to the annual meeting owing to the expense.

Decoration Day was carried out as usual, the schools being also visited on Empire Day.

In April our Regent, Mrs. Clegg went to join Col. Clegg, in England, and in her absence our First-Vice Regent, Mrs. Mills, has filled her place, it being deemed best to leave the Regency unfilled until the annual meeting. Later on Mrs. MacPherson went to join her husband in England, and still later Mrs. McBrien went to Kingston.

Owing to the Armouries being used as soldiers' headquarters the place of meeting has been changed to the Y W. C. A.

Among other monies paid out, Br. Red Cross Fund was given $10; the Canadian Club in London, $25. Flowers have been sent to bereaved families, and the soldiers in hospital have been visited and cheered.

R. F. Neal, Secretary.

Knitting Committee.

To the Regent, Officers and Members of the 57th Regimental Chapter, I.O.D.E.:

Your committee begs to present the following annual report:

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush your kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms urio acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headached, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding various kidney complications.

Beef, Pork, Butter and Eggs

The Chief Offerings of To-day's Market

There was another lean market this morning due, no doubt, to the inclemency of the weather.

Butter and eggs were quite plentiful up in the "hall." Butter was quoted at 37 and 38 cents, the latter being the prevailing price. Eggs brought the uniform rate of 30 cents a dosen, and there would likely be a drop before noon, as buyers were not as numerous as usual.

A few turkeys were on sale; one bird weighing 19 lbs., was quoted at 25 cents a pound. Two or three smaller ones were offered at the same rate.

Chickens sold at $1.35 a pair, or 75 cents each for lighter ones.

Oranges were quoted at 20, 30 and 40 cents a dozen; lemons 25 cents a dozen; grapefruit, 3 for a quarter, and celery, 15c a bunch.

Home-Made Cooking.

The ladies of the Canadian Kitchener League dispensed samples of their culinary art and served "hot dogs" with hot tea and coffee.

Outside Section.

Potatoes, 2 or 3 bags, were quoted at $2.25; one vendor specified a price of $2.10 a bag in five-bag lots.

Beef sold at 11 and 12 cents.

Pork brought 15 and 17 cents.

Mutton was quoted at 13 and 14 cents.

One barrel of apies stood at $4.75.

"The Minister's Bride" Drew Large Crowd

Boethian Club of George Street Sunday School Staged Comedy Sketch

The Boethian Club of George Street Methodist Sunday School pleased a large audience last night in a four-act comedy "The Minister's Bride." Wrapped up with its humorous situations was an incidental testimony of the manifold duties and demands of the ministry and his influence in the welfare of his congregation. Clarence McKee proved a tactful clergyman and Miss McFarland was familiar with the requirements of his helpmeet. Mr. Bert Shelton had a large share in the fun-making, and enjoyed himself at the social evening in the Fourth Act. Percy Dunsford's red tie was a conspicuous "property" in the scenery. It was not a pretentious presentation, but it provided an evening's amusement for a gathering that filled the hall. Among the musical offerings, Miss Lottie Hanson sang "Annie Laurie" very acceptably.

the least of these, My little ones, ye have done it unto Me."

Mr. W. H. Denham.

Mr. W. H. Denham felt the Belgian Fund was for one of the most worthy of causes, and if there was anything we could do to help assuage the grief and misery of the Belgian people, it was our duty and privilege to do it, who through source of duty and honour have sacrificed lives, homes, fortunes and everything dear to them. There is no more worthy cause than the cause of the Belgians, and we should always do and will do our share when called upon. He had found the response most liberal.

Mayor Duffus.

His Worship the Mayor told the meeting of how Miss Peck and Mrs. W. R. Morris, deeply interested in the matter, had really been responsible for the great results obtained, in first getting the organization under way.

For the citizens of Peterborough he felt he could say they might be always depended on to take their share of any responsibility and to do it and more, as was the case in every campaign so far put on in the city. He was greatly pleased with the result. These campaigns had found everybody working side by side for the good of the cause, and as the war progressed it brought men closer to each other of different races, creeds and colours, working together, fighting together and dying together.

Chief Howard, for his team, said they were handsomely received everywhere, and looked for an additional $500 when all their returns were in.

Mr. Harstone, president of the association, who has been most enthusiastic, deeply thanked all the members of the teams for their loyal support and the citizens generally for their handsome generosity.

Mr. Killaly, secretary, announced that the team captains would check over their envelope returns with himself and Mr. W. R. Morris individually. Mr. Killaly has been a most energetic secretary, and accomplished a heap of work.

At this juncture it was announced that Mrs. Morris had inquired the result, and on being informed of the figures, deeply appreciated the work of the committee.

Each member of a team is responsible to his captain for $1 to pay for the meals of the committee. None of the money subscribed is used for this purpose. Each man pays for his own suppers.

Notes.

Approximately $2,700 was the total cash donations to the Belgian Relief Fund.

The C. G. E. employees, who were canvassed by Adjt. McElhiney and Fire Chief Howard subscribed $403.00 for the Belgians. The Peterborough Planing Mill men donated sixteen dollars.

Adjt. McElhiney and Fire Chief Howard desire to thank the various industrial concerns for the kind way in which they were received at the several factories and for the hearty response to their appeal.

SUBMARINE MYSTERY

Curious Performance of An Automobile

A peculiar automobile accident recently frightened many residents of Houston, Texas, into believing that some huge subterranean monster was inhabiting the waters of Cedar bayou, a body of water near Houston. However, it proved to be a wonderful example of the quality and stability of the Willard Storage Battery.

According to despatches from Houston, a local resident, Mr. Ike Levin, was crossing on the ferry with his machine, on a duck hunting trip. Somebody forgot to tie the boat at the other side, and when Levin started his motor preparatory to driving off, the power from the rear wheels kicked the boat backward and sent the machine forward into the water. Levin jumped, but the car sank into 12 feet of water.

It was very early in the morning and Levin had his lights burning. As the car sank, the water for a long distance took on a shimmery yellow look that located the machine's position when they came to remove it.

The water and air tight construction of the battery prevented all moisture from entering the cells and kept the lights burning brightly from Sunday morning until Monday night, when the car was towed ashore.

This evidence backs up the claims of the Willard people, who supply the batteries used on 85 per cent. of American makes of electrically equipped cars, that the construction of their battery is not slighted to save in production costs. It certainly is a wonderful example of what real quality means to the car owner.

WOMEN'S HEALTH NEEDS CONSTANT CARE

Work and Worry Leaves Her a Victim of Many Distressing Ailments

Every woman's health is peculiarly dependent upon the condition of her blood. How many women suffer with headache, pain in the back, poor appetite, weak digestion, a constant feeling of weariness, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, pallor and nervousness. If you have any of these symptoms you should begin today to build up your blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Under their use the nervous energy of the body is restored as the blood becomes red and pure and the entire system is strengthened to meet every demand upon it. They nourish every part of the body, giving brightness to the eye and color to the cheeks and lips.

Mrs. Jas. S. Francis, Oakwood, Ont., says: "I should have written long ago to tell what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for me, but I suppose it is better late than never. In June, 1913, I had to go to an hospital for an operation for female weakness. I was in the hospital for a month, before I was able to get home. Three weeks after this I started for a trip to the Pacific coast, in the hope that my health would further improve. On the way I stopped to visit a sister in Southern Alberta, and on arriving at her home (after a 85-mile drive) I was completely done out. I found my sister ill, her baby having been born the week before. As there was no one to help, I had to take care of the child and do the household work, and in the three weeks that passed before my sister took charge I was completely worn out, and again nearly ill. However, I started on my westward trip, and decided to stop off at Banff, where I remained a week, but it did not seem to help me, and I resumed my journey. On the train I took sick, and could not eat, and as I was alone my condition was pitiable. Finally the porter wired ahead to North Bend for a doctor to see me. The doctor wanted me to leave the train and go to a hospital, but I determined to continue my journey to Vancouver. The medicine the doctor gave me did not help me, and I was getting worse all the time. And then a young man who had the opposite berth asked me if I would try Dr. Williams Pink Pills and gave me a box he had. I used these and the porter got me two more boxes, and by the time I reached my journey's end I was feeling some better. I stayed two months on the coast, and continued taking Dr. Williams Pink Pills all that time. I had gained in weight and appearance, and when I started for home I felt better than I had done for years. Now I always keep Dr. Williams Pink Pills in the house, and both my husband and my young daughter have been benefitted by their use. I bless the day that young man on the train gave me his box of pills, otherwise I might never have tried them and would have still been an invalid."

You can get Dr. Williams Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

COURTS PETERBORO' AND LANGTON CELEBRATE 36TH ANNIVERSARY

Seven Charter Members Were Present---C.O.F. is Well Represented in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces ---The Toast List

The thirty-sixth anniversary of the Courts Peterborough and Langton, Canadian Order of Foresters, was observed last evening when nearly one hundred members foregathered in the lodge rooms, Simcoe street. Among those present was the following charter members: Messrs. T. Lush, A. Comstock, George Kingdon, C. Barrett, George Stanton, T. Hooper and H. Nesbitt. The latter identified himself with the organization two weeks after its inception. A number of outside Courts was to have been represented, but owing to the inclemency of the weather, were unable to be present.

Mr. H. Nesbitt, Financial Treasurer, occupied the chair. With him was Mr. W. T. Wilson, Chief Ranger of Court Peterborough. The evening opened with a banquet, which was provided by the members of the local Court, under the supervision of Mr. William Carter, chairman of the committee. This was followed by the appended toast list:

"The King."

"Our Army and Navy," proposed by Dr. Holloway and replied to by Lieut.-Col. Johnston of the 93rd Battalion.

"Our Dominion and House of Commons," proposed by Mr. J. J. Hartley and seconded by Mr. E. A. Peck, ex-M.P.P., and Mr. R. R. Hall, ex-M.P.

"The High Court C.O.F." proposed by J. Metheral and seconded by Dr. Harvey.

"City of Peterborough," proposed by Mr. James Brown and replied to by Mr. W. S. Robinson.

"God Save the King."

The speeches were of a patriotic nature. The Canadian Order of Foresters is represented in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces to the extent of twenty-five hundred men. Thirteen of these have gone from the local Courts. The Order has also subscribed to the Canadian war loan and otherwise taken a practical part in the cause for which the Empire is now fighting.

During the course of the evening, Bro. Petrie contributed a vocal selection that was well received.

The very pleasant evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

MILITARY WEDDING AT PARK ST. PARSONAGE

Lance-Corp. Maurice Dunkley of the 59th Battalion Was Married This Morning

Lance-Corporal Maurice Dunkley, of the 59th Battalion, which departs for England in the near future, was the happy groom in a military wedding at the Park Street Baptist Parsonage this morning at 10 o'clock, when he was united in marriage to Mary Boreham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Robinson. Rev. Dougald Brown performed the ceremony. The bride, who wore a pretty travelling suit of navy blue, and carried white roses and carnations, was given away by her father. The young couple were unattended, and only the immediate members of both families were present. Mr. and Mrs. Dunkley left this afternoon for Brockville, where they will remain until the groom sails for Europe.

They have both been prominent members of Park Street Church, and receive the congratulations and best wishes of many friends. Lance-Corporal Dunkley resigned from the Examiner's news-room to join the 59th, and it is the earnest hope that his service overseas will prove but a temporary absence.

40 Acres Including Crawford's Grove Offered The Exhibition Board By J. T. O'Connell for $16,500

Mr. J. T. O'Connell broached a proposal to the Fair Directors last night offering to sell forty acres in North Monaghan along the river front including Crawford's Grove for an Exhibition Park. The sum of $16,500 was mentioned as the probable price. Of course, with the purchase of this property the Director's task of building up new grounds would only be begun, and an initial outlay made. Fences, buildings and general laying out of the grounds would be the most serious consideration. In addition to this is the problem of traction accommodation to haul the crowds to and from the park. The question will be more fully entered into later.

Mr. Thos. Brown was appointed superintendent and Mr. W. J. Cox assistant superintendent of the 1916 Exhibition, which the directors believe will be a greater success than ever. Last night they arranged for the Amusement Committee to go to Toronto for the booking of feature attractions. The committees were struck and everything is now under way for the annual September fair. The superintendent will call a meeting of ladies shortly to revise the prize list for ladies' exhibits.

THE BASIL CORPORATION PRESENTS
D·W·GRIFFITH'S
MIGHTIEST SPECTACLE EVER PRODUCED

BIG SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA OF 30 MUSICIANS

D. W. Griffiths' master production "The Birth of a Nation" will return to "The Grand" for a limited engagement of three days, commencing Monday, March 6.

So great was the success of the previous visit to this city that the management of the local theatre has persuaded the Company to give Peterborough another booking.

So great is the interest manifest in this coming attraction that capacity houses will doubtless be the rule for every performance.

Since "The Birth of a Nation" last appeared here, it has visited a number of Ontario cities, including four weeks' run at Massey Hall in Toronto. This will probably be the last opportunity to see Griffith's monster masterpiece in all its wonderful entirety.

The merest statement regarding "The Birth of a Nation" leaps to superlatives because there is no other form in which it can be written. Simple facts in relationship to its developments sound extravagant until you have seen the production and realized a tithe of its sweep and power. It covers the essential details of American history ranging through three centuries. Actual battles are shown with tens of thousands of soldiers in the conflict. 18,000 people participated in the telling of the story. Three thousand horses were used to give the cavalry and other thrilling effects of the wild dashes over miles of territory. Cities were built up only to be destroyed by fire. The total cost of the entire production was in the neighbourhood of $500,000. Five hundred costumers and seamstresses worked for three months to make the costumes worn by the people; 10,000 yards of cloth were worked into the costumes worn by the women, while 25,000 yards of white muslin were used up in the regalia of the Ku-Klux-Klansmen. And yet with all this a simple, human story of love and romance weaves through the vast spread of the action and grips the hearts of the audience. The narrative is filled with tears and smiles. A symphonic score accompanies the action and lends a potent force to the drama.

LEAP YEAR KITCHEN SHOWER AND PRESENTATION

Last Night at the Home of Miss Maud Lindsay, 659 George Street, —Several Young People Gathered to Say Farewell to Two Young Men Who Have Recently Enlisted

One, Mr. Samuel King, 601 Water Street, is about to join the "Home Guard," and will, according to announcement, be quietly married in March. As this is leap year the groom-to-be was made the recipient of a miscellaneous shower of kitchen utensils, which were accompanied by an illuminated address in "verse libre," conveying to the fortunate young man in heart-touching terms the great loss which they (the young ladies) were about to sustain. Mr. King made a most feeling reply.

The other, Mr. Robert Pilling, sees the hand of duty calling him overseas, and has joined the 52nd Battery, C.F.A., with headquarters at Kingston.

Mr. Pilling, who had come to participate in the kitchen shower to his friend, Mr. King, was completely taken by surprise, as he was presented with a magnificent wrist watch. He leaves for the Limestone City Monday morning at 8 o'clock.

CONSTABLES PAY RENT ARRESTING AUTOISTS

Motor League Cites Cases Where County Officials Were Far Too Busy

A deputation from the Ontario Motor League waited on the Attorney-General yesterday morning and made a strong protest against the fee system for county magistrates and county constables with regard to the conviction of motorists. The deputation consisted of Mr. L. B. Howland, president of the League; Mr. W. G. Robertson, secretary, and Mr. T. N. Phelan, solicitor.

"The majority of motorists," said Mr. Phelan, "believe they are fined simply to help some officer pay his rent on taxes, and it frequently happens there is reason for that belief. In a recent investigation of constables' fees it was found that one constable had collected from fees imposed on motorists $1,000 in June, July, August and September, and in addition collected as fees from the county $180 for special duty which consisted in watching motorists. It also appears that the constables were collecting one dollar and fifty cents for every conviction under the Motor Act, and some constables secured as many as ten, fifteen and eighteen convictions in one day. Although the law distinctly says constables should be entitled to one dollar and fifty cents for each day's attendance in Court, no matter how many cases he has, the constables have been collecting with the sanction of the Magistrate one dollar and fifty cents for each and every case.

The Motor League emphasized their desire always to co-operate in the enforcement of the law, and suggested that the only effective way was by the adoption of officers on motorcycles.

It was further suggested by the deputation that all fines and fees should be paid to the treasurer of the county and the magistrates and constables put on a daily salary basis.

Women Have The "Stirring" Habit.

Women have found it necessary to stir so many things when cooking, that they have acquired the stirring habit and seemingly want to stir everything. Dr. Jackson, the inventor of Roman Meal, says that he has a hard time in trying to persuade women not to stir Roman Meal. The directions plainly state that Roman Meal porridge is spoiled if stirred, but women soon forget about the directions and fall into the stirring habit. The doctor thinks he may possibly have to ask grocers to distribute to their customers big cards for hanging in kitchens. These cards would have "Please Do Not Stir Roman Meal," printed in large letters.

Ladies, are you really going to make the doctor do this?

A German theatre has been opened in Lille. Goethe's "Iphigenia" is the attraction.

PRACTICALLY 75 PER CENT. SIGNED PETITION HERE

The report of the prohibition petitions signed in the province and published last night, did not give the complete figures, it is stated. Peterborough, for instance, should have been credited with 6,100 names, or 73 per cent. of the voter's list, instead of 61 per cent. It is estimated that the final total for this city will give a showing of 75 per cent. of the 8,311 possible.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—"If this war is to be won the whole country must be placed in a state of siege," says the Globe.

"Place everyone at the disposal of the Government, put the whole nation upon certain rations and extend compulsion to necessary trades. Let us even do without money temporarily if necessary. This suggestion is neither absurd nor impossible."

TURKS ARE REINFORCED

Beginning to Make Stubborn Stand West of Erzerum.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 26.—Although little news is available from the Erzerum front it is apparent that having been forced back some forty miles to the west of the captured fortress, the Turks, who have begun to receive reinforcements, are beginning to make a stubborn stand.

It is not considered impossible here that the serious fighting which already has begun to take the place of the desultory rear guard actions will develop into a big battle.

PARISH MISSIONS DURING LENT IN CHURCHES HERE

Following the example of the Church of England in Britain, the Bishops of Canada have asked that parish missions be held throughout the Dominion to bring home to the people the spiritual lessons of the war. In Montreal large gatherings of clergy and laity will be held during Lent. The dates are: For the Western parishes, March 12 to 19; for the Eastern parishes, March 19 to April 2; for the Cathedral, March 19 to 26.

So far as possible, experienced missioners have been secured from all over Canada.

Full particulars of dates and hours will be announced later.

"Vigorous and successful efforts are being made to organize and concentrate our physical forces during this terrible war time, and the feeling is growing throughout the Church that our spiritual forces also need to be organized and concentrated for a great united effort," says a cicular. "For we believe that God desires us to do more than respond to the call to arms. We believe that God reigns and that the issues of this war are in His hand. We believe in the power of prayer, and we believe that this terrible crisis is in truth a 'Day of the Lord,' for breaking up the fallow ground, calling us to repentance, scattering our false ideals and showing to the world the awful results of coldness and sin, for we, too, as well as Germany, are serving against Him. We find in these Christian lands, indifference to God; slackness of living; Bibles unread; prayer private, public and family unoffered; sacraments neglected; Sabbaths desecrated; religion a formality; family religion largely extinct; the love of pleasure and excitement dominant; luxurious, selfish and extravagant expenditure; intemperance, profanity, race suicide, the social evil, divorce, questionable methods in business, greed for gold, graft in high places and in low, bribery and corruption in civic and national administration, infidelity and unbelief; real, if not unspoken disbelief in the Incarnation and Resurrection of Jesus Christ.

"We want to be forgiven, purified, and helped; we want to become through this sorrow, better men and women, more fitted for the new world that shall be after the war."

Try this prescription. Go to the Warne Drug Company or to the nearest wideawake drug store, and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a two ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one tablet and allow it to thoroughly dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. Just note how quickly your eyes clear up and how soon the inflammation will disappear. Don't be afraid to use it, it is absolutely harmless. Many who are now blind might have saved their eyes had they started to care for them in time. This is a simple treatment, but marvellously effective in multitudes of cases. Now that you have been warned, don't delay a day, but do what you can to save your eyes and you are likely to thank us as long as you live for publishing this prescription. The Valmae Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail if your druggist cannot.

LETTERS FROM DR. BELAND.

It Has Taken Many Weeks to Come From Berlin.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—Much-marked, officially-stamped, checked by censors, and postmarked, a German post card, minus any postage, reached Canada's Parliamentary postoffice from Hon. Dr. Beland. It came from the military prison in Berlin to Hon. Jacques Bureau, member of Three Rivers, and former Solicitor-General in the Laurier Administration. The letter is dated Dec. 24, but it took eleven days to secure the stamped credentials, and did not reach London till Feb. 8. Dr. Beland writes:—"My poor wife is always very ill. She has not left her room for the last three months. I am ever in hope of being able to join her. Yet this is what makes my captivity so painful. I am in good health and have received your kind letter. Thank you."

Just Like the Pig.—Two clergymen met together one evening. One of them was smoking, a practice to which the other objected very strongly. "Is it possible," said the non-smoker in disgust, "that you smoke tobacco? Even a pig would not smoke so vile a weed!" "Then I suppose," asked the other, "that you do not smoke yourself?" "No, indeed, I should think not!" "Then, my dear brother," said his companion quietly, "who is more like the pig, you or I?"

Left Arm Became Powerless Saved From Paralytic Stroke

By The Timely Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food — Has Built Up Nervous System Wonderfully.

Paralysis is not a pleasant thing to contemplate. Even nervous prostration and locomotor ataxia are among the most dreaded conditions. It is always better to avoid these results of neglected nervous troubles by keeping the nerves in health and vigor.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done wonders for people suffering from the more severe forms of nervous diseases, but we prefer to recommend it as a means of preventing such conditions.

This letter from Mrs. Nichols well represents what we mean, for she was undoubtedly on the verge of more serious trouble when she heard of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and sought its aid.

It is best to be warned by nervous headaches, sleeplessness, nervousness and irritability and to apply the remedy in time.

Mrs. Merritt Nichols, R. R. No. 3, Dundalk, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in writing to tell you the great benefit I have derived from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was so nervous I could not sleep and found it hard to get my work done at all, but having no help at the time, had to do the best I could. Finally my left arm became powerless and cold and this continued to get worse until my whole side was affected, head and all. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the first box helped me so much that I used several and believe that this treatment saved me from having a paralytic stroke. It has built me up wonderfully, and I can recommend it most heartily, believing that if more Nerve Food were used, there would be much less sickness."

There is no lack of evidence as to the great work of restoration being carried on by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The sales of this great nerve tonic are rapidly increasing as its virtues are being found out. But this will not help you unless you put it to the test in your own particular case. It is well worth trying, and will not disappoint you. Fifty cents a box, 6 for $2.50 all dealers, or Edmanson Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

PERMANENCY IN FLOWER BEDS

A Plea For the Planting of Perennials For the Enduring Beautification of the Home

(By J. H. Callander, 565 Weller Street)

If we would only be honest with ourselves we would admit that not many of us are original after all. We are much more given to trying to emulate others than to introduce some new idea ourselves. That is why, when some one does anything that attracts attention, others try to do the same, like a flock of genuine sheep, and that thing immediately becomes the fashion, and is copied all over the land. This principle applies to a novel saying or an unusual action equally. Some one said "I should worry" and the nonsensical phrase sprang into general use. Some one else builds a new design of house, and it at once becomes a model for everyone else to copy. Applying our failing to our subject, some one in town plants a tulip bed; it is admired, and next year there are a hundred tulip beds in the place. There's a sameness in our decorations because we either haven't time or the talent to be original. This being the case, we might as well fall in line with what seems to be a general movement towards permanency in our planting to beautify our home surroundings. Experts have searched the world for wild, natural flowers that are able to endure the winters of the temperate zones comprising on this Continent all of Canada and the northern half of the United States. They have found many that flourished wild under these conditions, and by long and patient cultivation they have bred the plant up from a very ordinary looking wild flower to a thing of wonderful beauty, which still retains its hardiness, while holding its new character and loveliness firmly established.

Some Examples.

There are many notable examples of the improvements made in flowers that were familiar in grandmother's garden, as long ago as we can remember. Take a look at the stately Hollyhocks, and it is hard to realize that the beautiful forms and exquisite shades of colour, the immense doubles, and feathery semi-doubles, are descended from the same old stock of our childhood memories. Then look at the hundreds of magnificent varieties of the Royal Peonies all produced from our grandmother's "pinies" that we remember only as a big, red flower that fell to pieces very soon after opening. The present-day Paeonies cover every shade from purest white to a red so dark as to be almost black, and they last a considerable time as a cut flower, this characteristic having also been established in the strain among others.

The common Larkspur has also been taken in hand and so highly cultivated, hybridised and improved that there is now a very numerous family under the botanical name of Delphinium, that are greatly prized, and make most striking objects in any garden where they are given even ordinary care. They are in all shades of blue, from almost purple to white, while some have white eyes and others black centres. Still another class of plants that have received special attention are the old-fashioned Blue Flags or Iris. Every country where floriculture is given prominence has worked long and industriously with the Iris, until there are now hundreds of established varieties, not only in shades of blue, but white, yellow, and red, and all these in combination. The Japanese have excelled in the cultivation of the Iris, and their productions are a class by themselves, with not only marvellous colour combinations, but an altogether different shape to the flower.

Many Perennials to Choose From.

With such wonders being worked in the floral kingdom, and every hardy flower has gone through the same scientific treatment, there is a wealthof material with which to construct the hardy flower garden. Slowly, people are being brought to realize the possibilities of the permanent border, and as the government is conducting extensive experiments to establish the hardiness of thousands of varieties in our Canadian climate, there is no need for us to try anything but what we know will succeed.

The diversity of styles of growth in this class of plants is so great, that beds can be constructed that will grade up from a lowly border of Dianthus or pinks, right up in all stages to a background of the lovely Blue Aconite or Monkshood, or Delphiniums or Hollyhocks. In places, a succession can be arranged so that when an early Spring flowering plant has finished its display, it can be cut back and a mid-season bloomer allowed the room till it is again replaced by late fall blooming sorts. Most growers of Perennials take an interest in the plantings of their customers, and are glad to advise the proper plants for any situation or special purpose. There is no doubt of the tendency to plant flowers that will remain for years in the situation given to them, and while it would not do to entirely overlook the many beautiful annuals that so well repay a little care, there is certainly immense satisfaction in seeing our borders come into ever increasing beauty as the perennials establish themselves more and more firmly with the passing years, asking only a little cultivation and an annual feed of some good fertilizer for which they give a bountiful return of foliage and bloom.—J. H. Callander.

SPECIAL MEETING TO-MORROW AFTERNOON

At the Assembly Hall in The Old Opera House Block

The hearts of the little company of Christians gathered to the name of the Lord Jesus Christ down at Lang with those of others mutually interested, have of recent days been gladdened at the visitation of God's grace to two residents of that locality, a man and wife, who have professed to have received salvation through faith in the finished work of Christ, and have been added to their number. "As new born babes desiring the sincere milk of the word," being "taught of God" and led on "into the ways that be in Christ," these newly-saved souls, with two others of longer standing in Christ, have expressed a desire paremount to that of the Ethiopian Eunuch of Acts, chap. 8, in his words to Phillip, "See here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptised?" Baptism by immersion for believers only is taught by precept and example throughout the New Testament. Romans, chapter 6, is one of many places where the truth is taught by precept, while a better example could not be furnished than that of Saul of Tarsus afterwards Paul the apostle, to the Gentiles, who in verse 18 of chap. 9, when only three days in Christ, "having received his sight, arose and baptised." Much joy has been brought to the hearts of God's people who have in this way obeyed their Lord's command, for such it undoubtedly is. While by no means essential to salvation, its necessity for implicit obedience can be understood by the words of Acts, 10, v. 48, when the divinely sent apostle "commanded them to be baptised in the name of the Lord."

The instance is told of a young man who in simplicity of heart and love of his newly-found Saviour went to be baptised with a heart heavy, while his bag containing a change of clothing was light. Returning a little later, having passed through the waters of baptism; circumstances were reversed, for like the Eunuch before referred to who "went on his way rejoicing" the young man's heart was light while his bag with clothing wet was heavy.

Arrangements have been made to comply with the request to-morrow afternoon in the Assembly Hall. A short meeting will be held commencing at 3 o'clock, at which an address will probably be given on the subject in question and immediately after this meeting the applicants will pass through the typical waters of judgment. Baptism being a divine ordinance for publicly testifying to identification in death, burial and resurrection with a crucified and risen Christ, a cordial invitation is extended to all to be present at this meeting.

The Assembly Hall will be found on the first floor of the old opera house building on George street on the east side of the building, next License Inspector's office.—Com.

GIRLS! HAVE A MASS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR, SOFT, GLOSSY, WAVY

25 cent bottle destroys dandruff and doubles beauty of your hair

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment — that's all — you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

"BEHEADED FOR HIS CRIME."

MONTREAL, Feb. 26.—Because Cousineau, Conservative Opposition leader, voted in the Legislature against the measure enabling municipalities in Quebec to make grants to the funds of the French-Canadians in Ontario, Laval students took down his portrait from the walls of the University building and hid it. In the vacancy this placard was posted up: "Here is the place of Philemon Cousineau, beheaded for his crime."

LEGS BROKEN, WALKS.

Remarkable Fortitude Shown by Chicago Policeman After Fall.

Policeman Edward Maher, of the West Thirteenth Street Station, Chicago, walked a block with both legs broken.

While leaving the squad room after roll call, Maher tripped and fell down six steps. He got up, brushed himself off and remarked that he was only a bit shaken up. He went out to travel his beat.

A few moments later a report came to the station that he had fallen in the street a block away. It was found that his right leg was fractured above the knee and his left leg fractured at the ankle.

Leave of Absence—

Leave of absence is approved by Divisional Letter 3 D, 22-2-16-10, dated 25th Feb., for Lieut. R. R. De Puyjalon, 93rd O. S. Battalion, C.E.F., from Reveille March 2nd, 1916, to Reveille March 5th, 1916.

J. E. R. Munro, Captain,
Adjutant 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

Notice—

Three chapters of the Daughters of the Empire will serve tea in the tearooms at Turnbulls Ltd., this afternoon, 4-6. Admission 10c. A cordial invitation extended to all soldiers.

BROCKVILLE, Feb. 25. William Albert Langley, a local man, who, it is charged, deserted from the 109th Battalion, Lindsay, taking with him, it is alleged, a young woman named Brooks of that town, and leaving a wife and family here, was arrested near Watertown, N. Y., yesterday morning, at a farmhouse, where the couple were working. Both are being held, Langley on a charge of white slavery.

Eight of the 93rd Signallers leave on Monday to attend the school of signalling, which will commence at Kingston, Ont., on the 29th inst. As in the case of school recently terminated instruction will be carried on in Grant Hall. The school will be conducted by: Commandant, Major D. E. Mundell, D.S.O., 3rd Division; Instructors, Lieut. J. K. Munsie, 146th Battalion, and Col.-Sergt. W. H. Reid, 15th Regiment.

Kingston War Garrison, Feb. 25.—Recently the Minister of Militia authorised the raising of another battalion to be known as the 207th, Ottawa unit, and gave command of the new overseas regiment to Lt.-Col. Charles MacLean. The new commanding officer was formerly of Montreal and Brockville, and has seen much service at the front with both the Canadian infantry and artillery, and was also attached for some time to an Imperial unit. Lt.-Col. MacLean is at present in Ottawa, getting things in shape for his battalion. He will gather around him the very best material securable for officers, and intends starting organization at once. The 207th will be another addition to the 3rd Divisional Area.

With a new line-up in action, the Band of the 93rd Battalion came back strong against the Signallers in the return hockey game at Brock St. Rink this afternoon and beat the Flagmen 1 goal to 0. It was another sensational game. The losers had their signals crossed while the Band showed some fine close harmony, although their star rover, Harry Worrall, was out of the line-up with a split lip, sustained through laughing too hard in Thursday's game. Clarionet Grange, Millbrook Orr and Pianissimo Doughty were new men on the musicians' line-up. Lieut. Sexton tolled the bell.

There are one hundred clubs in the O.H.A., and each averages a membership of twelve men, which is a membership of twelve hundred. Of this number seven hundred have enlisted for overseas service, which means one hundred full hockey teams of seven men each. This is a wonderful showing for one sporting organization to make.

Judgment In Peterboro' Will Case

The appended judgment was given yesterday in Osgoode Hall, Toronto, by Mr. Justice Latchford:

Re estate of Hon. Robert Hamilton —J. A. Worrell, K.C., for Mrs. Hill appealed from report of L. M. at Peterborough. B. D. Hall (Peterborough, for Royal Trust Co. R. R. Hall of Peterborough for W. F. Hamilton D. Saunders, K.C., for Union Bank.

Judgment: The assignment to Mr. Hamilton while made before execution of deed of settlement was made after formal judgment manifestly upon the basis of fact that Mrs. Hill was unrestrained in anticipating her income. She cannot now be enabled to frustrate the effect of her assignment to her brother. Seeking equity she must do equity. W. F. Hamilton and his assignees are entitled to the same protection that Mrs. Hill is willing should be extended to the Union Bank. Until such time as the debt under the assignment to Mr. Hamilton is paid or the assignment to him set aside by the court and the debt due to the bank is discharged the application cannot be granted. When that time arrives, if it ever does arrive, the application may be renewed. In the meantime the costs of all parties are to be paid by Mrs. Hill.

Max, the chestnut horse who has for years rung the bell for the New Year's dinner in the Home of Rest for Horses, Cricklewood, Eng., has died.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Electrics Outscored Soldiers 3 to 2 In Benefit Hockey Bout

Score Was Always Close and Some Lively Hockey Was Seen in Spots--Good Goal-keeping of Legros and the Work of Sexton and Graham Were Features.

The Electrics outscored the 93rd Battalion, three goals to two, in the benefit game for the Belgian Relief Fund at Brock Street Rink last night. While the battle lacked the pepper that has characterized the O.H.A games between the two teams, there was some lively hockey in spots and the closeness of the score made it interesting. The Electrics led by 1 to 0 at the end of the first period, and it was 1-1 at the close of the second, the soldiers losing out in the last session, when the winners scored twice, while the khaki brigade succeeded in finding the nets once. Widdifield and Duguy were absentees from the soldier line-up, while the Electrics were shy of Spratt and Rose. Both teams made changes in their line-ups during the game.

There was little to choose between the teams. The soldiers had far more shots than the Electrics, but found it difficult to negotiate the defence, and most of their heaves were from well out, and were easy for Legros, who was in grand form, and had little difficulty in warding off the drives. The winners, while they had not as many smashes at the nets as the soldiers, were inside oftener, and this finally won for them. The Electrics were in better condition than was expected, in view of the fact that some of them had not been on ice for two weeks.

A Peterborough star in the days gone by, Dr. Harry King, who played with the Colts when they won the junior championship, handled the bell, and made a good job of the refereeing end of the game.

Legros in goal and Graham in the forward line, were the stars for the winners, while Sexton was the most conspicuous man for the soldiers. Legros gave a fine exhibition of goal-tending, and was unbeatable except for a shot from a scrimmage and another that carooned in off Evans' skate. Graham showed all kinds of speed and stick handling ability, as did Sexton, who tore off some beautiful rushes. Harry Blewett also did some very useful work for the soldiers. The Lakefield boy is fast and a consistently hard worker.

The initial line-ups were as follows, with Cullen and Anderson being used at times by the soldiers, while Bill Hamilton and Lowes jumped into the game for the Electrics:

93rd	Electrics
Goal
C. Montgomery	Legros
Defence
R. Montgomery	McMartin
Ketchum	Long
Rover
Sexton	Evans
Centre
Windsor	Cherrett
Right Wing
Blewett	F. Montgomery
Left Wing
Wedlock	Graham

The game opened at a leisurely clip, with the teams playing individual hockey. The checking was close, and the players bunched badly, but some fine stick handling by Sexton and speedy rushes by Graham added to the interest. The soldiers were drawing a head on Legros whenever they passed centre ice, but he nailed everything. The Electrics next tried to get inside, and finally succeeded. Claude Montgomery, the junior Electric goalkeeper, who was playing for the soldiers, stopped the first shot, but Graham batted the puck in. There was no further score in the period.

The soldiers had the edge in the second stage, but lost chances by failure to pass the puck, and Legros kept beating them on all their shots. Finally, however, Windsor shoved one in from a scrimmage, and it was even up to the end of the second period.

The Electrics won the game at the beginning of the third period, when they showed their best hockey of the night. Graham put them in front when he got away with a nice rush and shot from the side, the puck hitting C. Montgomery's foot and bouncing into the corner of the net. Evans made it 3 to 1 when he took a pass and beat Montgomery from close in. Several other shots missed by inches. Then the soldiers started to come, and Blewett put them only a goal behind when he got away nicely and carooned one into the nets off Evans' skates. This was the final score.

Summary.

1st Period—
1. Electrics—Graham.

2nd Period—
2. 93rd—Windsor.

3rd Period—
3. Electrics—Graham.
4. Electrics—Evans.
5. 93rd—Blewett.

The 93rd Band was in attendance, and rendered a fine programme. A feature of great interest was the exhibition of fancy skating by Mrs. Aylmer and Miss Jean Harstone, whose graceful work was much enjoyed. The sum of $70 was realized for the Belgian Relief Fund.

JACK JOHNSON MUST LEAVE

Will Depart for South America March 3—Former Champion Has Made a Lot of Money.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The authorities have suggested to Jack Johnson that his room is more desirable than his company. It has been made clear to the negro prize fighter that if he does not leave voluntarily he will probably be deported.

Johnson took the hint, and announced that he will sail on March 3 for South America. The former champion has been heading a revel with a company touring the provinces, and has been making "barrels of money." There have been innumerable complaints received by the authorities with regard to his obnoxious attentions to white women.

CITY LEAGUE.

There will be a meeting of the executive of the City League in the Y. M.C.A. on Monday evening, February 28th to deal with the unplayed game between East City and Bachelors.

CURLING

Last night's curling scores were as follows.

Dr. Greer 11, W. M. Lang 16.

J. H. Ferguson 14, Connal 8.

H. F. Foote 6, Davidson 17.

Brightman 15, Campbell 10.

Two of these scores will likely affect the final standing.

Dr. Greer's loss is a setback that may eliminate him; the same applies to Campbell who, while not exactly out of the running, will have to dig himself out through hard going.

Herb Martin returned this morning from Toronto after being on the missing list since the District Cup games.

IMPERATOR IS GUARDED.

Liner, Painted Grey to Prevent Air Attacks, Lies Idle in Elbe.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The London Times quotes a statement by the correspondent of Politiken, who has visited Hamburg, that the Hamburg-American liner Imperator looks somewhat dilapidated, after having remained for a year in rain and wind in the Elbe.

The ship's three funnels have been painted grey, to prevent recognition by airmen in case of a raid.

The company employs only 200 clerks, 150 engineers and 500 workmen.

Great Excitement.

Stuart Wortley, the English Tory and myself made two responses amid a scene of great excitement. We were given a similar interview and accorded equal cordiality by President Poincare and Premier Briand. In short all official France joined in the demonstrations.

The committee's sittings were strictly private, but I can reveal the fact that all who went to France were immensely struck with the brilliant ability of the French members and above all their intimate knowledge, not only of the details of their work on land and sea in munition and diplomacy, but also every detail of our.

All idea that any one in France does not realize and under-rates in the slightest, Britain's contribution to the war, was at once dispelled.

The chief conclusion that I drew from these sittings which we held in Paris, was the intensity and the closeness of spirit and purpose of the Parliaments of the two nations.

We take in Bordeaux on this visit. The visit which the committee is to make to Lyons will have to be deferred until later.

In summing up the results of the Journey we have made we all appreciate the fact that in going to France we have added a new, strong link to the chain that binds the Entente.

France, if it be possible, is more self-confident than is England of final victory.

Paris Is Optimistic.

Somehow or other Paris did not appear to me quite so gloomy when I paid my second visit since the war as it did on the first. It was still empty, of course, but it did not look half so dead. It suggested the difference between a man when his eyes are wide open and he has become conscious of beginning a new day, and a man who is only half awake. There was, too, less evidence of that stunned look which I noticed in the first visit. People went through the streets with their usual look; they seemed to be attentive to their particular business, and to be quite intent on it, to the absence of all thoughts of the horrors of the distant battlefield. I went to several places of public resort. In the Rue Royale there is a well-known and rather luxurious restaurant known as La Rue's. It was quite full, and the dinners served had none of the asceticism of war time. Many of the guests were men in khaki; some our own men, some Frenchmen. But except that there was no music from the old Hungarian band which once made the place noisy, things seemed to go on just as usual. There was champagne on several tables, the bread as as abundant and tasty as it had been in peace time. In short, there was no suggestion whatever of the war having touched the food supply of Paris. Bread tickets, such as they have in Vienna and Berlin, would have appeared as much a portent as a trench or a 75 in the midst of the luxurious room. Similarly the cinemas were going at full strength.

Self Confidence.

It is a symptom of that spirit of self-confidence which I found to be universal. There may be croakers in France; there may be pacifists; I haven't met one; they must be outside all the many classes which I met. Everywhere I found the determination to go on to a decisive victory, and everywhere the certainty that that victory was sure to come. It is well to dwell for a moment on that point, because Germany has once more been throwing out feelers for peace. In the words of Herr Bethmann Hollweg, the German Chancellor, peace would come to-morrow if the Allies were only free to act as they think best; it is wicked obstinate England which stands in the way. One may accept the statement, though false, as a compliment, for after all it does prove that the Germans already realize how grossly they miscalculated the British nation. As some Swiss writer has said, the Germans wanted a war and were determined to have it, else why did they resist the appeal of all Europe, including Austria, to prevent it? But while the Germans wanted war, they did not want this war. They wanted a war with the British excluded. They expected we should exclude ourselves, for they had formed an image of our national character and of our national resources which was in stupid contradiction with very palpable facts. To the German mind, England was a nation of slackers, of decadents; not too proud, but too obese and comfortable and cowardly to fight. And if she ever did contemplate fighting she had none of the resources requisite. She had a little army which Bismarck described as fit only to be arrested by German police, or an army which the Kaiser thought to be "contemptible." The German police did not attempt to arrest the English army, and the "contemptible" army, apart from its deeds of incomparable valour, has by to-day grown to be one of the greatest armies in the world. And we accept the compliment of the German Chancellor as a realization that this nation, though slow to go into a quarrel, is just as slow to get out of it until it has avenged its honour and secured its safety. If the history of British armies prove anything, it is that the bull dog tenacity of the British races has never yet been exhausted by disaster, by time, by threat, by cajolery.

Allies United.

But the compliment, if compliment it be, that English tenacity alone stands in the way of peace, is not deserved. For in my opinion England is neither more nor less determined to go right on till she has won than any single one of the nations which are fighting with her. France is just as resolute as the most resolute Englishman. It is not a resoluteness which expresses itself in hot words—still less in Hymns of Hate; but it is there all the same. France realizes first that this is the last chance of retaining her position as a first-rate power. If Germany had won this war, then probably there would have been further mutilation of her territory, more millions of people—like the Alsatians or Lorrainers — with French hearts grieved every hour of daily existence by compulsory obedience to brutal German masters. That would not have been the end of it. For nearly half a century France has been kept in turmoil and in apprehension and often in humiliating silence and a temper kept down with difficult. For during the half century since Germany's crushing victories of 1870-1 there has not been a year in which Germany did not rattle its insolent sabre and threaten France once more with the tramp of German legions on her soil.

Steely Determination.

But these facts do not account alone for the steely determination which I found everywhere in France. I have said before that France meets death with a laugh, and the statement is correct; but I should add a qualification. On the French front there are many French soldiers and officers who come from the districts of France which are still in the occupation of the enemy and have been in their occupation for months. Through the barbed wires even stories have been able to trickle to these gallant men of what Germany has been doing in those portions of France which are still under her heel. I dare not repeat some of these stories; my readers have been made painfully familiar with them in the many pages in which the atrocities of Germany have been set forth. And these stories have given to this war a feature which was absent from previous wars in modern times. It is not merely a war to vindicate the integrity of the nation, but to avange the wrongs of the individual. It is these acts of human and beastial baseness which has nerved the arms of the French soldier as much as the great issues at stake. Hence I have been told that you see on the faces of the French soldier in the trenches—when they forget to be cheerful and to laugh—a look of set determination that is affrighting. The Germans have called the devil from the depths, but they have also aroused the devil in every nation that is at war with them. Indeed it has come to this; that while you may hear a gallant fellow who has returned from the horrors and the disasters of Gallipoli speak with something like friendship of the soldier of Turkey, you hear from no lips of any soldier of the Allies anything but hatred and contempt for the German.

In the hotel at which I stopped in Paris there were two singularly handsome young fellows, almost boys. At first I was surprised to see young faces in streets from which all young faces have disappeared. I soon discovered the reason. One of them had lost an arm, the other had lost a leg, and they were just striplings scarcely yet grown to manhood. But they were also cheerful; did their work alertly and willingly—the one as a porter outside, the other as a lift man. Their bright eyes sparkling with youth, their rosy cheeks, everything spoke of life's strong young sap; and there they were, maimed at life's opening hours.

A Final Impression.

I turn for a final impression of the present mood of France to one or two words about her politicians. I had the honour of an interview with M. Briand, the present Prime Minister. Here is one of the most remarkable political careers of our generation—more remarkable than that even of Mr. Lloyd George. M. Briand began life in poverty deeper than even the modest surroundings of Mr. Lloyd George's youth; and yet he has been twice already Prime Minister of France. He is now chosen as Prime Minister in France's most perilous hour, and he is still under fifty. And the face looks even younger than his years. A mass of black hair rises from the head into a big curl that disappears from the heads of most men in the fierce anxieties of public life before many years. The cheeks have still the healthy red of youth; the whole expression of the fact is one of youth, beaming, quizzical even; in spite of the aquiline hose and the strong mouth, you think more of him as a charmer than of a great dynamic force.

I was accompanied to the interview by M. Henry Franklin-Bouillon, one of the most notable figures in the life of France to-day. M. Franklin-Bouillon, as his name implies, is half English, half French in his origin. Never have I seen energy so embodied in a single man. He works sixteen hours a day. If it were not for the fact that he has no love for society and goes home every night and dines off a bowl of milk, he would have been in his grave long ago. I take him as one of the best tests of French opinion to-day; for he has always been a strong Radical; always hoped that Germany, by an exhibition of good sense in neutralizing Alsace-Lorraine would enable France to avoid a war—and especially a war which must mean the death of ten million men. But Germany's brutal aggression convinced him that the one way to deal with Germany was to beat her, and to-day — like so many other friends of peace—including myself—he is one of the fiercest in the determination that this war must be fought out till German militarism has come to an end and until the integrity of France is restored.

Herr Bethmann Hollweg is wrong in saying that England stands alone in the way of peace. Every country that is fighting Germany to-day has the same iron resolve. When peace comes, it must be a real peace, and a real peace can only come when German people have exercised from their souls these seven devils that have made a carnage ground of all Europe.

Voice of The People

Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—I trust you will allow me a small space to reply to yesterday's correspondent signed "Lucy Right." "Lucy Wrong" would have been more applicable.

The introductory remarks were very good, acquainting the readers of the fact that she (or he) is a "Greenie." Rightly named, as the letter points out.

Your correspondent would do well before criticising public personages, to read a little more and become more acquainted with their doings. "Lucy Right" is not correct in stating that Mrs. Pankhurst's work ceased when this war started. Pardon me, but it only began, and it was a labour of love and patriotism, for, when she and her followers ceased the work which none of us with true womanly instincts admired, as it in no way became our sex, she has since laboured unceasingly for the Red Cross and recruiting.

"Lucy Right" refers to Mrs. Pankhurst's refusal of admittance to the States, and quotes America as an example, which alone is a slur to our Empire. Eccentric America will extend a welcome to infamous German plotters and harbour them and call them citizens, but refuse a woman who speaks in the cause of women's rights.

Mrs. Pankhurst's campaign is to urge the people of Canada to aid the Belgian Relief Fund. Were it not, I would take but scant interest, as it is. May she have a good hearing and her address awaken and arouse some of the citizens of Peterborough.

Here's to Mrs. Pankhurst, in spite of her "prison record," and her band of followers, who have done more for the suffering in this war than "Lucy Right" has ever dreamed of.

"A Patriotic Girl."

Indian River, Ont., Feb. 25, '16.
Editor Peterborough Examiner.

Dear Sir,—A criticism appeared in your paper yesterday of the concern given by Murray street choir at Indian River a few days ago. We are of course aware that all who have attained to any prominence before the public must expect both censure and approbation, but we feel that in justice to Murray street choir, some further particulars should be given.

Arrangements had been made for the orchestra to accompany the choir, but owing to sickness and other reasons they were unable to do so. In addition, just before leaving Peterborough the choir leader was notified that three other items he had depended upon would have to be cancelled.

The choir reached here fatigued and hungry after a tiresome journey of three hours on the road and naturally could not do themselves full justice. Our many past experiences with this choir have taught us to value very highly their excellence and musical ability and we feel that it would not be fair to them to allow any contrary criticism to pass unchallenged or without some word of explanation.

Thanking you for this space in your valuable paper, Mr. Editor, we are,

Yours truly,
The Indian River Church.

JUST GOOD ENOUGH TO BE DANGEROUS?

IF Poor Advertising Mediums were ENTIRELY worthless, they would not be Dangerous. For they would not, then, make any appeal whatever to sensible advertisers.

But an ADVERTISING MEDIUM which has a LITTLE MERIT is like "a little knowledge," "a dangerous thing." Some Business Men there are, always, who—for considerations of "cheapness" etc.—will either rely upon such mediums wholly, or give them an absurdly large part in their Advertising Campaigns.

The cigar smoker will do well if he selects the improved "Halpins Ten" cigar, manufactured by the Peterborough Havana Cigar Co.

We received a large shipment of imported leaf early in January and have the manufactured article now on sale at all the leading cigar stands.

Our 1915 product was a high-grade cigar, yet we can say unhesitatingly that the 1916 production is superior. The 1916 "Halpins Ten" cigar is second to no ten cent cigar on the market, and it retails at 4 for 25 cents.

We are putting forth every effort to attract the patronage of the cigar smokers and would earnestly solicit a trial, which we feel sure will merit your continued patronage. 2d-8

GERMAN LOSSES REPORTED TO BE 150,000 IN THREE DAYS

Some of the Best Troops in the German Army Are Massed Before Verdun—Determined to Capture It

PARIS, Feb. 25.—General Joffre has gone to the Verdun front to take command personally, according to a report to-night, and the two great master minds of the war, the Kaiser in the north and Joffre in the south, are now pitting against each other in what promises to be the greatest struggle of the war.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—The German losses during the first four days of the battle around Verdun are authoritatively estimated at 150,000.

The German offensive is recognized now as probably only the beginning of a determined effort to take the fortress, formerly the key to the French front, and and compares in violence and losses to the battle of the Yser. The French assume the battle may continue a fortnight. It is believed the calm last night was only a lull required by the attacking forces to bury their dead, carry off wounded and bring up reserves to take the places of divisions half destroyed by French artillery and machine guns. The German forces are known to be at least 350,000, supported by numerous 15-inch and 17-inch Austrian mortars, with all the heavy artillery used in the Serbian campaign and part of that formerly employed on the Russian front.

Preparing in December.

Preparations for the battle were observed early in December, when the first troops assigned to the operation were brought up. Eight divisions which returned from Serbia were sent to Belgium for a rest and then transported to the region of Verdun in January. Five army corps in all are known to have been brought up to reinforce two corps which previously held that part of the line between Malancourt and Vauquois.

These were the best troops of the German army, including as it is learned from prisoners, the famous Third Corps of Brandenburg, supposedly equal in valor to the Prussian Guard, and the Fifteenth Army Corps, commanded by General von Deimling, known in France as one of the most brilliant of the German general officers.

Obsession for Verdun.

The resoluteness of the Germans to capture the fortress is explained by the fascination that the name Verdun has had on the minds of the German people since 1792, and the consequent moral value of its fall to the Germans. This psychological reason, in the judgment of high official critics, explains the presence of Emperor William behind the troops and the orders of the day issue to the army by the Crown Prince and the Generals. The French compare the ground gained by the Germans in the four days with twice that amount taken by the French in the first two days of their offensive in Champagne, together with eight times the number of prisoners. The confidence of the French is unshaken by the fierce attacks and the slight bending in of the French line.

The military critics of the Temps reports that heavy French reinforcements have been brought up. Lieut-Col. Leonce Rousset, another military critic, relates a conversation he had with a surgeon just returned from Verdun: On Friday 23, during the present battle, the surgeon saw an entire brigade, which was advancing in close order, caught by the concentrated fire of French batteries and annihilated in a few minutes.

BERLIN.

The city of Berlin, Ontario, does well to seek a change of name. There is only one Berlin we know. It is the German capital which is gaining a place in history which no other city will envy. To change the name of our Ontario town may be a matter of sentiment, but good sentiment makes life better. The little village of Kaiser, Saskatchewan, might with advantage, find a new name, too.—Monetary Times.

Mrs. Thomas was the recipient of a beautiful cabinet of Roger's silver from the M. O. D. girls of the R. Simpson Co., where she had been employed. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas will spend the summer at Kew Beach, Toronto.

WON'T LIMIT FOOTWEAR PRICES.

In response to numerous requests that the Government fix maximum prices for footgear and other articles manufactured from leather, the German Ministry of the Interior has declared that, because of the great variety of styles and qualities in the boot and shoe trade, it would be impracticable, to attempt to establish fixed rates.

It is announced, according to the Berliner Tageblatt, that a reduction in the price of shoes and similar articles is expected to follow the recent regulation of the price of leather.

A Patriotic Use For Loose Cash in Banks

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—Senator Choquette made the unique proposal in the Senate that unclaimed balances in Canadian banks be turned over to the Patriotic Fund.

The last blue book on unclaimed balances, he said, showed that there was more than $800,000, which had been deposited and unclaimed for many years, and that there was $200,000 in cheques and drafts which had never been presented for payment. He had written the Finance Minister, Sir Thomas White, suggesting that sixty days' notice should be given that the Government proposes to confiscate unclaimed balances and give the money to the Patriotic Fund. The notice would afford those who desired the opportunity of withdrawing the money they had not claimed for years and on which no interest was being paid.

Hon. Mr. Lougheed thought that, according to the bank Act, after the lapse of a number of years unclaimed balances were turned over to the Government by the banks. The proposal by Senator Choquette appeared to be the equivalent of confiscation.

Senator Choquette replied that the banks now were confiscating the profits on unclaimed balances; they loaned the money at 6, 7, and 8 per cent. The Finance Minister was paying 4 or 5 per cent. for money he borrowed. He could take the unclaimed balances, and even if he provided 3 per cent. interest for the depositors when they claimed or withdrew it it would be a profitable piece of financing.

Senator Davis said that the banks did not notify depositors owning unclaimed balances. He had found the names of twenty-five or thirty people in a Government report of unclaimed balances and had notified them himself; the banks had not done so.

Hon. Mr. Lougheed, who had turned up the statute, informed the Senate that section 114 of the bank Act requires banks to make a statement to the Government of balances unclaimed for five years, and also to notify the depositor if his address is in the possession of the bank.

A motion for the production of all official correspondence bearing on the subject was adopted.

FIRST REAL ENCOUNTER IN RING 175 YEARS OLD

It was just about 176 years ago that Jack Broughton successfully defended his title against George Stevenson in the first genuine pugilistic championship battle of modern times. Stevenson's challenge to Broughton might serve as a model for challengers of Willard. George wrote:

"You think yourself a great fighter. Perhaps you are, but there are people living here in Clerkenwell says your fighting days are over and you are good for nothing but to show off as them glove fights. I will meet you a month from to-day. If you don't come up you are a coward. If you don't beat me you are a humbug. If you beat me you are a dead man."

Broughton, however, who was a "dead man," lived for [illegible] a hiding that he died [illegible] a month afterwards.

Fighting in France Pictures Are Genuine

Guaranteed to Be the Official War Pictures of the French Government —Their Authenticity is Beyond Doubt—You Should See Them

The New York World has the following to say of the Fighting in France pictures:

The Fulton was thronged all day yesterday. Several hundreds of people were unable to get even near the doors last night. One of the most popular ways of spending Thanksgiving Day was to devote part of it to a visit to the front. To see what war is like gave an overwhelming feeling of gladness that this country is at peace.

Many of the men of the United States navy were among the Thanksgiving Day audiences and got their first glimpses of the nature of modern war on land. The view of the French marines that work particularly delighted them, and they were deeply stirred when they saw the great naval gun push its long nose through the cover of tree branches thrown over it to hide it from the enemy aviators.

As experts, these men were thrilled with what they called the "sweet working" of the big guns, the marvellous mechanism of which takes up the whole of the terrific recoil, throws out the empty shell and brings the huge weapon back to its correct position after each firing. They were highly pleased, too, to watch the quiet, methodical manner of the men in action, swinging along great cases of shells and handling them, though under fire, as non-chalantly as if they were handling coal.

Especial interest was taken in the picture showing the poison gas. The stealthy crawling of this new and diabolical instrument of scientific war was closely watched in eager but amazed silence.

The nature of the trenches was a surprise to all. Few or none of them have been able to realise from descriptions or even photographs what either the trenches or barbed wire entanglements are like. It was not until these pictures were seen showing that the cellars of demolished houses have been utilized as parts of the trenches that the many reports of fighting in dark cellars were understood.

Many of the visitors were deeply touched at the sight of the haphazard way in which the men in the front firing line get their food and the difficulty they have in finding an appetite for nothing but plain bread as they were at the glimpse of the fallen strewn brough a wooded battlefield, so thickly that the ground is carpeted with the dead.

Astounding as these motion pictures at the Fulton Theatre are in their realism, there can be no question of their verity. These films, which were loaned to The World, through its war correspondent, E. Alexander Powell, by the French Government, under whose instructions they were taken to be kept in the National Archives of France as part of the official record of the war, are the only pictures of the fighting on the western front which have a written guarantee from the French Foreign Ministry. This is an assurance to all that these remarkable pictures are genuine.

In his letter to Mr. Powell, The World war correspondent, accompanying the films from the French Foreign Office, Bureau Chief Fournal says:

"As I have told you, these films have been taken by the "operateurs mobilises" at the front of the French Army with the authorization of the Great Geneal Staff. It is, as you know, superfluous to affirm their authenticity without retouching, which is quite indisputable."

These films must be seen for a true realization of the war. As they are to be shown under the auspices of The World throughout the United States and Canada, they can be at the Grand Opera House only a limited time. It is therefore advisable to take the earliest opportunity to see them.

These pictures will be shown at the Grand Opera House next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, having been secured by the Evening Examiner. The plan opens on Tuesday morning Reserved seats 25c and 35c.

Prince Has No Daughter

Discovery of Fact Leads to Settlement of Sensational Action.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Life runs smoothly again for Prince Alexandre Miskinoff and his elderly bride, the much-married Aimee Crocker Gourud Miskinoff.

The couple consented to arbitrate their differences late Thursday afternoon.

When Supreme Court Justice Clark convenes his court counsel will move the discontinuance of their clients' counter-suits for separation.

The Prince has announced he will seek solace on the battlefields of Europe. "I go to Russia to fight for the Czar," he asserted, proudly. "I will have to rise before noon, I know. But who cares? Not I."

The Prince shook his head sadly when reminded he would be leaving his wife's seventeen-year-old foster daughter, Yvonne, languishing for love of him.

In the settlement announcement the lawyers covered every point except the disposition of the pretty, pink-cheeked, fluffy-haired Yvonne, who is in many respects the central figure of the remarkable romance.

"We have heard in private testimony that has convinced both the Prince and myself that there was no issue of their marriage," said Mr. Oldmixon, attorney. "The Prince is now convinced that he was in error when he testified in court that a child had been born to his wife in a private sanitarium last April."

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

EYE TALKS SERIES

NO. 13—EFFECT OF SUN'S GLARE ON EYES

SOME people find they feel the glare of the Sun acutely through their glasses. The lenses are suitable for correcting all errors of vision, both for near and distant use, and possibly are the finest quality, may even be Dr. Fowler's famous "Peblo" glasses. The eyes, however, are extremely sensitive to strong light, and a beautiful bright day brings real discomfort.

This is all unnecessary, and if you report the fact to Dr. Fowler he will show you his "Acto" lenses, which are an exceptionally high-grade glass, with a very slight tint of green, so clear as to be un-noticeable, yet sufficiently opaque to catch the glaring rays as they strike the glass, and soften them so that they strike the eyes evenly distributed all over, and not in needle-like points as they feel to a sensitive eye.

If you have such trouble, let Dr. Fowler change your lenses, and try them out a few days—That's the way to prove their value.

New French Method Of Meeting Attacks

PARIS, Feb. 23.—Authoritative military opinion here indicates perplexity regarding the recent German attacks at different point of the front, because to all appearances they involve the enemy in exactly the same difficulties which the Allies learned to their cost always follow partial or diffused offensives, namely, heavy local losses and speedy checks by the defenders, owing to the facility of bringing up reinforcements from the sectors that are not menaced.

Even the optimists hesitate to suggest that the Germans are so much in need of any success to encourage the morale of their troops that they will deliberately adopt methods they know to be costly and useless. Yet the enemy's determination precludes the idea that the attacks are merely tentative, with the object of finding weak spots, as has been hitherto imagined, or to wrest from the French vantage points that the Germans know will soon be utilized against them.

It is certain that the desperate fighting at Ypres and on a ten-mile front north of Verdun, to say nothing of the Artois death trap, have caused the assailants frightful losses.

To make matters worse, from the German point of view, the French have evolved a new method of resistance. First, when the enemy's activity indicates that an attack is probable, French aviators and long-range artillery bombard the railways feeding the enemy's front and local supply stations. Then comes the German bombardment of the trenches to be attacked, which generally wrecks them so that the assailants have a comparatively easy task. But, instead of launching a counter-attack which, if successful, only gives possession of untenable trenches, the French, preventing the bringing up of reinforcements with their "curtain of fire," simply massacre the Germans, occupying them with their fearfully accurate "seventy-fives," after which a mere patrol can round up what is left of the German assailants, while the French hold their position as strongly as ever in new trenches prepared just behind those that have been wrecked.

The British near Ypres, where the latest advices indicate that a big attack is brewing, have followed a similar plan in allowing the enemy to retain the "international trench," which is costing them terrible sacrifices.

Whatever may be the object of the German attacks, they have so far produced little save losses. Perhaps Germany can afford them better than the Allies suppose, but I can state definitely that nothing would suit the French better. A war of attrition is the Allies' strongest card, at least until summer permits their combined and (they hope) final offensive.

HEAR ROAR 30 MILES OFF.

Thunder of Big Guns Travels a Long Distance.

PARIS, Feb. 24.—So terrific is the fire of the big German guns at Verdun and the reply of the French artillery, that the throbbing thunder is plainly audible at Bar le Duc, nearly thirty miles away.

Extra editions of the evening newspapers are bought up here as fast as they appear and the places where official statements are posted are surrounded by crowds. In view of the importance of the issues at stake, no speeches were made at the Franco-British Inter-Parliamentary Committee banquet at which Premier Briand was present.

Turkish Armies Defeated In the Fight For the Persian Mountain Passes

Rnssians Hurl Enemy From Almost Impregnable Positions Before Kermanshah

PETROGRAD, Via London, Feb. 28.—An official despatch from Teheran says:

"After a series of battles in Persia the remains of the adversary troops were reorganized and concentrated in the region of Kermanshah and, with the help of German and Turkish sappers, occupied and fortified two mountain passes—Bidesurks Pass, an almost impregnable natural position, and Sakha Pass. News has now been received that our troops dislodged the enemy from Biresurks Pass and occupied Sakhae Pass and are now pursuing the Turks, who are in full retreat toward Kermanshah. Our forces captured three field guns, one mountain gun, a quantity of shells, ammunition, wagons and field machine guns."

The Russian success in the region of Kermanshah is a sequel to a series of strategic Russian operations in Persia, with the purpose of putting an end to the activities of hostile mountain forces and organized bands of Kurds.

Russian progress in Persia, however, is regarded here as of more than local significance, indicating greater possibility of a junction of the Russians with the British expeditionary forces in Mesopotamia. On that account the fortunes of the British forces are watched here with great interest.

After the retreat from Hamadan all hostile forces which succeeded in escaping were concentrated in the Kermanshah district. Taking advantage of the strong defensive nature of this region, they fortified themselves in the mountain passes and prepared to resist strongly any Russian attempt to drive them further. Simultaneous frontal and flank attacks by the Russians, however, already have forced the Turks to make a partial retirement, and they now are occupying the main approaches to the difficult position of Kermanshah. The Russian troops are expected to make a determined effort to expel the Turks from this entire neighbourhood.

Although little news is available from the Erzerum front it is apparent that, having been forced back some forty miles to the west of the captured fortress, the Turks, who have begun to receive reinforcements, are beginning to make a stubborn stand. It is not considered impossible here that the serious fighting which already has begun to take the place of the desultory rearguard actions will develop into a big battle.

Verdun Outer Defences Are Still in the Hands of the French Armies

Experts Say Further Advance is Improbable---Joffre Has Situation Well in Hand

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Last night's despatches indicate that Verdun's outer defences are still in the hands of the French, and experts here say a further German advance is improbable. French armies in new lines are enfilading the Germans across the Meuse River, creating terrible havoc among the Teutons, who, it is expected, will have to give up some of their new positions. Joffre has the situation well in hand, and every confidence is expressed here that he will outmaster the Crown Prince.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—The position captured on Saturday morning by the Germans, "Fort Douaumont," has been recaptured by the French troops, and have advanced beyond that point and have resisted all attempts to drive them back. In the Champagne all attacks were repulsed. Nine of our bombing aeroplanes dropped 144 shells on Metz.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The P. and O. liner Matoja, 12,431 tons, has been sunk off Dover. The people are now being picked up by rescue boats. Also two more British steamers have been sunk.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 28.—(Russian official).—The Russians captured 253 officers, 12,753 men and 323 guns in the operations about Erzerum. We have occupied the village of Aschkata, 50 miles west of Erzerum.

ROME, Feb. 28.—An official statement says that the Italian troops have left Durazzo, the capital of Albania.

LONDON, Feb. 28. — Miss Nellie Best, secretary, Anti-Conscriptionist League, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment for circulating literature inciting men not to enlist.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Despatches from Dover say that twenty-five bodies from the steamer Matoja have been landed. The passengers numbered about 150.

LONDON, Feb. 28. — The British steamship, Empress of Fort William, in attempting the rescue of the survivors of the Matoja, also struck a mine and sank.

BERLIN, Feb. 28.—Yesterday's German official statement claims that the French attempts to recapture Fort Douamont have been repulsed, and claims the capture of the French towns of Champ Neuville and Hardamont.

ROUMANIA SELLS MORE GRAIN

Enters Upon a Second Contract with Teuton Syndicate.

MILAN, Feb. 28.— The Bucharest correspondent of the Segolo says that the second contract for 100,000 carloads of corn, oats, barley, and other cereals has been agreed upon between the Austro-German syndicate and Rumania and that it only remains to arrange the method of payment. It is said that the Austro-Germans have agreed to deposit half the sum involved in the National Bank of Bucharest. The delivery of 50,000 carloads of the first contract will be made a month earlier than was expected, as the Danube has not frozen over this year.

The correspondent adds that the Austro-Germans have also undertaken to purchase any surplus left over from the 1915 corn crop above the 100,000 carloads mentioned, and after Rumania's own needs are supplied. Other contracts, he says, finally have been entered into, including one for a purchase of locomotives in Germany. A special committee is to draw up a list of articles needed by Rumania, which will be exchanged for articles needed by Austria and Germany.

Since February, 1915, conflicting reports have been received regarding contracts between purchasing committees of the Central Empires and of Great Britain and committees of Rumanian exporters for the purchase of considerable quantities of grain. The only definite statements made were that British representatives had purchased 80,000 carloads of grain and Germans 160,000. The Bucharest correspondent of The London Times said on February 21 last that the Rumanian Government had asked Parliament to pass a law prohibiting the exportation of all cereals but that such law if voted would not affect the contracts just mentioned with Great Britain and Germany.

The city of Dresden has bought 12,000 hogs in Serbia, and arrangements have been made by other German cities to obtain a similar number. It is believed this will relieve to some extent the famine in lard.

WILL COBOURG CHANGE ITS NAME?

Councillor Semple, at the meeting of the Council this week, thought a question paramount in the minds of all people was the changing of the names of all towns with German names. Cobourg has a German name. In 1818 Augusta Charlotte, daughter of George IB., married the Duke of Saxe-Cobourg, and in 1819, the year of Queen Victoria's birth the place was called Cobourg. Berlin's name is to be changed to Manchester, and he thought the name of this town should be changed.

Coun. Denton—"The German word Cobourg has no "u" in it. Add an "h" at the end of it and make it purely English.

Sergt. "Bones" Atchison, who was an interested onlooker, took exception to Coun. Semple's remarks. He said he had fought for the old town of Cobourg and received fourteen wounds for it, and would not stand for any change in the name of the old town. "Bones'" dramatic entrance on the scene kind of broke up this quiet humdrum meeting, and in the midst of his eloquent appeal to al lthe town to keep its name, the Council adjourned.—Cobourg World.

KAISER STIRS UP NAVY?

He Has Paid a Visit to Two Chief Bases.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—An extraordinarily sharp lookout is being maintained by Great Britain's naval forces in anticipation of a dash to sea of the German fleet. A despatch from Berlin states that the Kaiser was at Wilhelmshaven on Wednesday and supplementary advices from Amsterdam add that he went from Wilhelmshaven to Kiel.

Following receipt of these reports it was recalled that the German fleet has always shown considerable activity after previous visits from the Kaiser, and it was thought that while the Crown Prince's army was assailing Verdun, the grand fleet of Germany might attempt to gain a victory in the North Sea.

EIGHTY MORE TEUTONIC SHIPS TO BE TAKEN

LISBON, via Paris, Feb. 28.—The Official Gazette publishes two decrees regarding the thirty-six German and Austrian merchant vessels seized yesterday in the Tagus River and placed under the Portuguese flag. The first indicates the work of refitting to be performed in order to adapt these vessels for the transport and other purposes for which they have been requisitioned, as it is distinctly given to be understood that they have not been confiscated. The second decree appoints a committee to supervise the execution of the work indicated.

Portuguese newspapers say that in other ports of the republic there are eighty German and Austrian vessels, which, it is understood, also will be requisitioned by the government. The total tonnage of the Teutonic ships exceeds 150,000.

Money For All In Ireland Now

DUBLIN, Feb. 24—There never was so much money in Ireland as there is at present. The general prosperity of the country was the theme of the speeches of the chairmen of all the leading banks which have just held their semi-annual meetings. The banks all maintained their dividends, all showed increased profits and applied these profits to wiping out the depreciation which occurred before the war on the securities they held. Most of the securities now have been written down to their present marked values though many of them in war loans are payable at par at a fixed period.

Roughly, it may be said that though £10,000,000 ($50,000,000) was subscribed in Ireland to war loans there is as much money in the banks as ever. So well off are they that an absurd rumour was started that the government intended to commandeer the money in them. This rumour apparently was believed and was cited by the chairman of the National Bank as an explanation of a drop of £200,000 ($1,000,000) in deposits, though the same bank had an increase of money on current account of £137,000 ($685,000).

Several of the Irish banks have authority under an act of Parliament passed in 1845 to issue notes, and at the beginning of the war the crisis which had to be met in England by the issue of one pound treasury notes did not exist in Ireland, where the one pound note is an established feature of the currency. But as the act provides that money shall be held as cover against all notes issued in excess of the amounts scheduled in the act, and as there has been a great increase in the volume of business transacted in connection with the war and at the same time a contraction of the gold supply the banks have issued notes greatly in excess of the figures provided in the act.

To cover these they accordingly have had to lock up a great deal of idle money. In the case of the National Bank, the chairman announced that while the authorized amount of bank note issue was £850,000 ($4,250,000), they have issued £1,800,000 ($9,000,000) beyond that figure. Suggestions have been made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer for the setting free of the money held as cover on certain conditions. But he has not so far felt himself able to agree to the proposal.

The secret of the strong position of the Irish banks is the fact that Ireland mainly is an agricultural country and that owing to the war agriculture is a booming industry. The last year has been a very prosperous one for the farmers. Report from all parts of Ireland show the last harvest was very good and indicate at least a repitition of it this year. There is an ample supply of hay and roots for winter feeding of cattle, and in most cases the farmers are said to have all they need in the way of cattle, as was feared would not be the case when at the beginning of the war the high prices induced exceptionally heavy sales.

New Books on Sale

Doctor Curry, a famous Boston educator, has recently written two books which are attracting considerable attention throughout the North American continent. They are "The Smile" and "How to Add Ten Years to Your Life." These books tell about an advance in education in an interesting way. They are of interest to every one, as they unfold the secrets of health and happiness.

Doctor Curry claims that it is worth a great deal to a person to be able to smile. By that he means to develop the mind so that you can enjoy the good things of life, and also be able to meet difficulties, rise above them, and be happy in spite of them.

The other volume "How to Add Ten Years to Your Life" is also the result of Doctor Curry's observation and experience. The following is his personal testimony. "I was never what is called physically strong; in fact, physicians have continually prophesied my downfall; yet all my life I have performed about three men's work, and by the use of a few exercises, have probably doubled the length of my life.

COULD NOT BEND DOWN

COULD NOT WALK STRAIGHT

BACK WAS SO BAD.

The bad back comes from the kidneys and unless the kidneys are carefully watched and properly regulated many serious troubles may follow.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure the kidneys so that they will stay cured.

Mr. J. A. Lubiniecki, Dauphin, Man., writes: "It is my pleasure to write you in regard to Doan's Kidney Pills which I have been using for some time for kidney trouble, which used to affect my back so that at times I could not bend down nor could I walk straight. I learned about your pills from your almanac, and I bless the happy hour I thought of buying this medicine. One time a druggist persuaded me to buy ——'s Kidney Pills, saying they were just as good, in fact he guaranteed they were. I yielded to his advice, and what was the result? I had bearing down pains in my back for two days, so I took the balance of the pills unused to the druggist and told him to give me Doan's Kidney Pills as they would stop the pain in twelve hours at the outside. He told me he was sorry I did not use more of the pills, and lengthen the time to await results. I told him there was no need of waiting with Doan's Pills; they go right to the spot. No substitute for me."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is printed on both the table and wrapper.

"Doan's" are manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

Perhaps once during the hour—perhaps not once in a year—some monstrous wave would roar in from the Atlantic, seeking to devour every small craft in its path. No one can account for these phenomena. They may arise from lunar influence, or from some peculiar action of the tides; but that they occur, and with disastrous results if unheeded, every fisherman from Stornoway to Cadiz will testify. Their size and fury are more marked in a south-westerly gale than at any other time, and the only safe manoeuvre for a boat sailing across the wind is to bring her sharply head on to the fast-moving ridge, and ride over it. Yvonne knew of these occasional sea dragons, but had never seen one. She knew what to do too, and for an instan was vexed with Peridot. He read her thought.

"I'd trust my own life to you, Ma'mselle," he said gallantly; "but I'd never forgive myself if anything happened to you."

She smiled in spite of her pique. To make her voice heard without screaming, she put her lips close to his ear. "This time, if anybody goes, we all go," she cried.

He shook his head. "No, no, Ma'mselle. The sea will never get me," he said. "Hold tight here. This is the bar."

Certainly, even among experienced yachtsmen, there would not be lacking those who might have regarded the Mirondelle's present voyage as a piece of folly. There is no wilder coast in Europe than the barrier of shaggy rock that France opposes to the ocean from St. Malo to Biarritz. At Finistere, in particular, each headland is not a breakwater, but a ruin. During heavy storms the seas dash in frenzy up a hundred feet of shattered cliff, the Atlantic having smashed and overthrown every sheer wall of rock ages ago.

Of course the adventurers were not facing a Np. 8 gale. That, indeed, would have been rank lunacy. But the estuaries of the Aven and the Belon, joining at Port Manech, were sending down no inconsiderable volume of water to meet a strong wind and the opposing forces were waging bitter war. A mile farther on a channel ran between the mainland and a group of rocks called Les Verres. There the tide and wind would not be so greatly at variance, and the partly submerged reef would lessen the force of the sea; though the only signs of its existence were a patch of high-flung spray and a small tower, with a black buoy at its easterly extremity. This was what Peridot had called the "inside passage." To the landsman it was a figure of speech. To the sailor it meant seas diminished to half their volume as compared with the "dirt" outside.

The Mirondelle raced through the turmoil at the bar as though she enjoyed it, and, once the islets were to windward, the journey became exhilarating. None of the four people on board displayed the least concern. Indeed, they reveled in the excursion. When their craft swept into the sheltered cove at Le Pouldu not without a tossing on another bar, and was brought up alongside the small quay, their flushed faces and shining eyes showed that they looked on the outing as a thoroughly enjoyable one.

They were ready for an early luncheon, too, and did full justice to the menu. Afterward, while Ingersoll planned his picture, Yvonne and Tollemache strolled along the right bank of the Laita to the hamlet of Le Pouldu.

The girl told her companion of the singular coincidence that brought her father as unexpected commission by that morning's post; but Tollemache pooh-poohed it.

"You're becoming almost as superstitious as these Bretons," he said. "It's high time your father took you to New York for a spell. Spooks can't live there since the automobile came along. They don't like the fumes of petrol, I fancy. But these silly Bretons appeal to a saint of dread a devil for every little thing. One stained-glass proposition can cure rheumatism in a man and another spavin in a horse. It's unlucky to gather and eat blackberries because the Crown of Thorns was made out of brambles. You can shoot a wretched tomtit; but you mustn't touch a magpie. If you want to marry a girl, you pray to Saint This; if you're anxious to shunt her, you go on your marrow-bones to Saint That. I'm fond of Brittany and its folk; but I can't stomach their legends. Look at that pin-dropping business at Sainte Barbe's well! Poor Madeleine couldn't get a pin home to save her life; whereas everybody knows that she and Peridot will make a match of it before this time next year."

Yvonne did not like to hear her friends' amiable weaknesses exposed thus ruthlessly. "If Homer nods, a poor girl who has watched ever so many love affairs since A.D. 235 may surely be forgiven an occasional mistake," she said.

"Has she been at it so long? What is the yarn?"

"Please don't speak so disrespectfully of Saint Barbara. Because she wanted to marry someone whom her father didn't approve of he imprisoned her in a tower, and when she was converted to Christianity beheaded her."

"The old rascal! Did the other fellow—the one she liked—climb the tower? Perhaps that accounts for the rings."

"It is possible. I have no doubt men were just as foolish seventeen centuries ago as they are to-day."

"Thanks. That personal touch helps a lot. But, supposing I asked your father to sanction——"

"If you will apply the moral, I must remind you that I am to refuse my first offer. But don't let us talk nonsense. It is time we made for the harbour."

"Crushed again!" murmured Tollemache, assuming an air of blithe indifference. He was only partly successful. Stealing a glance at Yvonne he noted her heightened colour and a curiously defiant glint in her blue eyes. Unconsciously she quickened her pace too, and Tollemache interpreted these outward and visible tokens of displeasure as hostile to the notion that had sprung into thrilling life in his mind that day at Le Faouet, when he peered down into Yvonne's agonized face when he was clinging like a fly to the wall of the tower.

"She regards me as a silly ass," he communed bitterly, "and not without good cause. What place do I fill in the world, anyhow? God created me a live-wire American, and the devil egged me on to spoil clean canvas. I'm little better than a hobo and she knows it. Well, I'll swallow my medicine.

"I say, Kiddie," he cried aloud, "you needn't go off in a huff just because I was talking through my hat. Wait till I light a cigarette."

Though he was not sure that the bantering protest had deceived her, she pretended that it had; so the object aimed at was achieved. But Tollemache was of the tough fiber that regards no sacrifice as worth while unless it is complete.

"If you knew the facts, Yvonne, you'd never get made with me when I talk about marrying anybody," he went on. "Why do I live in Pont Aven all the year round? Because it's cheap. Last year I earned three hundred and twenty francs for three pictures. At that rate of progress any girl who married me would jolly soon starve."

Yvonne remembered the famous three. Two were portraits of the oleograph order, in which Tollemache had shamelessly flattered his sitters. For these he received the three hundred francs. The twenty were paid for a sketch of a new villa which the builder wished to send to his mother in-law! Still, she allowed herself to be surprised.

"Of course I knew you were only joking, Lorry," she said. "And while we are on the subject, I may as well tell you that I shall never leave my father. What you say about your means is rather astonishing, for all that. How can you possibly hire autos and live as you do?"

"Oh, I don't," he explained, with a sudden grimness of tone that she had never heard before. "My father pays all my bills,—living expenses, tailors, and that sort of thing, you know. The moment I marry without his approval I revert to my pocket-money allowance."

The girl knew they were trenching again on a dangerous topic. She was so exquisitely sensitive that she felt the imminence of some avowal that it would be better, perhaps, not to hear.

"What does money matter if we are happy?" she cried cheerfully. "And our small community in Pont Aven is a very united and pleasant one, don't you think?"

"Top notch," said he. "There's Ingersoll, coming down from the front. Bet you fifty centimes he has washed in a little gem—something I couldn't touch if I tried every day for ten years!"

"Dad is really very clever," agreed Yvonne, momentarily deaf to the irony of the words. "I often wonder why he has remained in our village eighteen years. People say he would soon find a place in Paris or New York. Sometimes I fancy that my mother's death must have distressed him beyond measure. He never speaks of her, even to me. Perhaps he can't bear to revive sad memories."

"I can understand that," said Tollemache. "I believe I should go dotty if married to a woman I really loved, and I lost her."

Yvonne darted into a shop to buy caramels. She had to escape somehow. When she emerged one side of her face was bulging, and she held out a cardboard box.

"Take one," she gurgled. Not yet twenty, she was sufficient of a woman to play a part when it suited her. By the time the two had joined Ingersoll they were boy and girl again, and the curtain, lifted for an instant on a tragedy, had fallen.

Tollemache, searching for some commonplace remark to relieve the tension of his own feelings, noticed the drift of smoke curling from a cottage chimney.

"What has happened to the wind?" he said.

"It has veered to the south-east, Monsieur," answered Peridot.

"I thought something of the sort had taken place, but was so busy that I did not pay any heed," said Ingersoll. Then his forehead wrinkled reflectively. "South-east from south-west," he muttered. "On a rising tide that change should kick up a nasty sea. Is the return trip quite safe, Peridot?"

"The sea will be a trifle worse, Monsieur; but we'll travel on an even keel."

"And be swept by an occasional wave from stem to stern?"

"I've heard of such things," grinned Peridot.

EXTREME WEAKNESS AND SUFFERING

Read How Mrs. Goodling got Relief and Strength.

York, Pa.—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and found it to be all you say it is. I was so sick that I could not stand at my sink to wash dishes and I could not sit without a pillow under me. I had the doctor every few days but since I have taken the Compound I don't have to send for him. I have had three children and could not raise any of them, but since I have taken the Compound I have a bright baby boy. I advise every suffering woman to try it and get relief. It has done wonders for me."—Mrs. CATHARINE GOODLING, 128 E. King Street, York, Pa.

When a medicine has been successful in bringing health to so many, no woman has a right to say without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." There must be more than a hundred thousand women in this country who, like Mrs. Goodling, have proven what wonders Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can do for weak and ailing women. Try it and see for yourself.

If there are any complications you don't understand, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss, and Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

PSEUDO-APOSTLES OF THE PRESENT DAY

Church History in the Light of the Bible.

Only Twelve Apostles of the Lamb'—Scriptures Show That No More Were Purposed by God—St. Paul Superseded Judas—Catholics and Episcopalians Deceived—Apostolic Bishops Unauthorized—How This Great Error Was Foisted Upon the Church—1,200 Years Without the Bible—The Reformation Movement—Bible Gradually Restored, but Entrenched Errors Still Hold Many—So-called Christian Kingdoms Now Showing Their True Character—Great Time of Trouble Now Begun to Make Way for Christ's Kingdom.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Feb. 27.—Pastor Russell was here to-day, and delivered a very forceful address, from the text, "And thou hast tried them that say they are Apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars." (Revelation 2:2.) The Pastor said in part:

There has been a class of men in the world for centuries past who have been claiming to be Apostles; but who are not Apostles, according to our text. The Bible shows us unmistakably that God never purposed more than twelve Apostles of the Lamb. Let us refresh our memories on this point: Our Lord Jesus said to The Twelve, "Verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the Throne of His glory, shall also sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." (Matthew 19:28.) There were to be only twelve Apostolic thrones, no more. Again, in Revelation 12:1, the Church is shown as a woman clothed with the sun [the Gospel], having the moon [the Jewish Law] under her feet, and having on her head a crown of twelve stars [her Divinely appointed, inspired teachers]. We see that there were only twelve of these stars authorized by God, St. Paul taking the place of Judas.

We remind you of another picture of this matter, given by our Lord Jesus to John the Revelator. In Revelation 21:1-5, 9-27, the glorified Church is pictured as coming down from Heaven to begin her great work of blessing the world. Now note particularly that this glorified Church is shown as having twelve foundations, and in them the names of the Twelve Apostles of the Lamb.

So we see, dear friends, that it is through some very serious blunder that our Roman Catholic, Greek Catholic, and Church of England friends have Bishops claiming to be Apostles.

God's Word Must Be Spoken Faithfully.

Jesus says that those who make claims of being Apostles when they are not are lying. We are not to follow what the customs of the past centuries have taught us, but what the Lord Jesus Himself says. He is the authority. We have a measure of sympathy for these gentlemen who have dropped into certain positions and have been taught for centuries that they were Apostles, like the original Twelve appointed by our Lord, having the same inspiration and speaking with the same authority. We have sympathy for them in that they are sadly deluded, but we should remember what Jesus said and take the right viewpoint. "Thou hast tried them which say they are Apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars." We are not speaking uncharitably, dear friends; for we are to speak the Lord's Word. "He that hath a dream [an imagination], let him tell a dream; but he that hath My Word, let him speak My Word faithfully." (Jeremiah 23:28.) If we hold back for fear of man, we shall share in the sin.

The great claims once made have been discarded, or at least this class do not attempt to speak with the authority of former days; for mankind are becoming more enlightened and their claims would appear absurd. Yet they still claim that they are the only ones who have the right to authorise any to preach, that if they do not ordain a man, he has no right to speak in the name of the Lord at all. They claim this right because they are "Apostolic Bishops." They are, however, not pressing even this claim with the former vigor. Other church leaders inquire: "Why do you stand aloof from us!" and they do not quite like to tell fully their reasons. They hesitate to say, "We are the Church; we are the Apostles; and you have no right to preach unless we ordain you." Hence they are in a somewhat vacillating condition to-day.

About four years ago the Bishops of the Episcopal Church held a meeting in Detroit, and there passed resolutions that they would be willing to fraternize with other denominations provided these others were orthodox, which meant, provided they were in harmony with the teachings of the Church of England Bishops. Anybody else would be unorthodox, would have no right to preach.

These claims of Apostolic Sucression in the past got the Church into trouble and confusion from which we have not yet recovered. The great mass of Christian people are still bewildered. Beginning some time before the year 325 A.D., this doctrine of Apostolic Succession had been growing. The bishops were beginning to "lord it over God's heritage." This lording came in very gradually, as such things generally do, and was associated later with the declaration that the people were the "laity," and that the Church was the "clergy." All had the general thought that the Bishops were Apostles and had their authority from the Lord.

We are to remember that until a few centuries ago copies of the Bible were so scarce that a Bible was really worth a fortune, because Bibles had to be printed out by pen by scholars, of whom there were very few. They had to be printed upon fine vellum parchment, as printing-presses and paper were not then invented. Hence there were very few who had Bibles or who could read at that time. Under such conditions the people were dependent upon the Church Bishops. When these began to claim that they were Apostolic Bishops, they gave the people to understand that they alone had received authority from God to read and interpret the Scriptures.

Jesus said to the Twelve Apostles that whatsoever they should bind on earth should be bound in Heaven, and that whatsoever they should loose on earth should be so considered in Heaven. Their writings were especially supervised by the Lord and their doctrinal utterances inspired. (2 Corinthians 12:7; Galatians 1:11, 12.) St. Paul assures us that "the Word of God is sufficient, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good work." (2 Timothy 3:16, 17.) Hence we need no further doctrinal utterances, no more Apostles than the original Twelve—the Apostle Paul by the Lord's choice taking Judas' place. Since the advent of printing and since the close of the 1260 symbolic days—1260 years—of Papal persecution, Bibles have been printed and scattered far and wide by Bible societies, and education has become general. To-day Bibles are everywhere and very cheap, so that all can read.

Origin of the Nicene Creed.

Let us go back to the year 325 A.D. By that time the bishops in the Church were claiming Apostolic authority. They were the living Apostles, whose teachings were the voice of God. But these "Apostles" did not agree among themselves, as did the early Apostles, the real Apostles; for when we read the writings of the Apostles appointed by our Lord we find that they all agree. But in the year 325 A.D. a positive stand was taken as to belief. The Council of Nicea was called by Emperor Constantine. He was apparently a worldly-wise man, and thought he could make a good stroke of policy by joining in with the Christians, who were coming to the front.

The Emperor was not baptized until the day of his death. He openly professed Christianity for policy's sake. While we cannot judge his heart, still the policy idea was there surely, as evidenced all through the matter. In this year 325, he sent out a call throughout the Empire to the Bishops of the churches to come to the city of Nicea for a general convention, offering to pay all expenses. About 254 Bishops came together—far from the entire number. This conference was the first of what was called an Ecumenical Church Council, aside from one held at Jerusalem by the Apostles of Jesus themselves. This was claimed to be another meeting of Apostles. The Emperor, supposing that the Bishops were fully authorized, as they professed, made substantially the following proposition to them:

You all claim to be Apostles, but you have different theories and dissentions among you. There seems to be something wrong. I will suggest what will set you all straight: I propose that in this Council you set forth your views as to what is correct, orthodox doctrine. Agree amongst yourselves as to what is this doctrine, and hereafter whatever shall be taught contrary to these doctrines shall be heterodox—heresy. Further, I have decided to unite with your Church. I want your support, and you need my support. When you get my support, the pagan peoples will flock into your Church by hordes. I will back you up in your teachings, and all heretics shall have a hard time in the Roman Empire. You make the Creed and declare what is Orthodoxy, and then leave its enforcement to me. I will attend to the heretics in this life, and you can tell them of their eternal roastings throughout the future.

Thus the Nicene Creed, the first of the great creeds, was formulated—by these self-appointed Apostolic Bishops. So between the Bishops and the Emperor a heavy hand was laid upon the people. Being uneducated, the Church leaders had them largely at their mercy. That was the end of Bible study; there was no more use for the Bible.—They were to follow the Nicene Creed. They had Apostles inspired by God right with them, who could teach them all they needed to know.

Bible Restored After 1,200 Years.

From that time on for twelve hundred years the Bible was an unknown Book to the masses. In the year 1526, Professor Tyndale, a scholarly Christian man, not satisfied with the teachings of the Church Bishops, translated the Greek New Testament into English, that the people might know what were the teachings of Jesus and His Apostles. He was compelled to go to Germany to get his translation printed (printing-presses then being in use), because of the adverse influence of the English Bishops. The Testaments were then imported to London. The people were anxious to get them. It was proposed that Bible classes be started and educated men employed to read to the people.

What did the Bishops then do? They heard about the movement, and they bought up the entire edition and burned the books in front of St. Paul's Cathedral. The spot is marked to this day. And these were Protestant Bishops of the Church of England! They were worldly-wise men and knew what would be the effect if the people learned of the real teachings of the Bible. Their own power and influence would soon be gone. The people would soon be asking uncomfortable questions: "Where did you Bishops get your authority to make creeds and to call yourselves Apostles?" So the Bishops shrewly determined to nip this matter in the bud. Tyndale later suffered martyrdom.

For forty years the people complained, wondering why the Bible had been taken from them. Finally the Bishops concluded that policy demanded that they let them have the Bible. So they got out a special edition, which they called "The Bishops' Bible." This they gave to the people, warning them of the danger of giving it any other interpretation than that given by the Bishops, assuring them that eternal torment awaited them otherwise. The Catholic Bishops were then practically forced to do likewise, and they issued the Douay Version for Catholics, giving their people the same warnings. Thus the influence of the Bible was largely nullified.

But the Bible could not be fully put down. Later, the entire Scriptures were translated into the various tongues of the people. After the beginning of the Nineteenth Century education began to be much more general, and Bible Societies sprang up. People began to read for themselves as never before. Since then superstition has been gradually breaking down, and people dare to think. Some are still fettered by superstition, but the number is lessening. These creeds are so absurd that no intelligent minister, we believe, would think of defending the creed of his own denomination.

Instead of reading the Bible in the light of the creeds, we are to read the creeds in the light of the Bible. Then their absurdity is at once apparent. They have been a sore bondage upon God's people. But all this will be overruled of the Lord for good. It will teach a never-to-be-forgotten lesson.

It is the teaching of the Roman Catholic Church that all of their own people are to go to Purgatory at death. No Catholic expects to go to Heaven. They must first have certain experiences in Purgatorial tortures to fit them for Heaven.

How much trouble all this nonsense has caused! The Bible foretold it all. The Apostle Paul declared that "many would depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." (1 Timothy 4:1-3; Acts 20:29,30.) It is upon these seducing spirits that we lay the blame—Satan and his fallen angels. We are not claiming that our Catholic and Episcopalian friends have intended to perpetrate a fraud, nor any of the others. But with the Apostle Paul we claim that they were deceived by the great Adversary. We are beginning to see that a God of Love would never have such a Plan for His creatures as is taught by the creeds. We are living in a day when more light than ever before is due upon God's Word. We are living at the dawning of the glorious New Dispensation. We are nearing the time when, according to the Bible, "all the blind eyes shall be opened and the deaf ears unstopped." Let us thank God!

Armageddon Near—God's Kingdom to Follow.

The present great war in Europe is the beginning of the Armageddon of the Scriptures. (Revelation 16:16-20.) It will eventuate in the complete overthrow of all the systems of error which have so long oppressed the people of God and deluded the world. All iniquity of every kind will go down. The glorious Kingdom of Messiah is about to be set up in the earth, for the deliverance of the world and the establishment of permanent righteousness. We believe the present war cannot last much longer until revolution shall break out. The nations are rapidly impoverishing themselves.

Great Britain has already expended thirteen billions of dollars in the war, and her minister of finance says that another year of war will require nine billions more. That will make twenty-two billions. At 5 per cent. interest, this would mean that one billion, two hundred millions would have to be raised each year by the British people just to keep the interest paid, to pay nothing of the principal. Do you think they can afford to pay such an amount? Not at all! We believe that all those bonds will be repudiated. The same is true of France and Russia. Germany is impoverishing herself. All these governments are madly attempting to embargo future generations. All are saying, "We must conquer!" Well, we shall see how it will all end! We stake our opinion on the Bible. All these nations will soon pass away. There will not be a kingdom left in all Europe. Then Anarchy will follow.

None of these nations is Christian, as their course unmistakably shows. Every one has violated international law. They are willing to barter away millions of lives of their people for the paltry gain of a little more territory and commercial benefit. Selfishness is rampant. If violation of law is anarchy, then we already have anarchy amongst the nations.

How thankful we are that while this awful trouble must come, because of man's sin and selfishness, yet the Word of God points out that upon the ruins of the present Order shall come the Kingdom of God's dear Son! Man's extremity will be God's opportunity. The voice of Messiah shall be heard. He will command, "Peace, be still!" and the raging billows of human passion will be calmed, and all tumult will cease. He will bring order out of chaos. When men have reached the point of despair deliverance will come; for then they will begin to cry to the Lord. And He will be entreated of them and will help them. God's Kingdom will assume full control of the affairs of the world, and will prove to be "the desire of all nations."

Had No Ambition To Do Her Housework.

System Was All Run Down.

Mrs. Herbert Doherty, Beaver Brook, N.B., writes: "I have used some of your Burdock Blood Bitters, and found it to be a great medicine. My system was in a run down condition for over a year. I suffered with bad headache, and did not seem to have any ambition to do my housework. In the morning I could not half eat, and what I did eat did not apparently seem to do me any good. After using four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters I was an entirely different woman. I cannot recommend B.B.B. too highly to people suffering the same as I was."

The blood reaches every portion of the body to distribute nutriment, and remove effete matter and waste products, clearly then, any influence, good or bad, affecting the blood, must necessarily affect the entire system for good or evil as the case may be. To this fact is due the wonderful efficacy of Burdock Blood Bitters in removing every form of disease. It at once strikes to the root of the trouble, and quickly restores the depleted system to a condition of vigorous health.

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Most Eminent Medical Authorities Endorse It.

Dr. Eberle and Dr. Brinkerhoff as well as Dr. Simon—all distinguished authors—agree that whatever may be the disease, the urine seldom fails in furnishing us with a clue to the principles upon which it is to be treated, and accurate knowledge concerning the nature of disease can thus be obtained. If backache, scalding urine or frequent urination bother or distress you, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, gout or sciatica or you suspect kidney or bladder trouble just write Dr. Pierce at the Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N.Y.; send a sample of urine and describe symptoms. You will receive free medical advice after Dr. Pierce's chemist has examined the urine—this will be carefully done without charge, and you will be under no obligation. Dr. Pierce during many years of experimentation has discovered a new remedy which he finds is thirty-seven times more powerful than lithia in removing uric acid from the system.. If you are suffering from backache or the pains of rheumatism, go to your best druggist and ask for a 50-cent box of "Anuric" put up by Dr. Pierce. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak women and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the blood have been favorably known for the past forty years and more. They are standard remedies to-day—as well as Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets for the liver and bowels. You can get a large trial package for 10c. of any one of these remedies by writing Dr. Pierce.

Doctor Pierce's Pellets are unequaled as a Liver Pill. One tiny, Sugar-coated Pellet a Dose. Cure Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels.

IRISH FARMERS HOLD BACK

They Are the Ones Who Do Not Join the Colours.

DUBLIN, Feb. 28.—Irish recruiting is proceeding in accordance with the expectations of the military authorities. It received a great fillip from the visit to Galway of the Lord-Lieutenant and John Redmond. The scenes in the Galway streets exceeded in the number of the crowds and the enthusiasm of the welcome anything previously experienced in the same city at purely Nationalist demonstrations.

The main difficulty about Irish recruiting is the reluctance of the farmers to enlist. The trouble was also found in England and indeed in all countries the man on the farm is the most reluctant fighter. There has been a good deal of argument in Ireland as to the respective contributions of Unionists and Nationalists, and some bandying of criticisms in the party newspapers of each side. But the real line of distinction is between town and country. In all parts of Ireland the townsmen have joined in large numbers in proportion to the population. In no part of Ireland have the farmers done anything like so well.

Lord Wimborne noted that at least twenty Irish towns claim to be at the top of the list in the proportion of men recruiting, and that Ballina challenges Belfast. In some small towns the average has been higher than in England. Mr. Redmond did not mince his words in his appeal to the farmers to come forward. He believed that they would have most to lost from a defeat in the war, and he told them that if they would not fight for their land and left the townsmen to do the fighting for them, their position was contemptible. There has been much improvement in the way of approaching the people with recruiting appeals, and so far the result has been admittedly satisfactory. But eleven hundred men a week we learn are wanted, and that effort to keep up the supply will be steadily maintained.

Storiettes.

Alfred Austin's ignorance of the fact that the word 'Byre' means 'cow-house' led him into an amusing blunder. One of the verses of his poems, "To arms!" runs:

From English hamlets, Irish hills,
Welsh hearths and Scottish byres,
They throng to show that they are still Sons worthy of their sires.

"Mr. Austin may be informed," wrote a Scottish critic, "that sons of sires that pass from byres are found oftener in English cattle-shows than in foreign battlefields. The poetic license is great, but it does not cover slander."—London Chronicle.

"HE IS ALWAYS TELLING OTHERS ABOUT THEM"

Brother and Sister Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills—News of Cure Too Good to Keep.

In this letter Mrs. Hurley relates how glad she and her brother are to tell how they were cured of indigestion and kidney trouble by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

That is the kind of enthusiasm Dr. Chase's medicines arouse and that is why they are so generally known and used today. People who are cured tell their friends and neighbours, and so the word is passed along.

From the limits of Dr. Chase's practice at Ann Arbor, Mich., the good news of these medicines travelled until they are known the world over and considered indispensable in many thousands of homes.

This is the kind of letters we are receiving daily and there can be no mistaking the enthusiasm expressed here:

Mrs. J. J. Hurley, Upper Hanwell, York Co., N.B., writes: "I suffered from indigestion for two years, and tried a great many kinds of medicine, but got no lasting relief until I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I would take severe vomiting spells and be weakened down so that I could not do my own work. I shall never be able to give the medicine enough praise for the benefit derived from its use, and will strongly recommend it to all my friends.

"My brother has also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and they have entirely cured him of lame back and kindney trouble. He is always telling others about them."

Dr. E. L. Brine writes: "I can certify that this statement of Mrs. J. J. Hurley is correct in all details."

Chronic indigestion is almost invariably associated with torpid, sluggish action of the liver, kidneys and bowels, and can never be really cured until these organs are awakened to healthful action by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose 25 cts. a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

DRUGGING HER HUSBAND

Montreal Woman Under Arrest at Cambridge.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 28.—Charged with the delivery of drugs to her husband, an alleged diamond thief of Montreal, who has been held in the East Cambridge jail for the last two weeks, Mrs. Louis Marion was arrested to-night as she was bringing the prisoners supper from a nearby restaurant. Jail officials said that the state board of health had reported the presence of drugs in substances found in the meals intended for Marion.

Marion was arrested February 2 for the police of Montreal charged with thefts of diamonds from Mappin, Webb & Co., of that city.

THE BELGIAN COAST UNDER GERMAN RULE

Spirit of the Conquered Population Which Waits For Deliverance

BY A. HANS

(Belgian Correspondent in Sluis of the Amsterdam Telegraaf.)

SLUIS, Holland, Feb. 20. — Otto Gotberg, the German writer who glorifies war as the supreme test of manhood and calls lovers of peace "old women afraid of hurting themselves," has published a book in which he describes the invasion of Flanders. He took an active part in this invasion, being a lieutenant in the German Army. In spite of the feelings of bitterness which the reading of this book causes to any Belgian reader, there is in it much which proves to him the utter failure of the German spirit to conquer a nation even if they have succeeded in temporarily conquering her territory. The Germans may be conquerors in the old brutal sense of the word, but they absolutely lack the psychological gifts and capacities necessary to national expansion; a gift possessed by the Romans in earlier days and which has made Britain to-day the greatest colonizer of the world.

Otto Gottberg proves this where he describes how at the head of his men he made his triumphal entry into Blankenberghe, the famous Belgian seaside town.

"Things were made very easy for us," he writes. "A mile outside the town we encountered the civil authorities, headed by the Burgomaster. They were dressed in black, their attire for solemn occasions, the tall hat on the head, and they brought us the keys of the town, making us feel like our forefathers in olden times. . . . Could we have had a more pleasant reception?" the writer asks.

Here, however, Otto Gottberg has made a great mistake. He did not realise the tragedy of the moment for those Flemish men, who in their solemn attire brought the keys of the town as he describes.

After the Fleming has been married in this "solemn attire," it is reserved for funerals of dear relatives, and it was certainly a feeling of mourning, a spirit of grief which induced these men to pay "in solemn attire" this last respect to their poor country. Certainly it was not respect for the German soldiers. The Flemings knew what the entry of German soldiers meant in a peaceful town like theirs.

"You shall not regret having made things easy for us," said the German lieutenant, as he tells in his book. And now, some months later, there is mourning and grief all along the Belgian Coast. There is misery. Children ask for bread, and only too often a mother finds it impossible to still their hunger.

A Favoured Watching Place.

Here, outside Sluis, the little Dutch town on the Belgian border, there is a hill which rises half a mile from the edge of Belgium. This is the favoured watching place of hundreds of Belgians living here. One can see them stare toward the south. They can see the huge tower of Lisseweighe, which dominates all the north of Flanders, one of the historical pillars of the country, now used by the Germans for their wireless telegaphy. Every Fleming fears that something may happen to that. They can see also in the further distance the towers of Bruges, now under German domination. Once, hundreds of years ago, called "the Venice of the North." The beautiful fields of Flanders in between lie waste now, for the men are away, and even if the golden corn of days gone by were being grown it would merely feed German soldiers.

Now and again some one manages to cross the "cable of death" which runs along the border, and then hundreds of ears are eagerly waiting for news from the beloved country. But the news is always sad; more and more requisitioning, tales of friends or even a relative sent to prison for treason, or worse even, executed. Not long ago an innkeeper from Aelter, near Bruges, was executed with five other Flemings. Here is the story as I heard it from one who knew it:

One morning the innkeeper was called to the Kommandatur, and his wife waited in vain for him for five days. On the evening of the fifth day a parcel was brought to her from the station. She opened it, and one can hardly figure her horror when she found that it contained the suit of clothes which he had worn on the day she had seen him last. There was no message at all, but the woman feared the very worst, and only two days later a good-natured Landsturmer who had made inquiries told her that her husband had been executed at Bruges for high treason.

They were a peace-loving couple, keeping their inn and waiting patiently for the deliverance of their country, and the unhappy woman thought and thought what might have been her husband's crime—till at last a light came to her. Some time before, a woman from the village had come into the inn. She was the mother of a Belgian soldier at the front and asked the innkeeper if there was any means of sending him a letter. The innkeeper said: "I am going to Bruges next Saturday to the market. Give me your letter and I will inquire." The happy mother, in her joy, told this to neighbours. It spread further and further. It came to the eager ears of the Germans, and the innkeeper of Aelter was accused of spying, found guilty, and shot. And I know that the simple man hardly knew the meaning of the word spying.

These are the tidings which reach us here from Belgium. I write only such as comes from reliable sources. Yet, wherever one goes, one witnesses things full of the tragedy of these days.

Christmas and New Year have again shown how little the Germans succeed in making friends with the Belgians. New Year is a great day in Flanders. No country is richer in traditions, almost every stone has a history. Flanders is one museum of folklore for him who has studied this wonderful land, and now that we miss our freedom, it is remarkable how everybody sticks to the old traditions with an almost pious reverence, and an anxious fear of losing them.

The "New Year's Letter."

The great feature of New Year's Day is the New Year's letter, which children read to their parents and to their godfather, for a godfather is an important person in Flanders. These New Year's letters are usually written in the schools on beautiful letter paper, headed by decorative flower wishes in a poetic style. It would be impossible to start New Year without this custom being fulfilled. This year, however, it has been very difficult. Many people in Belgium had sent their children to friends or relatives in Holland, because so many fatal accidents, caused by the electric cable, have occurred. It is hard to say how those people keep in communication with one another, yet I saw that here and there the "cable of death" did not prevent the children living in Holland from reading their New Year's letters to their parents in Belgium. I myself witnessed a most touching scene. On this (the Dutch) side of the frontier stood a child reading her New Year's letter to her parents, dressed in mourning on the other side, a few yards further away in Belgium. When the child was half-way in the reading, however, the mother burst out into tears and the child, seeing her mother cry, could not continue. A little further away stood a Landsturmer, who had witnessed the whole scene. Perhaps he thought of his own little girl far away in Germany. He came near, told the child to approach, lifted her up, and put her in her mother's arms, saying: "It can only be for a minute or so, madame."

This is one of the many features of war away from the battlefield, but cruel war all the same. In the meantime, the sound of the guns continues. We are such experienced listeners now that we can almost tell from whence it comes.

There is always a huge interest when it sounds so near that we know that British warships are bombarding Zeebrugge. Then we rush to our observation hill and witness the warships and their shells. Zeebrugge has caused the Germans much trouble lately, for the harbour is full of sand and badly serves its purpose as a submarine base. There was once great expectation in the German army that when in possession of the Belgian coast, the way to Britain would open. Now the British sea monsters close Zeebrugge, and send their shells there where they do heavy damage. And I know that nothing is more feared to-day by German soldiers here than a landing of British troops.

The Germans never fail to show the Belgians any damage done by the British fleet, hoping to arouse in them an inimical feeling against the Allies. But here also they fail to such an extent that Belgians even accuse the Germans of doing the damage themselves. Some time ago I ventured to cross the frontier as far as Knocke, relying on my papers as a Dutch journalist. There I could see with my own eyes and hear for myself what German invasion and German rules mean.

Got What Germans Leave.

The Grand Hotel, facing the sea, is now the German officers' mess. There is no misery there, but outside at dinner time there is a file of children anxious to feed themselves with what is left from the officers' table. And every day the file grows longer. That is something one never saw in Flanders in peace time.

Since allied aviators once succeeded in throwing a bomb there, where officers were gathered in war council, all military centres are now in the midst of the population. What is even more striking, the prison of Knocke is now in the top floor of the Grand Hotel—all this since aviators visited Knocke.

In these prisons of Flanders are most interesting persons: Burgomasters kept in custody as hostages for the population of their villages and their doings; priests accused of doing more than required by their religious office; old ladies who simply practised charity, but were suspected of spying, and together with them a boy of 12 who had thrown mud at a German flag, and now was elevated to the rank of prisoner!

There would be many comic sidelights if it all were not so fearfully tragic. The cure of St. George's, 60 years old, would not leave his church, and stayed there while the battle of St. George's was fought. When he saw his church collapse, and hardly escaped death, he completely lost his senses. For days afterward he rode on an old horse, his long, white hair flying in the wind, through the naked fields, shouting out to soldiers and every one that he was St. George and would kill the Beast. The soldiers, full of respect for this tragic grief, would take him into their trenches, but no friends could urge him to seek safety. One stormy day he was buried under the walls of a collapsing barn. The soldiers found his body, and gave him a funeral full of respect. This is only one of the many examples of the ravages of war in a country where the poetry of peace was the reigning atmosphere.

No Display of Hats.

It would be untrue, though, to say that there is a display of hate on the part of the Flemish population toward the German soldiers with whom they are compelled to live. The Fleming does not hate, and there are many cases of good understanding between invader and invaded. The main point is ever omitted in conversation; I mean the injustice of the very being in Belgium of the invader.

There is something sublime in the feeling of pity which the Belgians, especially the women, show toward the German soldiers. Often all of them, Germans as well as Belgians, seem to consider themselves mutual victims of a fatality far above their own will. Flemish mothers say of the German soldiers that "after all, they are a mother's children," and pity German mothers, wives, and sweethearts in the ratio of their own sorrow.

But all this reduces not in the least the Belgian sentiments of and longing for independence. It was in Bruges that a German soldier was billeted in a small house where an old man was the only occupant. They got on well together and often sat talking near the big Flemish stove. On the wall hung a picture of King Albert and one evening the German Landsturmer changed the conversation, asking, "Who is that?" while he pointed to the picture.

The old Fleming rose from his chair, took his pipe out of his mouth, raised his cap, and said, "That is our much respected King Albert." and he sat down again.

"Our King is the wisest man in the world, and he'll make things all right for this country. But then you and all your friends will have finished here." The Belgians know now, however, that they must be careful about their words, and that thinking is all they can do about certain things. Many a man has been heavily fined for saying that which did not please the "Kommandatur," and it is often true that walls have ears, as in the days of the Spanish Inquisition.

A draper in Bruges had arranged his window so that his draperies formed the Belgian colours—black, yellow, and red. The result was that he was fined 1,000 marks. He pretended not to be able to pay the fine, and he was sold up to the amount. That happened in the Rue des Pierre at Bruges.

As I repeat, I only publish those facts which reach me from reliable sources, for it is easily understood that in this country full of legends and with a people whose imagination beats all records, many extraordinary tales go round. But the naked truth, deprived of all imagination, is enough, and more than any romancer could invent. When the whole history of German domination in Belgium is told, no fiction will be required to write the most extraordinary novels.

"Making Things Easy."

"You'll never regret having made things easy for us," said the German lieutenant-writer to the civilian authorities of Blankenberghe as he writes it down himself, and yet, even to-day, small farmers have to look on when they see their last pig, their last bag of flour "requisitioned." Many had brought their cattle across the border into Holland before the "cable of death" was laid. But the Kommandatur, that all-knowing institution, soon knew, and the owners could choose between imprisonment far away in Germany and letting their cattle come back to be put at the disposition of the German authorities.

Otto Gottberg describes how he wanted to be the first German soldier to look at the North Sea from the Belgian coast. He says that he intensely enjoyed this privilege, and that he was full of pride, thinking of Britain being at the other side, easy to reach. There Otto Gottberg made another, nay, two mistakes.

He was not the first German soldier to see the North Sea from the Belgian coast. German prisoners made at Liege by the Belgians and sent to Britain, were the first to see the North Sea from the Belgian coast. And his other great mistake was that never will the Germans reach Britain. The Belgian Army keeps them busy from the south-west, and the Germans find the way across the sea barred by the British sea-monsters in front of Zeebrugge, which appear every time the Germans forget they are prisoners within their conquered harbour.

As far as Belgium is concerned, Germany makes mistake after mistake. Never will the Belgians be Germans, for it would be against nature itself. The blood of women and children is an impassable barrier between Germany and Belgium which time cannot remove, unless the spirit which made Germany what even Germans condemn disappears, the spirit that the right of the strongest is the best.

Bank Cashier Almost a Wreck—How He Regained Strength.

Peterborough people will realize that this is one more link in the wonderful chain of evidence proving that Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic has no equal to create strength.

Mr. Chas. A. Ogle, Monrovia, Md., says:

"For many years I was a school teacher, then for three years was Deputy Clerk in Frederick County, Md., and for the last three years I have been Cashier of the First National Bank. My nerves got in such a bad condition, and with poor assimilation of food, I was fast becoming a physical and mental wreck. Seeing an advertisement for Vinol I purchased a bottle, and found it to be exactly what I needed. It has not only benefited my nerves, but built me up both mentally and physically, and I want to recommend it to anyone suffering as I did."

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

This design shows us how little a name can mean, for it is certainly very far from the average idea of a shirt waist, representing rather the waist which can be worn with skirts that are either plain or dressy.

Two short tucks extend from the shoulder to the bust at each side of the front, the material expanding loosely below this point. In the back the waist is plain and there is a flat shoulder piece, which is narrow enough to be used with strap effect if desired.

The neck is quite open and at each side of the front there is a wide pointed revers, while the back of the neck is trimmed with a flare collar which has sharp points at the sides. The sleeves are plain at the shoulder and quite loose all the way to the wrist. Here they are gathered into a flat band, which, in turn, is finished with a fancy pointed cuff, shaped to harmonize with the collar.

These waists are made of all materials from the plainest of gingham and linen to the more elaborate voile, silk, net, lace, &c. The trimming may be of wash satin or of the waist material in a darker tone.

The waist pattern, No. 7,594, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 2⅝ yards of 36-inch material, with ⅝ yard of 36-inch goods to trim.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

DISORDER RULED AT HOME PLATE

Interference with a fielder by a batsman or base runner, with the object of preventing him from handling or catching the ball, has been frowned upon since the initial game of baseball was played. The first rules were of a general character, simply stating that "any player who shall intentionally prevent an adversary from catching or fielding the ball shall be declared out." By and by, distinctions were made and particular rules laid down for the guidance and obsevance of batsmen and runners, and, finally, of coachers.

There was constant friction between he batter and the catcher. The batter did not only attempt to prevent the catcher from holding the ball, but clashed with him at the home base in order to enable one of his side to score without being touched with the ball. There was more or less disorder at the home corner in every game.

These disturbances were allowed to take place with impunity until 1872, when the rule makers peremptorily ordered that "the striker is out if he wilfully strikes at the ball, either to be put out or to balk the catcher." Another clause in the rules declared the player out "who shall kick the ball when at the bat, and thereby prevent an adversary from holding or fielding such ball."

The chairman of the Rules Committee added the following instructions, a didactic way they had in the olden days: "Umpires should strictly enforce this rule, especially when batsmen violate it by standing in the way of the ball when pitched to the catcher so that it may touch them and glide off." This was all done to keep the peace between the batsman and the catcher, a consummation still unrealized at the present day.

Against the Backstop.

The catcher in a few years evidently thought that the umpire, in his interpretations of the word "wilfully," favoured the batsman against the interests of the backstop. Many other people thought so, too, and so in 1877, when the National League was a year old, the rule was made to read: "The batsman is out if he 'plainly' attempts to hinder the catcher from catching the ball evidently without effort to make a fair strike." At that time, the batter had the privilege of calling for a high, low or fair balls, and the chairman explained: "If the ball sent in is one the batsman is not in the habit of calling for, the inference is fair that he did not intend to strike at it, and a hinder can justly be declared."

This rule remained unchanged until 1892, in spite of the fact that the high, low, and fair balls were established in 1887. In 1892 the rules bound the batter more tightly, as the text will show: "The batter is out if he attempts to hinder the catcher from fielding or throwing the ball by stepping outside the lines of his position or otherwise obstructing or interfering with that player." This was the most important change the rule had undergone, and still stands on the books word for word.

In 1894, to avoid conflicting with another rule, the following words were added: "Except that the batsman shall not be out under this section if the base runner be declared out according to section 15 of rule 56." Section 15 put out the runner going home if the batsman interfered with the batsman at the plate, and so forbade a run from being counted should no one or only one be out. Without this clause it really would be putting a premium on interference at the plate.

CHURCHMEN OPPOSE 'DRYS'.

British House of Laymen Favors Moderation, Not Prohibition.

LONDON, Feb. 21—That the movement for the adoption of practical prohibition during the war, which has gained many advocates since King George set the example of total abstinence, is likely to receive little support from the Established Church, is indicated by the action of the House of Laymen at the convocation of the Archbishop of Canterbury held in London to-day.

T. G. Hughes moved a resolution to the effect that the national interests required the cessation of the use of alcohol for other than medicinal purposes. He urged, in behalf of the resolution that it would promote sobriety and thrift, which were greatly needed, and expressed regret that many of those to whom the nation should look for a lead in the matter remained silent.

Athelstan Riley, a prolific writer on religious topics, opposed the resolution. He said that drink reformers always spoiled their case by going too far. Alcohol itself, he contended, was not an evil. It was one of the "good creatures of God." It was excess in its use that constituted evil.

The resolution, in a much modified form, was adopted. It expressed merely the wish for strict moderation and self-denial in the use of intoxicating liquors.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of lime stone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds, and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

FRENCH HAVE HALTED AND BROKEN UP GERMAN OFFENSIVE AT VERDUN

Brilliant Artillery Worked With Desperate Counter Attacks By French Regained Ground Recently Lost North of Verdun---Great Onslaught Smashed Into Series of Local Engagements.

GERMANY ADMITS THE PRESENT CHECK

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, Feb. 28.—Verdun would may go down in history as the world's bloodiest battlefield. Train loads of wounded moving Parisward to-day are bringing evidence of the fearlessness of the carnage north of the French fortress. Other trains laden with fresh troops and munition supplies are hurrying eastward to fill the gaps in the French ranks. Paris is cheered by the latest advices from the War Office indicating that the French left continues to hold firmly on the Pepher Heights north of Verdun, while the centre and right deliver violent counter-attacks against the Germans eastward from the ruins of the Fort Douamont.

WHOLE REGIMENTS BOTH GERMAN AND FRENCH HAVE BEEN SWEPT AWAY

The first surgeons arriving in Paris in charge of the wounded reported that whole regiments on either side have almost desappeared. Caught under a rain of shells in the advanced trenches those who survived or escaped the first blasts but slightly wounded, were blotted out as they attempted to fall back.

"The percentage of dead will exceed that of the Champagne offensive," said one surgeon, "because there has been no real lull, no chance to withdraw the wounded under fire. There must be thirty thousand wounded men dying in awful agony in the rain and snow simply because their comrades can't get to them."

MOST INTENSE BOMBARDMENT FRENCH HAVE SUSTAINED IN THE ENTIRE WAR

All reports from the battle front agree that no cannonade comparable with that directed by the Germans has been experienced by the French since the beginning of the war. The greatest confidence prevails here. Officials assert that French munitions reserves have been accumulated for the very purpose of meeting such an attack, and that the German losses must soon cause a halt in the offensive.

French Counter Attacks Have Wrested Advantage From Enemy

Premier Briand Tells Press Representatives of Desperate Counter Offensive From Which German Recoiled—Regained Positions North of Verdun

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, Feb. 28.—Impetuous counter attacks by the French troops north of Verdun in which the Germans were thrown back from many positions conquered by them during the first four days of the battle are considered as inaugurating a second phase of great action under conditions most favourable to the defenders. Premier Briand told representatives of the press to-day how the tide was turned.

"Caught between two converging fires," said M. Briand, "covered with shrapnel from all sides, attacked by our fresh devisions surging upon the field of battle at an unexpected moment, the Germans saw their efforts stopped short. The struggle was a titanic one. Our heroic troops went into the melee frantically. Our light and heavy artillery dug sanguinary furrows in the compact ranks of the Germans. Finally exhausted, their ranks decimated, the German armies recoiled under our furious counter-attacks. We have regained the advantage. Installed upon formidable positions our heroic soldiers remained masters of the field of battle."

A GENERAL GERMAN ATTACK IN THE WEST

Kaiser Planning a Grand Assault Along the Whole Western Front—"The Real Thing at Last" Claims the Military Critic of the Times To-day

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 28.—With all the resources at his command the Kaiser is now striking for an immediate and overwhelming Germany victory planned to end the world war. The great onslaught directed against Verdun is but the prelude to a grand assault by the Germans along the whole western front—the most tremendous offensive movement the world has ever seen. "It is the real thing at last," wrote the military critic of the Times to-day. "The decision of the enemy to put his fortunes to the test will be received with fierce delight by every allied regiment in the west." Four miles from Verdun the greatest artillery and infantry battle perhaps in the history of the world is being waged over the ruins of Fort Douamont. The position has changed hands time and again since the Brandenburgers stormed the shell-wrecked pile of debris late Friday after the most terrific cannonading of the whole Verdun assault.

Germans Admit Verdun Advance Has Been Halted By the French

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Checked in the drive on Verdun by the arrival of great bodies of French reinforcements, the Germans are now extending their mighty efforts to the Champagne region forty miles west of the Verdun woods. An official statement from the German War Office this afternoon virtually confirmed French statements that the Verdun onslaught has been halted, temporarily at least, by the French.

BRITISH EMPIRE WILL PROSPER AS NEVER BEFORE

Interesting Subject Dealt With in the Course of An Address by Mr. G. N. Gordon—A Practical View of the Future

"THE LAST SHOT"

"The Last Shot" was the subject of a very interesting address delivered by Mr. G. N. Gordon before a good number of young men in the Y.M.C.A. Lobby on Sunday afternoon. G. Douglas Carlisle rendered a vocal solo in a very effective manner, accompanied by Mr. Geo. Schneider.

Mr. Gordon raised the question of what will be the position of the nations and the condition of the peoples of the world at the close of the present world's struggle. In a few words he reviewed the war and the caused and laid the blame on Germany where it rightly belongs. Then in a most practical way he outlined the prophecy concerning the future. He stated that Belgian and Servian territory would be restored and Alsace-Lorraine would be restored to France, bringing the realization of the dream of every French patriot. Regarding Russia, he stated that the Germans were hammering a sword that will destroy them and freeing a great nation to wield it. One of the brightest outcomes of the war will be the new spirit of freedom that will be prevalent in Russia. Regarding the British Isles and her cubs, the war would be followed by apparently increased burdens, but as the fear of Prussianism would be removed the British Empire will prosper as never before and continue to be the defence of the free. Regarding Canada, Mr. Gordon called attention to the fact that one-half of our present national income is used to pay interest on our national debt without reducing it one dollar.

Following the war we must provide pensions for returned soldiers and means of supporting their dependants, which would further increase Canada's national debt. Still Mr. Gordon prophesied that immediately following the war increased immigration would shortly double Can

GRAVE DANGER OF PETERBORO' HALTING AT THE WRONG TIME

"Up to the Present We Have Done Well" Says Capt. Burnham in an Earnest Plea to the Young Men of Peterborough to Fill Up the 93rd Battalion---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

The Examiner has received the following letter from Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., paymaster of the 93rd Battalion:

Dear Sir,—I am frequently asked at Ottawa by the general public and by members how recruiting in Peterborough is going on. Great anxiety is felt that Canadians should measure up to what is expected of them. Despite the Herculean efforts of the officers here, and the Canadian Patriotic League the local regiment is not yet filled up. This should not be. Have we not got enough good, sound Canadian nerve to carry out so modest an undertaking as the filling up of one regiment? It is true that we have sent away from Peterborough more than 2,300. Up to the present we have done well, but we are in grave danger of halting at the wrong time. It is certainly a matter of serious moment that we should undertake a thing like this that so intimately concerns our patriotism and not be able in the course of several months to raise the few hundred that are necessary to finish this battalion. That it is a source of embarrassment to the Commanding Officer and to all those here and elsewhere who are looked to by the people of Canada to manage their own affairs goes without question. Let me ask the young men to finish up this battalion without delay. There are enough to do it and our sincerity and courage are, to a certain extent, at stake. I am informed that many of a fine class in the city and county have yet to bestir themselves, a thing I am sure they will do when they understand how narrowly we are being looked at and how earnestly the best is being hoped for.

J. H. BURNHAM.

J. E. B. MUNRO, Captain Adjutant 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

A member of the Examiner staff has received the following interesting letter from Pte. W. Saxby, one of the Peterborough boys with the 21st Battalion in France:

In the Trenches,
Flanders, Feb. 10, 1916.

Dear Sir,—I am enclosing a postcard which I received in a package of tobacco from you. I appreciated it very much, especially as it came from my old home town. If it were not for the friends at home we would go short sometimes. I'll write a few lines about the conditions here, which you may print in the good old Examiner, if you have space. I am writing this in the bomb store, as I am on guard at present. Our battalion (21st) is in reserve just now a short distance behind the firing line. We are in the firing line 6 days, then in reserve 6 days, then in the firing line 6 days, and then in billets six days for a rest, a few miles from the firing line. When we are in billets we have a shower bath (which the boys enjoy very much) and a change of clothes.

It is very wet and muddy here, as it rains nearly every day. There is no snow or frost though. I saw some farmers ploughing a few days ago. The roads here are all made of cobble stones. The farmers have the finest horses I ever saw.

I see some of the Peterborough boys every day. Two others besides myself are in the grenade section. They are Vic. Hagerman and Ted. Shrimpton. We get the Examiner every mail and read all the news, although it is nearly a month old when we get it.

I wish to thank the Daughters of the Empire and other societies through your paper for the gifts sent to us. I for one, appreciate their efforts very much and wish them every success in their good work. Peterborough is certainly doing her share, both in men and money. When the 93rd is complete it will be a great credit to the patriotism of Peterborough county.

I saw an exciting air duel the other

Toronto Mail and Empire Says That Legislature Will Submit the Prohibition Question to the People in the Near Future:

ADVANCED LEGISLATION

Although official confirmation is lacking, it is understood that during the session of the Legislature advanced temperance legislation will be brought down. Since last session the Government has been giving a great deal of earnest thought to the whole question, concurrent with the investigations carried on by the Ontario License Board, and the result of this consideration, it is stated, has been to convince Hon. Mr. Hearst and his colleagues that the sentiment of the province is such as to warrant the submission of the matter to the people in the form of a referendum, which, should it be carried would wipe out bar, club and shop licenses.

For some time past it has been apparent that the Government was reaching a basis of action, evidence in this direction being the delay of the Ontario License Board in announcing its decisions in regard to licenses for the coming year. The Board had intended to make known its allotments of licenses by the beginning of February, and in January had practically completed the survey of the province. For the past month, however, the commissioners have been proceeding leisurely with the inspection of Toronto hotels, and no light has been given as to when the issue of licenses will be announced. Should it be the intention to place the final decision in the hands of the people this Summer the board could probably act under the statutory right to extend licenses for three months pending a settlement of the question.

The Prime Minister, it is understood, has had various kinds of restrictive legislation under consideration with a view of getting the best statutory machinery possible. The Manitoba Act is said to have received considerable attention, not only because it represents recent provincial legislation, but because it is not open to constitutional objections. Years ago the Manitoba Act after adoption by the Manitoba Legislature, went to the courts and was finally stamped with the approval of the Privy Council, remaining inoperative thereafter until revived recently. This Act has been criticised in some quarters for the clauses permitting the sale of liquor by wholesale druggists for scientific and mechanical purposes, but it is surrounded by exceptionally heavy penalty safeguards.

TWELVE-YEAR-OLD BOY ACCIDENTALLY SHOT IN THE HEAD

Second Son of Mr. and Mrs. John McMahon, Douro, Met Tragic Death on Saturday Afternoon

SHOTGUN DISCHARGED

In taking a shotgun from his little brother, on Saturday afternoon, David, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John McMahon, Douro, was startled to hear the firearm discharge, the shot passing through a window into the shed, hitting the second son of the family, John, in the head. So serious were his injuries that he only lived about three hours. The deceased was twelve years of age, and had gone to the shed to get some wood for the stove. He was just stooping over to pick it up, when he was struck. His mother rushed to the shed and brought him in. Dr McGrath was hastily summoned but medical assistance was of little avail.

The shotgun had been standing behind the sideboard and was taken from its place by the deceased's little brother. The young boy whose life was so tragically ended, was a bright lad of much promise. Much sympathy is extended to the sorrowing parents and family in their sad loss.

The funeral took place this morning at nine o'clock from the family residence to the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

Fire Brigade Had Two Calls Yesterday

Chimney Fires the Cause—Little Damage Resulted

The Fire Brigade had two calls yesterday, chimney fires being the cause. The first one was at 10.20 a.m. to 506 Waterford Street. A defective chimney caused the blaze, but the damage done was slight. The house is owned by the Dickson Co., and is occupied by Mr. John Richardson.

At 2.25 p.m. the men were called out again, in answer to a telephone message from 386 Stewart Street, which is tenanted by Miss Edmondson. It was a chimney fire, and no damage resulted.

THE "HANDWRITING" BECOMES PRINT.

The hackneyed phrase "free and independent electors" is becoming an expression of fact instead of the favourite oratorical flourish of the stump speaker. That electors are free has been a long-time fact, but their independence is a revived quality. Under the "horrible example" of German crookedness, the public tolerance of crooked politics has passed, and public patience with graft has become worn threadbare. Manitoba led in the revolt. Peel spoke its warning for Ontario, and now the electors of British Columbia have begun their spring housecleaning. Sir Richard McBride and his successor have for a long time been making ducks and drakes of British Columbia's interests, resources and reputation. The people have got tired of it and said so the first chance they got; in the by-elections on Saturday, Hon. Charles Tisdale, Minister of Public Works in Bowser's reconstructed cabinet, was defeated by a Liberal, in Premier Bowser's home city, by the immense majority of 4,671, and another newly appointed minister was practically defeated, his majority in Rossland being only 9. Talk about "hand-writing on the wall." The British Columbia warning is circus-poster type. There's a limit to what the electors will stand. It was Conservative votes that defeated the Conservative ministry. In the last legislature, the Conservatives had a majority of about 40, in a House of 42. If the Conservative leaders had behaved themselves, their party might have held power till the crack of doom.

CAN THE LEOPARD CHANGE HIS SPOTS?

That the Hun of a hundred years ago, is to-day unchanged in barbarity, except for the worse, is shown by an extract published in the London Guardian from a book, written long ago by Captain Gronow, who went through the Waterloo campaign and was an eye-witness of the things he relates. After the Waterloo debacle the British and Prussian (Hun) troops which were fighting on the same side, pushed their pursuit to France. Captain Gronow writes of this phase thus:

"On entering France we perceived that our allies, the Prussians, had committed fearful atrocities on the defenceless inhabitants of the villages and farms which lay in their line of march . . .

Whatever we arrived at towns or villages through which the Prussians had passed, we found that every article of furniture in the houses had been destroyed in a most wanton manner. Looking-glasses, mahogany bedsteads, pictures, beds and mattresses had been hacked, cut, half-burned, and scattered in every direction."

What was worse, and even more ahtiolpatory of the Prussian conduct in Belgium last year, is the fact stated by Capt. Gronow, that "on the slightest remonstrance of the wretched inhabitants (of France) they were beaten in a most shameful manner, and sometimes shot."

If it had not been for the firmness of Wellington who, it is said, threatened to turn his guns on the Prussians if they did not desist, Paris would have suffered inutterable things at the hands of the Huns. These facts show that during the last hundred years, in spite of the development of "Kultur," the Prussian has not changed his skin nor his nature, only to have it made worse by systematic development. The Prussian kultur of a hundred years ago did not have the benefit of the refinements of barbarity that have been grafted upon it by a hundred years of preaching of the doctrine of "force" and of the beauty —and duty—of "frightfulness." Pray God that history may repeat itself, that the Waterloo of a hundred years ago, may be this year, the pivotal point of the downfall of the embodiment of a tyranny a hundred times worse in its ideas and essentials than the comparatively civilized menace incarnate, of the Little Corporal.

NICKEL AND PATRIOTISM.

The British blockade of Germany is not quite tight; a great many things of capital importance to the Germans filter through neutral countries. There is reason to believe that something almost as much to be desired by Germany as gold, is reaching, or has reached, Germany, from Canada. This is Canadian nickel. It did not need the speech of Mr. J. G. Turriff, M.P., of Assiniboia, in the House of Commons, on Friday, to create the fear that Canada is indirectly supplying nickel to Germany. Though Canada owns 85 per cent. of the world's nickel, in the mine state, not one pound of refined nickel is produced in Canada. The ore is simply reduced to what is called matte in this country, a process that employs comparatively little labour and yields small profits. The matte is shipped to the International Nickel Company of New Jersey, which refines the matte and has control of the finished product, and sells it where it will, and has full control of it; for, after the war created a greater demand, the New Jersey Company put up the price of Canadian nickel from 30 cents to 50 cents per pound. It is stated that the International Nickel Company practically belongs to the Krupps of Essen, Germany, the great manufacturers of German guns and munitions. There is a bare possibility that the British blockade does prevent Canadian nickel from reaching Germany, but there is reason to believe that large quantities get to the Krupps through Sweden, a "neutral" country that has shown a very friendly attitude towards Germany. Every pound of Canadian nickel goes into the hands of the New Jersey Company, with which it is said the Canadian Government has an "understanding" that no Canadian nickel is to reach Germany. With German capital controlling the New Jersey Company and, shameful thought, digging our own ore from our own mines; with an undertaking entered into practically with Germany, there is not the slightest assurance that every pound of Canadian nickel that can possibly be sent to Germany is sent there. The only reason why it is not sent is because it cannot get there. The only way to prevent Canadian nickel from reaching Germany is to give Canada full control of it.

The only way to do this with certainty is to place an embargo on the exportation of Canadian nickel in any but the refined form, and then with Canada having full control of the mining, refinement, and shipping of our metal, there would be absolute certainty that our nickel would not reach Germany except through the agency of British and Canadian guns.

There are two patriotic reasons of prime importance, why the only effective way of absolutely controlling our nickel should be adopted. The refinement of our nickel in Canada would give us control of it and prevent the probability of a large part of the finished product reaching Germany to be employed against British and Canadian soldiers. It is an awful reflection that the gallant Canadians we send to the battle front may easily be killed through the agency of Canadian nickel, taken from Canadian mines, a roundabout but virtual form of suicide—of the murder of our men by our own mineral. That is the prime patriotic reason that should influence prohibition of exportation of nickel to be refined in a foreign country. We are spending millions in helping on this war and we are, possibly contributing millions, in the form of nickel to be used against us in this war. If there is a possibility of an ounce of Canadian nickel finding its way to Germany, as there seems to be, we should take the only sure way to prevent it, by assuming full control of our own nickel supply.

Another patriotic reason why we should take steps to compel the refinement of our nickel ore in Canada is the patriotic one of developing home industry, and giving Canadian labour and Canadian capital the full benefit of the possession and development of all our natural resources. We are not doing this now in the matter of nickel and other things. The benefit Canada gets from her almost exclusive deposits of nickel can be counted in cents, while the profits that go to a foreign country by the refinement of our nickel can be counted in dollars. We may get the benefit in thousands, but a foreign company gets the benefit in millions.

This is the time for Canada taking action to keep our nickel supply under our own control. At another time the placing of an embargo in the export of nickel matter would have created economic disturbance and bad feeling between neighbours. Now it can be justified on much stronger grounds than economic expediency. It can be justified on the grounds of military necessity; on the grounds of making sure that our arch enemy is not stealing our thunder—not turning our own weapons—or weapons indirectly furnished by ourselves upon ourselves. There is a possibility, and more, a probability, that under present conditions, Canadian nickel is finding its way to Germany to strengthen the offensive of our enemies. The only way to make sure is to forbid the export of even an ounce of nickel matte or unrefined nickel, in order to prevent placing our nickel in the control of a company controlled by German capital. Forbidding export of Canadian nickel is the only way of preventing it being used against ourselves, the only way of preventing the poetic conceit of Byron from being made a gruesome and disgraceful reality—

So the struck eagle stretched upon the plain,
No more through rolling clouds to soar again;
Viewed his own feather on the fatal dart,
And winged the shaft that quivered in his heart.

IF YOU WANT TO BUILD UP [illegible] USE THIS PAPER

THE MAN WHO KNOWS TELLS WHY ALLIES WILL WIN THIS WAR

No other man seems capable of putting a situation so plainly and convincingly before the world as David Lloyd George.

Bep Mario Borsa, the editor of the Secolo, of Milan, a leading Italian newspaper, recently went to England and secured an interview with Lloyd George on "Why We Are Going to Win the War." This interview, after appearing in the Milan paper, has been published in many countries, in different languages, and wherever it goes it must influence the minds of all who read it.

There has not been enough of this work done. Too much British effort has been put into the task of suppressing news that should not get out and not enough in spreading news that ought to get out. The enemy has had a thorough organization, world-wide in its scope, for making the best of a bad Hun cause in all neutral countries. So far as John Bull is concerned, he has been, perhaps, too ready to assume that the facts would speak for themselves before the world-wide court of public opinion. And so they do as regards the moral issues of the war, but that in itself is not enough.

The enemy has worked on a plan different from ours. They wanted the Germans to think that Germany was right, and did not care a rap what other nations thought on that subject. As regards other nations they entered every effort on convincing them that Germany must win and could not lose. They succeeded pretty well, too. They persuaded Turkey of it and Bulgaria, and made a considerable impression on Greece and Rumania.

The Lloyd George interview, now being read all over Europe, will do much to offset the work of German officers and professors who are now, as they have been for eighteen months, moving about neutral countries building up a universal legend of German prowess.

Lloyd George, in his interview, declares that the war will not be allowed to end in a deadlock; anxious as Germany must now be to have it so. The German lines will be broken. It may take time, it may be done at heavy cost, but it will be done. The war is a final test between military autocracy and political liberty, and the decision must and will be complete and conclusive.

"The enemy," he said, "has gone beyond the height of his power and is on the down-grade. We and our allies are gaining strength every day. The Central Empires have lost their opportunity of victory and they know it."

Britain begins the campaign of 1916, putting an army of 3,000,000 trained men in the field and another million ready to be drawn upon as required. They are men mostly between the ages of 18 and 30 years of age, "the very classes now largely exhausted in the armies of the enemy."

It is only now, in 1916, that Britain is ready to rise up and enter the war on land with the forces of a great power. Germany's only hope lay in winning before Britain could reach her present stage of readiness.

Heretofore, the allies have fought isolated campaigns, separate wars, with the enemy. Now their efforts are united they; are all ready, organized, fully munitioned, and will wage one campaign unitedly against the common enemy. A new phase of the war just as.—Toronto Globe.

EMPIRE DEVELOPMENT AFTER THE WAR

There seems to be a growing idea that after the present war there will be a greater tendency among the various nations to adopt protective tariffs—the Allies against the Teutons; the Teutons against the Allies; and nations against each other, if only for revenue purposes. Mr. J. Ellis Barker, in discussing this problem in an article in "The Navy," expresses the opinion that British foreign trade will be still more restricted after the war than it has hitherto been by the hostile tariffs of other countries and says that British trade in the future will naturally tend more and more to replace foreign with Imperial commerce. From this he argues that as the Motherland and the colonies will become increasingly valuable to each other, the latter will experience a most extraordinary development.

And why should they not? This war has made us realise as never before, first, the essential unity of the British Empire; secondly, the fact that we have everything within the Empire that the Empire can possibly need. We have cold and warm countries, lands that reach clear up to the North Pole and clear down to the Equator; we have tropical, sub-tropical, temperate and torrid zones; in fact, the various lands of the Empire are ideally situated for the interchange of products. And look at the size of the Empire. It contains 13,306,994 square miles, of which the United Kingdom comprises an area of only 121,633 square miles. Although but one-hundredth part of the total land area of the Empire, the United Kingdom holds 45,000,000 of its people. The remaining ninety-nine-hundredths contain only about 16,000,000 white men, of which Canada has eight millions.

Is it to be believed that with the immensely closer unity of interests between the Dominions and the Motherland after the war, the narrow islands in the North Sea will continue to contain so enormous a preponderance of the British people? Mr. Barker does not believe it; neither, we think, can anyone who studies the problem. Canada, thirty times larger than the United Kingdom, and now so magnificently equipped for production, is bound, in the early future, to represent one of the greatest theatres of activity of the British race. With the added community of interests which will come after the war, Mr. Barker thinks the time is within measurable distance when Canada will have a population of 100,000,000. Mr. Barker develops this argument incidentally in showing the importance of maintaining the supremacy of the British Navy —Montreal Herald.

EDITH CAVELL.

Once a happy little maiden, whiled away her childhood hours;
'Neath the shadow of the church spire to be good and true she learned,
Strong and tender, brave and fearless, loyal to her English blood.

Years pass on, now the maiden stands a noble woman grown,
Answering to the call of mankind, of the wounded ones who moan;
Forth she goes to stricken Belgium and with woman's tender hand,
Binds the broken, shattered bodies and restores them to their land.

Time rolls on: Who is this woman standing here in this lone room,
While these cruel relentless beings, pass the sentence of her doom
Who are they who stand, rejoicing, in their lonely victim's fate?
Lowest race are they of humans, torn by envy, vice and hate.

There she stands alone and friendless, with her noble head held high,
And her voice rings through the silence, "I am not afraid to die,
I have looked on death too often, now to shrink or be dismayed,
I am dying for my country, for old England, unafraid."

In the dim, gray dawn of morning, bravely walked she out to die
And her spirit never falters as her awful end draws nigh
"Fire," the captain gives the order and her brave heart meets the test
There she falls with eyes unbandaged, and her flag upon her breast.

Edith Cavell! how her story rings through every Christian land,
And her blood calls forth our bravest, who must stay the murderer's hand;
Who must crush these awful monsters, sanctioned by the Kaiser's word,
Crush them now, henceforth forever, with the swift avenging sword.

Men of England, Ireland, Scotland, men of Canada, come forth,
Come from every British country, from the south and east and north;
Come from far Australia's island; let the Huns to see full soon,
That the death of Edith Cavell seals the Hohenzollern's doom.

—By Miss Beatrice M. Dunlop, in the Ottawa Valley Journal.

BRITISH EMPIRE WILL PROSPER

ada's population, so while the national debt may be increased the burden will be borne by a larger population. He thought that people would be made more economical and that men of the future will live more according to the standards of the people of 1930 higher than the people of 1915.

Capital and Labour.

Capital and labour will not have in the future the differences that have existed in the past. Large industries will be under Government control. Unfair profits will be made impossible and right dealings toward the workingman will be practised. In view of the great economical reconstruction that will take place in our own land, men will be required to earn more money in less time than in the past, therefore industrial efficiency will be at a premium. Economical conditions will be improved by the success of the temperance movement. It is Mr. Gordon's opinion that Ontario will be absolutely dry within two years, in fact the signs of the times, as indicated in all countries, showed that people of the future would be compelled to avoid the wastage caused by strong drink. Russia, which formerly was the most drunken nation, is at present the most temperate, and other nations are placing the ban on strong drink.

New forms of taxation will arise, and Mr. Gordon hinted that the single tax might prevail. Graft and questionable conduct in public and private life will be made impossible. There will be a new patriotism, richer, nobler and more exalted than the old. In quoting from Mr. Lloyd George he stated, "The stern hand of fate has scourged us to an elevation where we can see the everlasting things that matter for a nation, the great peaks we have forgotten, Honour, Duty and Patriotism."

In conclusion, Mr. Gordon said: "The last shot will sound the knell to brutal, wasteful war. It rings out a new life, greater, nobler and more enduring than we have ever known. It is to you young men we look to blaze the way and lead others to a strong, steady determination that you will never do or permit to be done anything which might involve our honour as a nation or your honour as British subjects. You are the leaders, and if you fail all fail. The future rests with you."

Michael O'Leary Likes Canada and the Canucks

Mr. J. J. McCaffery, President of Toronto Baseball and Amusement Co has received the following interesting letter from Lieut. Michael O'Leary, the famous Irishman, who won the Victoria Cross by capturing a German trench lone-handed:

Recruiting Office, Cork,
February 16, 1916.

Dear Sir,—In my various wanderings from France home and back again, your very kind letter remained unanswered. I greatly appreciate the compliment paid me by the Toronto Baseball and Amusement Company in electing me to a life membership. I know from actual experience the great bravery and heroism of the Canadians who fought in justice and honour in this war against German savagery. They were some of the finest lot we had, and, like their great country, they have done great things. I love Canada, the country of my choice, and when the war is over, with God's help, I shall return to it if they will have me. Many, many thanks for your very kind letter.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) M. O'Leary, V.C.,
Lieutenant.

French Army Heavily Reinforced Troops Retake Lost Ground

Enemy Tried Flanking Movement---French Total Losses Far Below Prisoners the Foe Claims

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The fighting and slaughter around Fort Douaumont, four miles northeast of Verdun, continued without the slightest abatement.

"Five times," said the noon German official report, "the French reinforced with fresh troops, attempted to reconquer the armored fortress of Douaumont, and five times they were beaten back with sanguinary losses."

The slopes up which these five attacks were made "were crowded with German dead," says the French midnight official report, while the Friday official report says that Joffre's men, by counter-attack, retook the positions captured by the Germans and pressed on beyond.

Reports from Berlin via neutral points quote Berlin correspondents as declaring that the Douaumont fortress was utterly demolished by shell fire.

German Flanking Moves.

But while the main battle rages around this position the Germans have been making flanking operations while shield a perhaps still greater menace for Verdun and the French army. It is another tremendous effort of the "pincers" or vise strategy, between whose closing jaws the Crown Prince hopes to clutch Gen. Joffre's men.

In the eastern flanking movement the Germans have pushed their way five miles down the Woevre plain, until today they are as far as Moranville, five miles from Verdun.

The French admit "a withdrawal of advanced posts," but they also declare that German attempts to advance from Blanzee and Moranville were stopped.

In their flanking advance on the west the Germans assert that they have now taken Champ Neuville (whose capture was announced), and the fortified works of Hardecourt, east of Fort Douaumont, The Cote due Talou, and have pushed along the Meuse "as far as Nave, on the southern borders of the wood northeast of Brus."

The French, however, contradict the capture of the Cote du Talou. According to their official reports this death-swept hill has been so bombarded from both sides that it is untenable and neither force now holds it.

The British line, it is reported, has even extended to enable the French to reinforce the Verdun army.

All Leaves Recalled.

The whole front from the North Sea to Switzerland is on the alert, and all leave of absence has been recalled. The French maximum effort has not yet been made. The total French losses in killed, wounded and prisoners since the Verdun battle began, it was authoritatively stated this evening, have been less than the German official communication claims in prisoners.

German Drive Inopportune.

A delayed despatch from the correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company at British Headquarters in the field, dated Thursday, says that the Germans could not have chosen more inopportune time for the offensive against Verdun. At the beginning of the attack the weather suddenly changed to the most severe winter spell in several years and the heavy snow and frost seriously hamper their movements.

The great activity in the Ypres salient during the past fortnight, the despatch says, was really in the nature of a diversion. If the Germans had found it possible to push beyond the international trenches, the fighting would have assumed th paprosnty rayaw owny okahoiosea ed the proportions of another battle of Ypres. The defence, however, was too strong to be swept through. Regarded as a feint, the operation failed simply because the British General Staff was not deceived as to its true character.

CLEVE HAWKINS WILL MEET SAM LANGFORD

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Sam Langford will be seen in another bout in this city to-night. He will go against Cleve Hawkins, the coloured fighter of Canada, at a special boxing show of the Long Acre A. A. Battling Levinsky and "Wild" Burt Kenny and "Dutch" Brandt and Eddie O'Keefe, of Philadelphia, clash in the other two ten-round battles.

CONFESSES TO MURDER.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb. 28.—Jos. Raymond, arrested here on suspicion, confessed to the police that he killed "Big Jeff" McCarthy in a barroom in Montreal, Que., November 12, 1914. Raymond says he is a yeggman and that the man he killed was also a "yegg." McCarthy, who lived for several days after being shot, refused to give the Montreal police any information as to who shot him.

RIVAL FOR JESS WILLARD.

Southerner Has at Least Size if Not Ability.

HAMMOND, La., Feb. 28.—Fight fans in Wilmer, La., a village near Kentwood, can see Jess Willard's setting sun, since their fellow townsman, Tom Edwards, has been induced to go into the fighting business for a living. Edwards is said to be a physical marvel. He measures 6 feet 8 inches in his stocking feet and weighs 240 pounds, stripped. He is a youngster, having just reached his majority. He has never done any fighting.

Crack Toronto Senior Team to Play Here

Arrangements are being made to have the losers of to-night's Argonaut-Riverside play-off game in Toronto play an exhibition game here on Friday night with a picked team from the 93rd Battalion and the Electrics. The visit of one of these crack senior teams should be one of the most interesting events of the season. A strong team can be picked from the ranks of the two local teams.

CURLING

To-night's scheduled games are as follows:

Brightman vs Giroux.
Greer vs. Sturgeon.
Conrad vs. Harstone.
Moore vs. Wightman.
Best vs. Martin.
Denham vs. Waddell.

Saturday night Harry Foote vanquished Archie Moore by 9 to 7 and R. M. Waddell put a 10-9 score over Tom. Brightman. This killed the hopes of both Moore and Brightman going into the finals.

The scheduled games will reach a decision on Wednesday night and the following evening the Vice-Skips' bonspiel will be got under way. The committee arranging it consists of M. C. Tooley, A. W. Archibald, W. G. Read, P. D. Fitzgerald, Alex. Kay and Herb Martin.

SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR THE BELGIAN FUND

Subscription returns for the Belgian Relief Fund are still coming in. On Saturday, it was reported that Chief Howard and his colleagues had collected over four hundred dollars at the Canadian General Electric Company's plant. In justice to the employees of the C. G. E. it might be stated that the returns are not all in and when completed the amount subscribed may reach six or seven hundred dollars.

Though a few weeks late in arriving, four boxes containing eighty-three parcels were received and distributed to the men. Though a good number of the men who enlisted in Peterborough have been transferred from No. 3 Co. for duties in battalion details for which they have special qualification, endeavour was made not to miss any of them. The boys were greatly pleased with everything and wish to thank the ladies for the gifts themselves, as well as for the interest which they have shown in the lads representing Peterborough in this battalion.

Trusting that this will reflect the thanks of all ranks, and wishing our well wishes in abundant success in the work of your branch, I am,

HOW TO MAKE OUR SOLDIERS HAPPY

A doctor writes: "If you go to any of the military hospitals where they bring the wounded, the first thing that strikes your attention is the packet of cigarettes by the side of the bed. The nurses know it is useless to hope for a man's speedy recovery until he has the taste of tobacco on his lips."

The best and surest way to make our troops, wounded or unwounded, happy; the best way to make them think that Canada is not unmindful of their great courage and fortitude, is to send them enough Tobacco.

In the trenches, or in the hospital, a packet of Tobacco is the most acceptable gift in the world.

THE PEOPLE OF ST. ANDREW'S HEAR THEIR NEW MINISTER

"I Am Ready To Make An Alliance, Offensive or Defensive, With Every Genuine Follower of Jesus Christ, No Matter What Church He Makes His Home"---The Prelude To Rev. Mr. Mitchell's Pastorate In St. Andrew's Church

With such a liberal platform the new minister of St. Andrew's, Rev. Thos. H. Mitchell, B.D., enters upon a pastorate fraught with great possibilities.

"The past two weeks," said he, "have been busy weeks for me. After living in a place for ten years the roots of one's life become deeply set, and what with packing furniture, attending banquets and baptizing babies, I have had scarcely time to eat, let alone think of sermons, so what I say this morning I speak out of my heart."

The theme of his discourse was "Christ's Message to the Modern Church," with text in Rev., 2:7, "He that hath an ear let him hear what the spirit saith unto the churches."

There are those who say that Christ never founded any church. In part they are right. He never laid down any policy, but He did train a little band, and this band is the towering fact in all gospel story. When we come to Paul's epistles he has only two themes: Christ, ant the church; when we come to the last book—Revelation—the church is clothed in glorious vesture.

Christ's Message.

In examining Christ's message to the church, there are three great words He utters:

First, "A new commandment I give unto you that ye love one another," showing the intimate relationship that should exist between church members. In the New Testament there are five words which define a Christian: disciple, follower, believer, saint and brother, the last one being the most common. Therefore a Christian church is a band of brothers, and the cement holding the band together is love, love to one another.

When we go outside of the New Testament and examine the great definitions of the churches, we come on a remarkable thing: that what Christ makes fundamental is not mentioned in them. The Roman Catholic, Anglican and Presbyterian, these are the great ones, all the rest are only modifications of these, and not one makes fundamental what Christ makes essential. This explains why our worship is so cold.

"If thou rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee. . . first be reconciled to thy brother."

The lack of reconciliation explains why so many Christians do not go on to maturity. The environment is cold, it freezes to death. No wonder so many people coming from a distance fail to join the church; it is like coming from one ice box to another. This is why the world is so slowly evangelised.

It also explains our present war.

When hostilities broke out, an Austrian student resident in Switzerland said to his professor: "I must go home, I've been called to the colours, and if I do go home I shall remain true to my conscience, for I shall never take a gun to kill my fellow brother."

"Then why go home?" queried the professor.

"I must, my family would suffer."

On his return he took the stand indicated and was led out and shot in cold blood. If all the professing Christians in all the armies had taken that stand there would not have been any war. But because we did not emphasize love, the war could not be prevented and now we must fight it out.

Second, "Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in." The first describes our attitude to one another, the second, our attitude to the great world outside.

Christianity is the only religion that resents man seeking God. In considering the origin of conversion, we believe that it does not begin in the independent act of the Christian, but in the love of God seeking us. Indeed this is the root of calvanism. The fifteenth chapter of Luke presents a seeking God: The woman looking for the lost piece of silver; the shepherd leaving one sheep, leaving the ninety and-nine, and going out to seek the lost one; and then the father rushing out to greet the prodigal boy.

A Seeking Church.

Christ wants His church to be a seeking church, "Go out, and compel them to come in."

"Start this week," exhorted the preacher; "you may know of a man who never goes to church, who is careless about religion; see him tomorrow, call for him next Sunday, invite him to sit in your pew. That is what the text means and next Sunday we will have the church full, and perhaps some souls may be brought to Christ."

Another word, "As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the wine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me." This is to the church's relation to the Divine Head to the Master Himself.

A coloured man once came to the minister of a certain church to profess conversion. The church was a very fashionable one and the minister wondered if it would be the proper thing to admit him so he told him to go home and pray about it for a month and if he felt the same way to come back. He did so and came back. The minister was still disturbed in mind and put him off again.

One night the coloured man dreamed he saw the Saviour to whom he told his trouble. The Saviour said, "Never mind, I have been trying to get into that church for a score of years."

A Vital Relationship.

The relationship of the church to Christ must be vital, to be fruitful. We are living in strenuous times, when everyone belongs to a number of committees. The Mother church is organized to death. The New Testament places the emphasis on "being," not doing.

A little girl was always helping people, doing acts of kindness. No one knew the secret of her inspiration. Around her neck she wore a necklace and locket. No one was allowed to see in it. She took sick, a friend opened it and discovered a little scrap of paper bearing these words: "Whom having not seen, I love." Such was the secret of her character: She loved Christ. This relationship controlled all the rest.

In conclusion the reverend speaker reviewed the relation of Christians to one another, to the world outside, and to the Divine Head, emphasizing the fact that the true church demands faith in Jesus Christ, and thorough loyalty to Him.

The Minister's Platform.

Finally, in language that could not be misunderstood, he presented the policy he purposed pursuing in Peterborough. Said he:

"I am ready to make an alliance, offensive or defensive, with every genuine follower of Jesus Christ, no matter in what church he makes his home."

—PAUL PENMAN.

Sir Sam's Shovels Helped His Secretary

She Made $35,000 Out of Them, Says Other Hughes.

OTTAWA, Feb. 28.—One Hughes made a drive at the other in the Commons. Mr. J. J. Hughes of Prince Edward Island said that the country has paid $1.75 for 25,000 shovels made in the United States, which could have been made in Canada for twenty-five cents each. The results of this transaction were that the country had a lot of useless shovels. A young lady secretary of the minister of militia had made about twenty-five thousand dollars.

DEATH ENDS WAR QUARREL

RACINE, Wis., Feb. 28.—Mrs. Margaret Robbilliard, aged 70 years, died here from the effects of a fall. Her husband, James Robbilliard, is a wealthy truck gardener. The aged pair, though living under the same roof, had not spoken to each other since the outbreak of the war, it is claimed, because of their opposite views. He sides with the allies, as his boyhood home is on the Island of Guernsey, and she prayed for the success of the Central Powers, having been born in Germany.

Pebble That Hurt Proves a Diamond

Stone Imbedded in Rubber on Girl's Foot is Valued at $300—To Aid in Her Education.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Feb. 28.—Miss Irene Maitland, a student at Mechanics Institute, whose home is in Geneva, while walking in Main street yesterday felt a pebble hurting her foot through the rubber. She tried to shake it off, but could not, as it was imbedded.

When she picked the stone from the rubber she noticed its brilliancy and kept it. To-day a jeweller told her it was a blue white diamond, perfectly cut, worth $300.

If the stone is unclaimed and unidentified, Miss Maitland will sell it and use the money to help complete her education. At present she is doing office work outside of school hours.

Brantford Does Not Raise the Assessment on Houses Put in Good Order

A SPLENDID SYSTEM

BRANTFORD, Feb. 28.—The city of Brantford is now in possession of one of the best assessment systems in vogue in Ontario. For the past three years the Assessment Department has been working out a system for the equalization of the assessment on buildings as well as lands and they now claim they have perfected such a system.

Up to the present land has been assessed at so much per foot front on the value of the land. It is now the intention to work out the assessment by a system taking in the measurements of the house and a full description of the material in the construction, with the plumbing and heating arrangements. They feel that this system will allow of equalization of assessment.

In this system Assessor A. G. Ludlow thinks Brantford has one of the best in the province, and assessment commissioners in other places have congratulated them on it.

Many people in Brantford are under the impression that the cheaper class of houses are assessed higher in proportion to the better class of houses, but an investigation shows that it is the better class of houses that are assessed nearest their selling value.

This mistaken idea was so entrenched in people's mind that Mr Ludlow had lists of assessments prepared, covering the past 25 years, of houses under $2,500 and over that amount. One hundred houses of each class were selected and the finding was that houses assessed over $2,500 were assessed within 27 per cent. of their actual selling value, while houses under that assessment were assessed within 31 per cent. of their actual selling value.

These examples used to obtain the percentage were not picked to make a showing, but were selected from the actual transfers in the Registry Office.

Another erroneous supposition that is abroad is that if a man beautifies his property or paints his house up goes his assessment. In some towns this may be true, but such is not the case in Brantford, Mr. Ludlow claims.

"There has never been a cent put on during the 10 years I have been in this office for improvements such as that," said Mr. Ludlow, discussing assessment questions this morning. "Such things ought to be encouraged and there will not, while I am here be extra taxes for beautifying a home. However, if a person goes to work and tears down a verandah and puts up a better and more expensive one, that is a different matter.

ASKS FUNDS FOR U-BOATS

Austrian Navy League Issues Appeal for Contributions.

The Austrian Navy League publishes an appeal in the newspapers of Austria-Hungary for voluntary contributions for the building of a submarine fleet to insure the freedom of the seas for the Teutonic powers. First of all, however, the appeal calls for the building of a submarine to replace the U-12, which was lost.

"We call upon every man, woman and child of our dear fatherland," says the appeal, "to supply the money by voluntary contributions for the buildings of new submarines.

"We all are aware how the brave commanders and crews of our submarines have attacked and sunk ships of the enemy, who seek to deny us the freedom of the seas. We all know how our never-to-be-forgotten Egon Lerch sacrificed his young life in attacking a ship of our treacherous one-time ally. To perpetuate his memory yet us all combine to build a new U-12 to protect us on the seas.

"No city, no village is too far from the ocean not to be interested in this important matter."

A PLEA FOR MORE RECRUITS

Britain Will Try To Keep Men Home After War

Secretary for Colonies Asks That It Be Made Attractive.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Andrew Bonar Law, secretary for the colonies, speaking at the London School of Economics, discussed the problems that will arise after the war, referring particularly to agriculture. He declared that it was necessary for England to adopt a broad programme of agricultural development to prevent a too great number of men emigrating to the colonies.

"The Government engaged in carrying on the war," said the Unionist leader, "has no easy task, but the Government which shoulders the duty of reconstruction after the war will have work no less difficult.

Agriculture Most Important.

"The war has shown us that agriculture is still the most important of all our industries, and in the British Isles we must have healthy agriculture. After the war large numbers of our soldiers will not be wiling to go back to tame industrial life. We know how important is the strength of the imperial colonies and we wish to see them grow in population with men of our own race and ideals, but we do not want to see the best and most vigorous of our people leaving these shores even for the colonies. For that reason it is essential to make real efforts to place agriculture here on an attractive and profitable basis."

It seems to be human nature to be mighty fond of eggs when they are 40 cents a dozen and to git mighty sick of 'em when they are 15 cents a dozen.

Monthly Meeting of the W.C.T.U.

Report of the Visit of the Local Members to Lakefield

The regular monthly meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held in the Y. W. C. A. on Feb. 25th, with the President, Mrs. Whalley, in the chair.

Mrs. Mathieson conducted the devotional exercises.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Knapman for the able manner in which she conducted the rummage sale, net proceeds being $50.00.

Mrs. Ellis gave a full report of the visit of some of the local members to Lakefield W.C.T.U. on Feb. 22nd. They were met at the station by Miss Nelson and taken to her home and there entertained until 3 o'clock, when they proceeded to the Baptist Church. About thirty Lakefield ladies were present. Mrs. Whalley and Mrs. Campbell gave helpful addresses on the work of the W.C.T.U., after which refreshments were served and the meeting adjourned.

A letter was read from Mrs. Wilson Taylor, our former President thanking the local Union for their sympathy in the death of her son who was killed in action, about a month ago.

As Mrs. S. Taylor was unable to be present, Mrs. Whalley spoke for a short time on the work of Frances Willard.

It was suggested that we have a prayer meeting on the day the petition for prohibition of the liquor traffic is presented to the Government. The meeting closed with prayer.

Yesterday Was One of the Stormiest Sundays in Years—The Temperature

Sunday was one of the most stormy days we have had for some years. The high wind prevailing carried the light snow that had fallen during the three previous days, in all directions, and many huge drifts formed. The lowest temperature yesterday was 4 degrees above zero; highest 12 above. Lowest last night 6 degrees below zero.—W.P.

Berlin's Report To-day of Latest Changes in the East End of the Line

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Feb. 28.—The official statement to-day says the Germans have conquered the Navarine Farm and French positions on both sides about 100 yards, capturing 260 officers and 1,009 men, and taking nine machine guns and one mine thrower.

"Artillery engagements have been excitingly violent at several places," said the War Office statement. "North of Arras there is uninterrupted mine activity. The Germans destroyed about forty yards of English trenches by blasting operations.

260 PEOPLE WERE RESCUED FROM MALOJA

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The P. and O. Company's office gave out a statement to-day, declaring that 260 persons have been saved from the Maloja. There were 119 passengers and 252 officers and members of the crew aboard. Despatches to shipping offices to-day brought word of the sinking of the Russian steamer Petshenga, the seventh vessel to meet disaster within the past forty-eight hours, fifteen of her crew having been landed. About a score of women and children were among those who lost their lives when the Maloja turned turtle. The bodies of twelve women and six children have been landed at Dover to-day, and placed in the morgue for identification. Several of the survivors are near death from exposure. All survivors who reached London to-day agreed that there was little panic aboard. The loss of life among the passengers would have been very small, they stated, had not two of the boats collided in the water. One of them capsizing. An official inquiry was ordered to-day to determine how it happened that the liner struck a mine. Three bodies of Lascar sailors of the crew of the Maloja were recovered this morning, bringing the number of identified in the Dover market hall converted into a temporary morgue, to 47. Relatives of missing passengers from London and other cities were flocking to Dover to-day.

Will Not Torpedo Passenger Liners Without Due Warning

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Feb. 28.—German submarines will torpedo no passenger liners without warning, even after the new order against armed merchantment goes into effect at midnight on Tuesday, it was learned to-day. Furthermore the submarine commanders will endanger human lives only in case the steamer attempts to escape, to fire on submarine, or ram her.

BERLIN IS STIRRED BY PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Feb. 28.—President Wilson's letter to Chairman Stone has suddenly brought full realization to German officials that the situation between Germany and the United States has reacher a serious stage. "These are impressive words" was the statement made by a high official at the Foreign Office to-day, as he re-read the Press versions of the President's letter which are accepted as substantially correct. One of the statements that has struck home her, is this:—"If the clear rights of American citizens should ever unhappily be abridged or denied by any such action, we should, it seems to me, have in honour no choice as to what our course should be." The Foreign Office is puzzled at the position taken by President Wilson that submarine attacks on armed merchantmen will constitute violations of international law.

MISSION CIRCLE HELD A RECITAL

Young Ladies of Trinity Church Provided an Enjoyable Evening

The Young Ladies' Mission Circle of Trinity church provided a very enjoyable evening Friday, Feb. 25th, when they procured Miss Ethel Cocking a gifted young reader of Toronto, to give a recital.

Miss Cocking very soon won the hearts of an appreciative audience by her rendition of choice selections. She possesses the clever faculty of being able to cater to the serious-minded as well as to those who favour readings of a lighter vein. She showed herself master of her art in "Ogesto," that warlike poem of Pauline Johnson, where we see the Mohawk brave in all his glory of strength and again in a simple snooze, "Timmy's Christmas Dinner, Before and After the War," given in the child's own peculiar language. Uhrandy's views on Women's Rights to Propose," showed Miss Cocking at home with the negro dialect.

Miss Cocking left a lesson to all who heard her in her closing number, "The Little Rosebud," given with piano accompaniment of "The Last Rose of Summer" by Miss Sophia Elliott.

The musical part of the programme was also much enjoyed and consisted of vocal solos by Misses Etta Kemp, Reid and Pte. Farr (this last with violin obligato by Pte. Hartshorn), a violin solo by Mrs. Wilson and a piano solo by Miss Elliott.

Rev. Mr. Wilson did the honours as chairman.

STRONG APPEAL TO WOMEN FOR THEIR SUPPORT

Dr. James L. Hughes, at Recruiting Meeting Speaks of What Many Women Have Done and Asks Others to Assist Them

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

Mr. James L. Hughes of Toronto, addressing the Sunday night recruiting rally at the armouries predicted a thorough organization of Canada, even to the last polling sub-division, and including the individual churches for the end that the entire resources and powers of the Dominion may be completely mobilised for the service of the Empire. Three objectives will be considered, first men for the ranks, second increased production of foodstuffs, munitions, etc., and third the cooperation of women for the purpose of replacing men wherever possible, thereby providing more men for the new battalions that have been planned.

Major Watt presided and although the extreme weather conditions appreciably diminished the attendance, the enthusiasm was as manifest as ever. Judge Huycke introduced Dr. Hughes in a prefatory address which emphasised the necessity and the advantages to the Empire's arms of immediate enlistment. He felt that Sir Ian Hamilton was correct in his expressed opinion that had he received the 50,000 men he asked for at a critical stage of the Gallipoli campaign it would have proved a great success. It would be a lasting reproach that these men were not then available to complete the trust the Australians had so gallantly carried forward into the enemy's lines on the peninsula. It was the realization of the possibilities of that action had the men been ready to send to support it that clearly illustrated the importance of a ready response to the call for volunteers.

Dr. Hughes.

The war has come close home to Dr. Hughes not only in the work of his brother, Sir Sam Hughes, but also in the loss of his son, who was killed in action not long ago. Speaking of his youngest son in a passing reflective mood, he remarked that he had hoped to live on to see him make a success of his career, to achieve great things, but he could never have achieved anything greater than his share in the Empire's defence, the sacrifice of his life.

Dr. Hughes quoted the statement of Rev. Dr. Chown, president of the Methodist church conference that every man of proper age, intelligence and physical health who is not in khaki will have to answer to God, to his country, to himself. In his address he touched upon a series of topics relative to the war and recruiting, most of which have been dealt with on various occasions. This was Canada's war as much as England's, he replied to the statement of those, not all of whom, he said, were in Quebec, that this was England's war. True, Britain did not want war, nobody does. We might have had peace had we stood aside and let Germany rule the whole earth. We might have had peace that way, by standing aside when Germany broke its promise to observe the neutrality of Belgium, tore the scrap of paper to which Britain herself had been a signatory. Was that the right way to secure peace? No, Britain maintained her honour, standing up like God's free men and fighting for Christian liberty.

Appealed to Women.

Dr. Hughes made a strong appeal to women for their support. Mothers who say they love their sons too much to let them go to war should remember the mothers who have already given their sons. Not an element in life can be as quickly degraded and made lower and meaner than love. Civilisation is threatened, Christianity is threatened, but mothers say they love their boys too much. That is not love, not Christian love. There must be some sacrifice in love if it is to attain its higher forms. Such an attitude is an insult to the patriotic mothers who are giving their sons for the great causes that call for support.

Dr. Hughes mentioned Mrs. Pankhurst's coming to Peterborough this week. It was to her Lloyd George appealed when he needed the assistance of Britain's women of whom over 400,000 are now engaged in what was formerly called men's work. After the war those women would be enfranchised. In their way they are now fighting for God and civilization. Dr. Hughes felt that the time was coming when in all democracies only those who recognised their responsibilities would be allowed to vote.

Canada had set out to arm 250,000 more troops, and this could be accomplished without conscription if the men responded to their duties. Many men over forty-five years ought to go, and the country could provide greater numbers if younger men were released by those who had retired. Dr. Hughes suggested that High School boys might be secured for farm work for a year or two. He himself had left school when he was fourteen and worked on a farm. These and other suggestions offered by the speaker indicated the trend toward the more comprehensive organization Canada must undergo before her forces are marshalled for service.

The band band under the direction of Bandmaster Hughes played several numbers in fine style.

German Dead Form Huge Dams Across The Ravines

PARIS, Feb. 28.—Wounded soldiers who have reached Paris say that the carnage of Germans has been simply terrible. At many places the German dead formed huge dams across the ravines, impending the water on its downward course to the Meuse. Every now and then one of these dams gives way and the reddened stream swirls on again, carrying with it hundreds of corpses. During the week's battle the French have not been idle, and along the eastern railway line have been rushing troops and munition trains night and day. The French Generals realize that victory is the present battle will go to the army which makes the best use of its artillery, and so battery after battery of light and heavy guns since Monday have been sent up to the Argonne and Meuse heights. The French hitherto regarded their artillery offensive of last September in the Champagne as the greatest effort of the war, but the present battle has upset all calculations of the staffs, and the consumption of shells of every calibre has greatly exceeded all estimates. The French have plentiful supplies, however, and if the battle ends for lack of munitions that lack will be on the German and not on the French side.

CHILDREN PLAYING WITH MATCHES CAUSED A FIRE

Some children playing with matches in a shed on Stewart Street, caused a fire this afternoon at 2.30. Some kindling in the shed soon got ablaze. A neighbour, who first noticed the fire, rushed to the corner grocery store and sent in the alarm. Ald. Edgar, who was in the store at the time, enlisting the assistance of a few of the neighbours, went to the scene of the trouble, and with buckets and shovels managed to keep the conflagration in subjection until the Brigade arrived. Were it not for the valiant work of Ald. Edgar and his assistants, undoubtedly the blaze would have spread to the adjoining house, and much damage would have been done. Great credit is due them for their timely action.

HORSES FOR THE FIRE DEPARTMENT

The Peterborough Fire Department is still pursuing the search for horses. Heavy coach horses, with clean legs and fine bone and weighing about 1,400 pounds are in demand. Colour makes no difference. A few days ago the department received a photograph of a prospective candidate, but investigation showed that the animal was unfit for the service required of it.

Head of Plot To Destroy Ships

Detectives Are Hurried to Brooklyn Water Front After Mr. Cropsey Gets Warning.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—A squad of detectives was sent hurriedly guard piers along the Brooklyn front yesterday following an anonymous letter received by District Attorney Cropsey, in which it was said that there was a gigantic plot to blow up steamships in Brooklyn.

Mr. Cropsey turned the letter over to Captain Coughlin, in charge of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, and ordered that an investigation be made at once. It is believed that the writer of the letter wished the District Attorney to take immediate action on the warning and had sent it to Mr. Cropsey in an effort to frustrate the schemes of the plotters.

The letter began something like this—"Remember the fire down at the Atlantic Basin. That is only an indication of what is going to happen." Mr. Cropsey does not remember the exact wording, but said that further on told of a gigantic plot to blow up steamships in Brooklyn.

The "fire down at the Atlantic Basin", referred to in the letter, occurred on February 10. Three steamships and a pier were burned in a blaze that did $1,000,000 damage. The fire was believed to have been of incendiary origin. The steamships were being loaded with munitions for the Allies.

The writer of the warning letter d Mr. Cropsey to be sure to send men to the "foot of Fulton street." In the vicinity of Fulton ferry are the piers of several large steamship lines. The Lamport and Holt line, the Ward line and the South line piers are within a short distance of Fulton street.

THE PLAN for THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL WAR PICTURES which will be shown in Peterboro by The Evening Examiner will open at the Grand Opera House on Tuesday Morning. Telephone or be present early and secure your Tickets.

A HIGH-GRADE HAVANA FILLED CIGAR, FINE SUMATRA WRAPPER.

The cigar smoker will do well if he selects the improved "Halpins Ten" cigar, manufactured by the Peterborough Havana Cigar Co.

We received a large shipment of imported leaf early in January and have the manufactured article now on sale at all the leading cigar stands.

Our 1915 product was a high-grade cigar, yet we can say unhesitatingly that the 1916 production is superior. The 1916 "Halpins Ten" cigar is second to no ten cent cigar on the market, and it retails at 4 for 25 cents.

We are putting forth every effort to attract the patronage of the cigar smokers and would earnestly solicit a trial, which we feel sure will merit your continued patronage. 2d-48

"STRAFE AMERIKA" ON MONEY.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Col. House had one very unusual experience while in Berlin, according to a story told here to-day among his friends. The Colonel had presented a check at the cashier's window of a bank in Berlin, so the story goes, and among the notes he received in return was one on the back of which had been written the words, "Gott strafe England and Amerika." The Colonel, it is said, took the note.

CECIL WRIGHT.

The death of Mr. Cecil Wright, for thirty-two years a resident of Orillia, occurred at his home, 190 Cedar street, on Tuesday noon, in his 75th year. Thirteen months ago Mr. Wright was incapacitated for business by a stroke of paralysis, and since then has been an invalid. He was born in Newcastle, England, coming to Canada with his parents, who settled in Stanhope township, Haliburton, in the year 1860. From that time he was almost continuously engaged in the lumber business until a little over a year ago when he was forced to retire. In 1880 Mr. Wright married Catherine McPherson, of Eldon township. Mrs. Wright and two daughters survive, Mrs. Bert McCallum, Banff, Alberta, and Mrs. J. S. Bickenaderfer, Orillia. Three brothers and three sisters of Mr. Wright are also living. William and Charles, Minden Hill; Walter and Miss Margaret Wright, Minden, Ont.; Mrs. Eakins, Peterborough, and Mrs. Booth, Toronto. Real Pictures of the War

Taken by the General War Staff has the National Archives and to Be Shown Here

Not until they have seen the official French war films, which are to be placed on exhibition in this country under the auspices of The Examiner, will the people of Canada be able to fully grasp what the fighting in Europe is really like.

These pictures which are guaranteed by the French government, will take the spectators into the battle fields, not as tourists will go, long after the struggle is over, but at the actual movement of battle, and will make them observers in the midst of infantry drives and artillery actions. They will show every given aspect of the great struggle on the western fighting front. Every phase of soldier life is shown in these pictures just as it is being lived by the men in the trenches. The films were taken by order of the French General Staff and are to be preserved in the national archieves of France that future generations may be able to see how Frenchmen fought for their country.

E. Alexander Powell, the World war correspondent, who obtained permission from the French Government to present these pictures, says that these unimpeachable records tell the most thrilling story that has ever been enacted.

These pictures show with what terrible completeness the siege guns operate in converting a town pulsating with life into a mass of ruins marked only by series of irregular mounds of brick and mortar.

You read of troops surging forward in the face of a withering fire. In these pictures you see them in all their buoyant spirit, and you see them again when the action is completed, and some are lying where they fell with a cheer on their lips.

The camera takes you to the trenches where men live as do the mice of the fields, ever burrowing for safety, and where, if fate wills, they die.

Grand Opera House, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Plan opens to-morrow at the Grand. Reserved seats, 25c. and 35c.

New York Stock Market

Henry Clews, of New York, says: In spite of exceedingly stimulating home conditions, the stock market exhibited a depressed undertone which at times developed into general weakness. The chief reason for renewed selling was the unsatisfactory drift of our relations with Germany; the fear of a split between Congress and President Wilson, and the steady pressure of foreign liquidation of American securities in this market.

The immediate outlook is exceedingly uncertain. If home influences rule we should have an active and advancing market, but they do not. On the contrary this market is dominated more than ever by the disastrous conflict across the sea. The pressure of foreign holdings of American securities is constant and must continue in view of enormous loans still pending. Confidence is also easily disturbed by any pernicious activities emanating from Washington. If any improvement were brought about in our relations with Germany, stocks would be quickly felt in the security markets.

THREE TUBES OF GERMS MISSING

Joy Riders Return Automobile of Philadelphia Physician, but Keep His Diphtheria Cultures.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—Joy riders who stole an automobile owned by Dr. M. S. Percival yesterday are supposed to be walking around somewhere to-day with three tubes full of diphtheria cultures in their pockets and without the least suspicion that they are carrying enough germs to infect a dozen men. The diphtheria tubes were the only articles the thieves retained when they abandoned the automobile. Detectives are seeking the germs.

Dr. Percival is a district surgeon attached to the Bureau of Health. He had just finished a tour, in which he had examined several suspicious cases for the Department of Health. The cultures were in a small package in one of the door pockets of the automobile.

HARVARD MAN TELLS OF WAR

Gallipoli Survivor, Wounded Many Times, is Back at His Studies.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 23.—Alonso John Gallishaw has resumed his studies at Harvard after five exciting months as a member of the British Army in its unsuccessful attempt to force the Turkish defenses on the Gallipoli Peninsula during the Dardanelles campaign. The young student, who is one of forty survivors out of 1,000 men who left Newfoundland in the fall of 1914, was wounded several times. He has two slashes made by Turkish bayonets, several jagged marks about his legs and arms made by bursting shrapnel, and has not even yet recovered from the effects of a sniper's bullet that entered his left shoulder, struck his spine and came out through the right shoulder. He discovered afterward that this bullet had been fired by a mere girl who was hidden in a near-by tree.

"Hellish," Gallishaw says simply to describe his experiences. "None of us ever expected to come out alive. Men prayed for a 'cushy' wound, which means a slight wound that would let one get out for a while. We knew we would never take Atchi Baba. The quarters were vermin-infested. It was hot all day and cold at night, and there were awful drafts through the trenches.

Gallishaw believes that the original scheme of General Ian Hamilton for landing a surprise party on the peninsula was good.

"But there was a mix-up in landing," he said. "We remained on the beach instead of going for the Turks at once. Too much time was wasted making plans. The result was that they were impregnably intrenched when we advanced. It was hopeless then."

Gallishaw affirms that the Turks are brave, clean fighters, but he characterized the German officers who were commanding them as "swine." He also paid high tribute to the bravery of the Australians at Gallipoli, but in his opinion the Irish were the fiercest and most daring of all the troops who had part in this the hottest campaign of the war.

German Tells of the Wonders of Artifical Arm, American Invention

Dr. Max Kohn of Berlin, who lost his left arm in battle, recently delivered a lecture in Vienna before a large gathering of physicians to demonstrate the wonders of the Carnes artificial arm. This ingenious invention, as already described in the Herald, is named after its inventor, an American.

Dr. Kohn showed the physicians how the Carnes arm took the place of the lost member in most wonderful fashion. He showed how the arm can turn and twist, how it can reach in any direction and take hold of any object with the same facility as any natural arm and hand. The physician also demonstrated to his audience how readily he could open and close an umbrella, the facility with which he could write with the artificial member, put the hand in his pocket and take out loose change, put his gloves on, etc. He could take off his coat or put it on without assistance.

Dr. Kohn showed the simplicity of the mechanism, which controlled the movements of the hand and fingers, and said with an artificial arm of this type no inconvenience or annoyance was experienced. The invention is being used to replace amputated arms and hands in the German hospitals, and the results have been remarkable. Men who otherwise would have been afflicted for life now can attend to the work and business as before, and can even return to the front if need be.

HUMBERT HOLDS VERDUN.

Youngest Commander in French Army Directs Defence.

The youngest French General commanding an army in the field—Gen. Humbert—is having the chance at Verdun of gambling for the highest stakes of military renown, an opportunity to be envied by all his fellow commanders. He was appointed to take charge of the forces in the Argonne early last fall, succeeding Gen. Sarrail.

Gen. Sarrail was sent to Saloniki and Humbert was chosen to oppose the attacks which the German Crown Prince has been making against the fortress at Verdun at intervals for a year and a half.

Gen. Humbert was only a major when the war began, and his rapid promotion has been due to his ability to carry out the plans of Gen. Joffre, who is now at Verdun directing the defence.

Frozen Cistern Pump.

When you find the kitchen cistern pump is frozen solid to top, don't pour hot water in pump, as you spoil the leather sucker. Dip a cloth in hot or boiling water, wring cloth out and lay it around the body of pump, where the sucker is located, and in a minute or two you can, in the usual way, get water. The best way is to place handle close to pump when through pumping so as to have the sucker where you can apply hot cloth best.

Off to School, Full of Vim and Pep—Don't cram their little "tummies" with greasy meats, starchy potatoes or other indigestible foods. One or two Shredded Wheat Biscuits with hot milk make a warm, nourishing meal that supplies all the material needed for their growing bodies. The perfect food to study on, to grow on, to play on. The crispness of the shreds encourages thorough chewing, which develops sound teeth and healthy gums. Being ready-cooked, it is so easy to prepare a warm, nourishing meal with Shredded Wheat in a few moments—no kitchen worry or work.

HYDRO LINEMAN ELECTROCUTED

Gordon Hewson, of the Local Hydro Staff, Meets Death While Making Repairs at Aylmer and Murray Streets

Gordon Hewson, a lineman with the Hydro-Electric Co., was electrocuted at the corner of Murray and Aylmer streets yesterday afternoon about four o'clock. The young man, who was about 28 years of age, was working at the top of a pole when he came in contact with a live wire. Efforts at resuscitation by means of the pulmotor proved of no avail. He was the son of Mr. Harry Hewson of this city and had only been married for five weeks.

ANCIENT ARMORY FULL OF MUSKETS A CENTURY OLD

Pontypool Park, a Monmouthshire mansion, has just been the scene of an interesting discovery. In a secret cupboard was found a store of arms consisting of fifty flint-lock muskets, with bayonets attached, 100 spare bayonets, and five swords, all in excellent condition. They bear dates from 1761 to 1764, and are marked "Glamorgan M."

Apparently they were the secret armory prepared in anticipation of riot and mob law. From 1734 till 1774 succeeding Hanburys of Pontypool Park were members of Parliament for Monmouthshire, and at the period of riot and revolt which followed the efforts of George III. to put his heel on the neck of parliament Capel Hanbury was one of those whom the masses seemed to have regarded as enemies of the people.

It is surmised that it was Capel Hanbury who gathered together the muskets and bayonets for the arming of his retainers in the event of attack, and when the tide of popular fury ebbed, the Pontypool Park was spared, the arms lay in the cupboard neglected, and at last completely forgotten — to be unearthed when the old controversy between king and people is practically forgotten.

When a man has no good reason for doing a thing he has one good reason for letting it alone.

OTTAWA, March 1.—General Hughes announced in the Commons yesterday that the French were now holding their own, and a little more than their own.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Announcement of Italy's seizure of German ships is taken as the first of a series of acts eventually to lead to war.

Threatens Strike of German Toilers; Diet Member Denounces Agrarians

LONDON, March 1. — Reports which have been reaching England latterly of growing discontent among the masses of the German population seem to find confirmation in the proceedings of the Prussian Diet.

When the Diet started discussion of the food question, Minister of Agriculture von Schorlemer began by praising the agrarian policy, which had enabled Germany to hold out so long and would secure the nation's food for some years to come if the war were to last so long, but he added that Germany was not at all too well off and in any case she must economize if she was going to hold out to the end.

Socialist Deputy Hofer replied to the Minister's statement, making several severe criticisms which almost assumed a threatening tone. Among other things he said:

"If England has declared war upon us openly and properly and is employing all possible means to hinder our food supplies, the agrarians who are hiding their stores in order to provoke a rise in prices and starve our population are England's best allies and Germany's worst enemies."

The speaker was interrupted by protests and a great tumult and though being called to order, continued:

"The rise in agricultural produce is absolutely unjustifiable because wages have not been raised and those Russian prisoners who are made to work only get a few pence. The prices of barley and oats have risen by 130 per cent. The increase in the price of sugar means a present of 57,000,000 marks to the beet growers and refiners. Where is, then, the great spirit of German organization if 9,000,000 tons of potatoes have not been obtained from the 54,000,000 tons of the harvest?"

After noting the critical condition of Poland, Herr Hofer went on:

"It was said in committee that it was impossible to compel agrarians to intensify production, but you force millions of Germans to fight (tremendous uproar). Yes, you force them, and just as you force hundreds of thousands of soldiers to get out of the trenches and die you ought to compel agrarians to dispose of their acres so as to benefit the soldiers' starving wives. It is little consolation for us to hear that things are dearer abroad than here. If foods get any dearer the workingmen will be compelled by the impulse of self-preservation to go on strike, and then they will tear the national truce in shreds at your feet. We are going to do our duty and are warning you."

Neutrals recently in Germany declare that the popular feeling against the junker class is strongly marked. The junker class will not utilize German labour on their land because they can get Russian Polish prisoners of war for an eighth of the wage which would have to be paid to the German labourer.

Face Eruptions.

The old German doctor was right who said, "A good complexion must be swallowed, not rubbed on."

There is nothing safer or much better than senna paste for cleansing the system of impurities. Children may take it with perfect safety.

This is how to make it:

Take a half pound each of raisins and figs and one ounce of senna leaves.

Chop fine and put in a stewpan with a half pound of sugar and a half pint of boiling water. Let simmer slowly for 20 minutes, then pour out on oiled paper in a long baking tin to cool.

Take a piece an inch square at bedtime and afterwards regulate amount by effect.

Russia Likes New Premier Since He Declared Himself

M. Sturmer's Initial Statement of His Policy Well Received.

PETROGRAD, March 1.—Russia's new premier, M. Sturmer, is making a good impression. His appointment as M. Goremykin's successor was a surprise. He is 68 and has passed his whole life in government offices. Those who knew him regarded him simply as a bureaucrat. The public knew him hardly at all. He was understood to be a close friend of Goremykin. This was not a favourable advertisement for him. Goremykin has been blamed freely for lack of energy and initiative. The Russian press did not disguise its satisfaction at his retirement but it had few words of welcome for his successor. Nevertheless, Sturmer's initial statement of his policy was well received. Evidently he did not want to be considered a reactionary. He spoke in friendly terms of the duma and hinted that he expects it to take an active part in affairs when it resumed its session late in February or in March. Of the war he said: "We must win. There can be no talk of a separate peace for us, nor can the threat of exhaustion alarm us. How can this great country, so rich naturally and every day disclosing fresh treasures, be exhausted?" If words count, it is the growing opinion that the new premier will be a success.

HOW YOU MAY THROW AWAY YOUR GLASSES

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once, viz: to the Wayne Drug Company, or to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water, dissolve one Bon-Opto tablet. With this harmless lotion bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it, you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind or nearly so, or who wear glasses, might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late. Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches, and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better use it if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. OUR SERIAL STORY

The marvel was that no one was swept overboard. Nothing could have saved the men on deck had the Stella lurched on to her beam ends without warning; but the fleeting interval while she was being carried round on the pivot of her fore part enabled them to guard against the expected shock. Nine figures were visible, two standing on the port rails of the bridge, and the others on the deck rails, every man having braced his shoulders against the deck itself. Masts, funnel, and upper saloon were practically vertical with the plane of the sea, and the hull quivered and moved under the assault of each wave. Yet the very injuries that would swamp the vessel instantly when she rolled into deep water now gave her a brief lease of life. The rocks that pierced the hull held her fast. Her plight resembled that of some poor wretch stabbed mortally who breathes and groans in agony, only to die when the knife that causes his distress is withdrawn.

The horror of the sight brought a despairing cry to Yvonne's lips. "Peridot, Peridot, can nothing be done?" she shrieked, turning to the Breton sailor as though, at his prayer, the sky might open and Providence send relief.

The boat was now nearly abreast of the wreck, and running free before the wind. The girl's frantic appeal seemed to arouse the three men from a stupor of helplessness.

"Look out, everybody!" shouted Peridot. "We're going head on."

It was a dangerous manoeuvre in a heavy sea; but fortune favoured the Hirondelle in so far that no mountainous wave struck her quarter as she veered round. All were equally alive to the possibility of disaster. Ingersoll, though he uttered no word till the boat had reversed her course, was almost moved to protest.

"We are powerless," he said, coming aft to make his voice audible. "Even if some of the yacht's people are swept clear of the reef, they will be smothered long before they drift in this direction. The thing was so unexpected that none of them has secured a cork jacket, or even a life belt."

"There is one chance in a hundred, Monsieur," said Peridot, speaking so that Ingersoll alone could hear. "The point is—will you take it? You and Monsieur Tollemache would agree, of course. Will you risk Mademoiselle's life as well?"

"A chance? What sort of chance?"

"I know every inch of Les Verres. A little inlet, not much longer than the yacht, and perhaps forty feet wide, runs in from the south just where she lies. Her hull and the reef itself form a breakwater. We can make it, and get a line aboard."

"Then for the love of Heaven why wait?"

"One moment, Monsieur. We have yet a second or two for decision. You see how the wreck lifts each time a sea hits her. The tide is rising. If she shifts when we are in there, goodby to the Hirondelle!"

The eyes of the two met, and Ingersoll wavered, but only as a brave man takes breath before essaying some supreme test of hardihood.

"My daughter would never forgive me if she knew I chose the coward's path," he said. "Go ahead, Peridot! Tell us what we have to do, and it shall be done."

A cheerful chuckle was the Breton's answer as he thrust the tiller over to port and sent the boat reeling on the starboard tack. Once she was fairly balanced, he began to bellow instruction.

"Within a couple of minutes I'll put her head on again, and we'll drift alongside the ship yonder. Monsieur Ingersoll and Monsieur Tollemache will each take a sweep, and end the after part off the rocks. Mademoiselle will remain for'ard, and be ready to drop the anchor as a last resource if I find the tide running too strong for the sweeps to hold us back. Leave the rest to me!"

It is a glorious heritage of the English-speaking race that the men of other nations regard sea valor as the birthright of its sons and daughters. Peridot had stated the case for and against the attempted rescue to Ingersoll as a father. When the die was cast, the decision made, he counted on ces Americains acting with the same cool heroism he would himself display.

The Hirondelle quickly reached the position from which the Breton judged it possible to drop into a natural dock, the existence of which he had learned when catching lobsters and crabs. Wind and tide carried the boat swiftly backward. At first it seemed that she was simply rising to destruction, and every eye was bent on the swirling inclusion toward which she was speeding rather than on the stricken yacht. Even Peridot's face paled beneath its bronze, and he had a hand uplifted as a warning to Yvonne to be ready instantly with the anchor, while Ingersoll and Tollemache were standing, each with a long oar couched like a knight's lance, when the Hirondelle swept past the bows of the wreck; only to be checked immediately by a backwash from the higher part of the reef.

"Dieu merci!" sighed Peridot, jubilant because his faith was justified. "Keep her steady now, mes amis, and with God's help we'll succeed!"

A tremendous sea dashed over the Stella, and for one appalling moment it appeared that she must roll bodily into deep water, and involve the Hirondelle in her own ruin. But she settled again, with a rending of her framework and inner fittings that was sweetest music in Peridot's ears, since it meant that she was becoming wedged more firmly on the teeth of the rock, and, owing to her construction, possessed no natural buoyancy to be affected by the rising tide.

Already he had a coil of rope in his right hand, and was yelling orders to the crew of the Stella. The noise of the sea pounding on Les Verres was deafening, but a hoarse cry from one of the men on the bridge penetrated the din:

"No comprenez' Heave away'"

So they were English or Americans—which none could tell. Even at a distance of fifteen feet or thereabouts it was hardly possible to distinguish nationality by facial traits owing to the torrents falling continuously over the rounded hull, the smoke pouring from the funnel, the flapping of the loosened sails, and the clouds of spray that lashed the Hirondelle. At any rate, Tollemache, deciding instantly, as was his way, sent back an answering shout:

"Haul in twenty feet of the rope when it reaches you, make fast, and throw back the loose end. You must get across as best you can. No time to rig a safer tackle."

"Ay, ay, Sir!" was the reply.

"Heave away, Peridot!"

Tollemache, though not neglecting his special duty, spared one glance over his shoulder; but the rope did not undertake its spiral flight at once. The resourceful Breton awaited a momentary lull in the wind. Then the heavy coil was flung, and fell into the hands of one of the men on the bridge. As he was securing it to a stanchion, his companion, he whose gigantic stature had first caught Yvonne's attention, climbed into the tiny wicker lifeboat, and reappeared almost immediately, carrying a woman in his arms.

The sight caused a fresh thrill on board the Hirondelle. Somehow it was totally unexpected.

"Fools!" said Tollemache, meaning, no doubt, that men might, if they chose, venture their lives in fair fight against the storm gods, but they had no right to subject a woman to the ordeal.

Ingersoll overheard, and understood. He even smiled. Lorry regarded Yvonne as a chum to be trusted in fair weather or foul. It did not occur to him that her father might reasonably have urged the same plea against attempting a seemingly mad and impracticable rescue.

Evidently some fierce dispute was being waged on the Stella. The other man on the bridge, who turned out to be the captain, had thrown back the rope of Peridot, and summoned all hands to gather near. Now he was urging the big man to intrust his inanimate burden to one of the sailors, but met with the most positive refusal. Every second was vital, and Peridot blazed into annoyance.

"Gars!" he roared. "If they waste time, I'll back out!"

The commander of the yacht, however, was well aware of the greatest peril which threatened now; so without more ado he steadied the giant while the latter raised the woman's body to his left shoulder, grasped the double rope in both hands, and lowered himself into the water.

The passage was not difficult. The ropes were fairly taut, and the distance between the two craft not more than sixteen feet. Indeed, such a Hercules in physique might well regard the task as a mere nothing, and he set out with quiet confidence, extending his left arm in each onward movement and closing up with the right.

Unsightly Pimples Covered His Face.

All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

You cannot make a good complexion from the outside; you must get to the seat of the trouble. You must make the blood pure and rich by taking a medicine that will drive out all the impurities and poisons from the blood; one that drives out everything from the system that is the cause of these unsightly skin eruptions.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters; a medicine that has been used with the greatest success for the past forty years; a medicine you don't experiment with when you buy it.

Mr. Lennox D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Last winter my face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fail. I was one day to a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B.B.B., so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

FATE—AND THEIR NAMES.

The Meeting Between Charles Barton and John Quill.

By CLARA A. CRADY.

Charles Barton separated himself from the train with which he had been associated for the greater part of thirty-six hours and drew in a great breath of Lynnville's exhilarating air. Then he set out with long, swinging strides to mount the hill beyond which lay the village proper.

So much information he had deigned to accept from the loquacious station master, but to the latter's plainly expressed curiosity as to whom he sought in the village Barton had turned a deaf ear. He was aware of the fact that news acquired wings in small places, and it was part of his plan to take John Quill by surprise. Taking, as he was, advantage of an unexpected business trip east to meet face to face his hitherto unseen correspondent, he had no doubt as to the success of his plan.

That John was only nineteen and an orphan Barton knew, but he had respected the younger man's reticence concerning himself to such an extent that he had never tried to force his confidence further. The ubiquitous picture postcard was responsible for the correspondence, which had its beginning more than two years before, when Barton, in a spirit of fun, had answered a request in the "Postcard Exchange" of an illustrated weekly for views of his state.

"HE WILL NOT BE BACK FOR SOME TIME," SHE INTERPOSED HURRIEDLY.

The response had been prompt and was accompanied by so many ingenious questions that Barton, in order to do justice to his native state, had found it necessary to write a letter. It was strange how soon he came to watch for the weekly letter which became an established custom, but only he himself knew how far the simple faith, the unconscious hero worship, that breathed in every line of John Quill's letters were responsible for Barton's escape from the many temptations that surround a young man alone in a western town.

He had reached the end of the village before his eyes found the little brown cottage, with its big honeysuckle on each side of the gate and its square porch overgrown with the same vine. Everything looked as John had once described it to be.

He knocked firmly on the front door of the cottage. It was quickly opened, and Barton found himself gazing into the prettiest face he had ever seen.

He asked, "Is this where John Quill lives? I'm Charles Barton," offering his card. She put out her hand somewhat hesitatingly, he thought, and the bit of pasteboard fluttered to their feet. With a muttered apology, he stooped to pick it up. When his eyes again sought the girl's face there was a confusion in it which the slight accident hardly warranted.

"I'd like to see your brother," he suggested politely.

He was not prepared for the sudden terror which flashed into her face, and, with a view to putting her at her ease, he continued amiliingly: "You see, I'm taking the relationship for granted. The likeness to a picture of himself, which John once sent me, is too great to admit of a doubt."

The girl flushed and at the same time looked relieved. "Yes," she breathed softly, "I'm his sister. And I'm sorry, but my—John is away at present."

Barton's face fell. "I, too, am sorry," he said simply and lingered.

The girl eyed him doubtfully. She seemed to be undecided, but finally asked slowly, "Will you come in?"

But he had seen the effort which the words cost her, so he prevaricated slightly.

"No, thanks. I have my train to make. When will your brother be back?" is a quick after thought. "I could stop off again if"—

"He will not be back for some time," she interposed hurriedly. "Do not ask me where he is," appealingly, "for I cannot tell you."

A suspicion was dawning in Barton's mind. "Excuse me," he begged gently. "Perhaps your brother is in some difficulty, some trouble, and I could help him."

"No, no; you cannot help him; I mean, he is in no trouble," she corrected herself hastily.

"There's something wrong there," he reflected as he retraced his steps toward the station. "Why didn't the boy tell me in his last letter that he was going away? Is it possible that the young cub has managed to disgrace himself and left his sweet little sister to bear the burden? But, oh! I'm sure he's not that kind. A few inquiries in the village might—but Charles Barton is no spy. I'll let the matter drop for a few days; then I'll try again to gain the shrinking confidence of John Quill's sister. And woe to those who are at the bottom of the trouble!"

But when, four days later, he mounted the hill that led to the village he was forced to confess that the interest which he felt in John Quill's sister far exceeded any he had ever entertained in respect to the youth. The girl's sweet face was ever before him.

As he entered the village he came face to face with the girl of his thoughts. She was coming out of a big house, and she carried a huge bundle—sewing, he rightly judged as he hastened to relieve her of it. The radiant blush with which she thanked him Barton took as a favorable sign.

"I've come back," he said eagerly.

"I'm so glad—I mean," as she detected the look that leaped into his eyes, "I'm glad of this chance to confess in person something that has been worrying me greatly. I was going to write"— She was interrupted by the postmistress, who, taking advantage of her position to gratify a very natural curiosity, came running out on her porch.

"Hey!" she shouted. "Here's a letter for you," frantically waving the missive in question. Barton stepped forward to take it, and in doing so his eyes inadvertently fell on the superscription. He read no farther than the name, but there was a question in his eyes when they met hers. She answered it bravely.

"Yes, it is mine. My name is Jonquil March. There never was a John Quill." She was walking faster, and her face was very red.

"Why did you do it?" he asked simply.

"Because my life here was so desperately lonely after mother, who was all I had, died. Oh, I don't suppose that you'll understand! But I've always longed for the great west, where I was born, but which I scarcely remember. At first it was a desire to know it better that made me drift into the correspondence, and I continued with it because I came to enjoy it for its own sake," she concluded with unconscious abandon.

"But the photograph?" Barton groped.

"It was taken after some theatricals several years ago," she explained. "She," pointing back toward the post-office, "never suspected, because I used to do newspaper corresponding under the name of John Quill." They were at her gate. "I do not expect your forgiveness," she faltered.

"Do you know why I came back?" he demanded.

"No," Jonquil's tongue faltered, but her eyes told a different story.

"Because I love you," he declared masterfully, "and because I want to marry you and take you with me to the great west you love so well. Say that you love me, too, if only a little bit," he pleaded.

"But the trick," she temporized. "How can you forgive"—

"Bless the trick!" interrupted Barton joyously. "Why fight with it when it has been the means of bringing me a wife?"

Cause of Misery.

Here is an observation from Carlyle: "All misery is faculty misdirected—strength that has not yet found its way." This is undoubtedly true. All suffering and failing can be traced back to one getting out of the true path. It may not sometimes be one's fault. Ignorance or environment may intervene and lead us astray. But all progress consists in one finding the true way of one's strength; to see that the faculty is rightly directed.

Finding this path is the end of knowledge and civilization. This means doing the right thing, physically, mentally, morally; obeying God's law—that's it; that is all there is to it. That is what keeps the strength and faculty intact and makes life worth living. The perfect mortal is the one whose faculty is rightly directed and whose strength has found its way. It is that that makes the true, manly, useful, happy life; that makes the life last longer and keeps it sweet and wholesome while it lasts.—Ohio State Journal.

Well-known Women.

Chatham, Ont.—"I was sick for about four years. Got very weak, could not eat to amount to anything. I got very thin and had no strength at all. I was very much discouraged at times—thought I was never going to get better. I could not walk a block without feeling all tired-out. I took different medicines but did not get the help I needed. A friend of mine advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I began to take it with the 'Pleasant Pellets' and by the time I had taken two bottles I was well on the road to recovery, and in six months I was entirely well. My appetite came back and I gained in flesh. Now I am as strong and healthy as any one could wish to be. I owe it all to Dr. Pierce's medicines and I am glad of the opportunity to give testimony in their favor; they have done wonders for me."—Miss THELMA PARKER, 141 E. King St.

Chatham, Ont.—"I have taken Dr. Pierce's medicine with good results. I was weak and run down, lost my appetite and got very thin. Art Criticism.

The great Constable at a varnishing day at the Royal academy paused before A's picture and said:

"Very good, especially the sky. The sky is superb."

Then he passed on to B and said: "A's picture is very bad. Go look at it. The sky is like putty."

So B went and looked and then exclaimed as if to himself:

"Why, I like the sky!"

"Well," cried A, the painter of the picture, "why shouldn't you like my sky?"

"But Constable said it was like putty," B explained confusedly.

So A, in a furious rage, strode up to Constable and shouted:

"Constable, you're a humbug! I never asked for your opinion about my picture, yet you came to me and praised it. You said that especially you liked my sky. Then at once you go off and tell some one else that my sky is like putty."

Constable listened with a smile. He was not at all confused.

"My dear fellow, you don't understand," he said; "I like putty."

DAYS OF ADVENTURE AT FRONT CONTINUE

Clever Ruse and Hairbreadth Escape by French Broke Monotony

H. Warner Allen, the official observer with the French armies for the British newspapers sent the following account of the situation along the Aisne River: The struggle for every poin of vantage between the two lines is a continuous and desperate one. Every little mound and every bit of cover in the debatable ground between the trenches is fought for again and again; is won, lost and won again. In this give and take fighting the initiative and dash of the French soldier are invaluable, and so little are they cast down if the enemy succeeds for a moment in occupying one of these disputed positions that they set out to recapture it the next day. On the banks of the Aisne, just half-way between the French and the German positions, there is a small mound or hillock that overlooks the German lines. One night fifteen men and a non-commissioned office crept out of their trench, crawled through the barbed wire entanglements, crossed the river, and quietly installed themselves on the crest of this mound. In absolute silence they set to work to dig themselves in, and constructed two trenches and a fairly strong dug-out. They spent forty-eight hours in their dangerous position unobserved, and they admitted later that they were the longest hours in their lives.

Trapped!

At last they were discovered, and big projectiles from a German eight-inch battery began to burst on their make-shift entrenchments. After the bombardment the French soldiers came out and peeped over the edge of their shattered trench—only to find a new menace. The Germans, considering that the French position had by this time been cleared, had sent forward forty men. This detachment had already reached the first trench which the French had dug, and was hard at work repairing the damage caused by their own shells in order to use it for themselves. When they had finished their work they advanced towards the second trench. The French hastily scuttled back to their dug-out, and remained there in perfect silence. The enemy's men actually entered the trench and reconnoitred, but concluded that none of the Frenchmen were left in the position, and returned to the first trench.

Boches Outwitted

The position of the French soldiers, cooped up in their dug-out was anything but pleasant, and they decided to send back word to the French troops behind them, and a corporal volunteered to carry the message, and somehow or other he made his way out of the trench, crawled along the river bank, and slipped into the river itself. There, with the water up to his waist, and not thirty feet below the German position, he passed across to the French lines, and delivered his message to the officer commanding. The officer, after consideration, decided that the men must try to get back to the French lines. The corporal went back across with his message. One by one, at intervals of two minutes, the sixteen Frenchmen crept past the German position, and slipped into the river. The enemy did not discover them until just as the last man was reaching the French lines, and then opened a heavy fire. The whole party regained the French trenches without losing a man.

Afflicted with Lame Back

THREE YEARS AGO COULD NOT SWEEP THE FLOOR.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer so much excruciating pain and agony are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The kidneys are overtaxed—given more work than they can do, and when the back aches and pains it is hard for a woman to look after her household duties, for no woman can be strong and well when the kidneys are out of order.

On the first sign of any weakness in the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the weak, aching back, and prevent any serious kidney trouble liable to follow.

Mrs. L. Goudshaw, 683 Manning Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not even sweep the floor. I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and before I had used one box there was a great improvement, and my back was completely cured. I highly recommend 'Doan's' for lame back."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Late Mr. A. R. Creelman, K.C.

One of the outstanding figures of the Canadian bar passed away in Montreal in the early part of the week in the death of Mr. A. R. Creelman, K.C., for eight years general counsel to the Canadian Pacific Ry.

Mr. Creelman was of Irish and Scotch origin, he being the son of the late James Rutherford Creelman and Isabella Christina Patterson Creelman. Born 66 years ago at Richibucto, N. B., he was educated at the Grammar School there and at the Chatham (N.B.) Academy. He studied law with the late Hon. Adam Crooks, Q.C., was called to the Ontario bar in 1876 and to the bar of Quebec in 1903, and was created a Q.C. in 1889, by Lord Stanley of Preston, then Governor-General of Canada and later Earl of Derby. Mr. Creelman's talents carried him steadily forward in his profession, and he became one of the leaders of the bar in Ontario, being for years associated in partnership with such famous lawyers as the late D'Alton McCarthy, Q.C., M.P., the late B. B. Osler, Q.C., and Mr. John Hoskin, K.C. He remained a member of the Toronto firm of McCarthy, Osler, Hoskin & Creelman until 1901, when he was appointed chief solicitor to the Canadian Pacific Railway, taking up permanent residence in Montreal at that time. He was well known as one of the leading commercial lawyers in Canada, particularly expert in insurance law. In 1905 he assumed the title of general counsel, a post he held until 1913, when he resigned, but remained a director until the following year, a position he occupied for 4 years, having been elected in 1910 to take the place of Sir George A. Drummond. He was also a director of the Kingston & Pembroke Railway. Mr. Creelman was a member of the committee which raised an endowment fund for Upper Canada College in Toronto in 1900, and was appointed an honorary corresponding secretary of the Royal Colonial Institute, London, in 1906. He was a Liberal in political belief, but took no active part in politics. In faith he was a Presbyterian, being a member of St. Paul's Church. Mr. Creelman was devoted to clean and manly sport, doing much to further the interests of cricket, hockey, curling, bowling and golf, and in 1900 he was elected president of the Canadian Cricket Association.

"HANDS ACROSS THE SEA"—"The Government that shakes its fist and its finger afterward falls into contempt."—From New York Evening Sun.

SIGNIFICANT NATIONAL DIFFERENC

When the German authorities, military or civil, decide that in the national interest some change in established habits of living should be made by the German population, an order to that effect is issued. And, with few signs for protest, if any, it is promptly obeyed, no matter how irksome may be the deprivations or hardships caused by its execution.

The advantages of this method, especially when a nation is at war and the war isn't going as well as it might, are sufficiently obvious to make their enumeration unnecessary. The success of the plan, however, is conditioned by the temperament of the people upon whom it is imposed, and it is evident that the British authorities feel that they must resort to other means except in emergencies more desperate than they have yet encountered. So when they want the British public to do this or that—to ride less in automobiles, for instance, or to employ fewer servants than have hitherto been considered necessary for comfort and social propriety—it is not orders that are issued, but appeals, accompanied by careful explanation of the reasons why the old ways are no longer commendable.

Which system will work out best in the end remains to be seen, but the difference between them is important and significant. It arises, presumably, from the unlike notions as to government, and liberty that characterize two peoples, one of which revolted against the sterner realities of feudalism several centuries ago, while the other either submitted to or exercised practically all of them until times well within the memory of many men still alive: In the one case compulsions are either resented fiercely or endured with keen impatience, while in the other they are more or less willingly accepted as natural and inevitable.

Pneumonia Finds Its Victims Weakened By Colds and Grip

This Letter Tells How to Gain Strength After Colds by Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food—Pneumonia is Prevented.

Epidemics of colds and grip are almost invariably followed by much loss of life from pneumonia. When the body is worn down by colds and the lungs weakened from coughing, pneumonia finds an easy victim.

Careful inquiry into many thousands of cases of pneumonia shows that this disease usually attacks the person who is tired and worn out, and who is therefore lacking in resisting power.

In this letter is described a case in which the patient was in the greatest danger of contracting pneumonia or some similar disease, but fortunately she sought the aid of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and was soon restored to health and strength.

Miss E. J. Buswell, Centralia, Ont., writes: "Last winter my mother contracted a bad cold. She was bothered with shortness of breath, wheezing, fevered and too sore to cough. Our doctor prescribed treatment, which brought relief from these symptoms, but when she got up she was tired, always tired and weak. I got her three boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and she soon improved. Her eyes became clear and bright, the ashen hue left the face and she began once more to take up the reins and look after the household duties."

It is always wise to keep the vitality of the body at high-water mark in order that the attack of disease may be resisted. Rich, red blood is the greatest of germicides, and because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms rich, red blood it is a most effective means of preventing germ disease such as grip, pneumonia and consumption.

Every day we are learning more and more the value of preventive treatment. That is one reason why the sales of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food are increasing so enormously. People are coming to realize how much wiser it is to keep well than to try to obtain cure after some serious disease has gained a foothold. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

BEATEN TURKEY TURNS AGAINST TEUTON ALLIES

Travellers arriving from Constantinople declare that the situation in Turkey not only has not been improved by the arrival of the Germans after crushing Serbia, but is getting worse than ever, says the Boston Globe correspondent.

Even the most enthusiastic war-brand Turks are becoming convinced that the destiny of Osmanli is doomed to be one of humiliation and destruction.

While in appearance preparations are being made for the Egyptian expedition, and every means are sought for the maintenance of the war, in reality all the Turks, old and young alike, are looking forward to the end of this bloody affair, and for peace at any cost.

In the last week of the year Taalat Bey, the shrewd partner of Enver, who is omnipotent in turning the wheel of State wherever danger is anticipated, went before the Medjils (Parliament) and made such gloomy declarations about the economic and financial standing of the country that if similar statements had been made two months ago by anyone else, such an audacious person would have been shot before leaving the gates of Parliament.

Taalat is reported as saying to the members of the Ottoman Parliament —"I regret to declare that the war has cost us very dearly. All our financial resources have been dried up. There is no more customs revenue since our country is blockaded by our enemies. All working hands being taken into the army, no taxpayers are left in the land.

"We have to maintain our Government; we have to arm and supply our armies fighting in the East and West; we have to support orphans and widows left by our brave soldiers. Where is the money to come from? What little real estate and income taxes are collected in the capital and in a few large cities, like Smyrna and Bierout, are not even enough to keep the Administrative machine going.

Panics Common in Capital.

It is not only money that is scarce in Constantinople; all commodities are lacking, and misery reigns in many homes.

The price of everything has doubled during the winter. Only half a pound of bread is allowed each person daily; coffee is worth $1 a pound; petroleum, 30 cents a pound; rice, 40 cents; macaroni, 35 cents; sugar, 40 cents; a box of matches, formerly sold for 1 cent, now sells for 10 cents. In a word, prices are now five times higher than in normal times.

Panics are common in Constantinople, not only because of the want of money and bread, but owing to explosions and submarine exploits.

In the last week of the year the explosion at the munitions factory in Haskeny, on the Golden Horn, made Constantinople tremble like an earthquake. This factory was installed by Krupp, and over 2,000 workmen were employed there, mostly Germans, mainly in the manufacture of hand grenades.

By an accident the explosion happened at noontime and the storehouse for the mines next to the factory took fire. Over 1,500 persons were killed or wounded, the entire section of Hackeny and Kassim Pasha was burned to the ground; all the window panes were broken in Pera, and damage caused as far as Kadikeay and Makrikeny. All the shops were closed and people ran panic stricken to some point of safety.

The Turkish official announcement calls this an insignificant accident, and states that only five soldiers and six civilians were killed and a few wounded, while only one house was burned.

Yet eyewitnesses say that the damage was so great that some stone buildings were thrown into the Golden Horn, and even their places could not be located.

Subjects Impressed.

While the withdrawal of the Allies from Anafarta (Suvla Bay) gave rise to great rejoicing in Constantinople the Turks boasting of having 'thrown the English into the sea,' the arrival of the wounded from the Dardanelles has not stopped.

Travellers assert that every week thousands are brought to the city by the Red Cross transports, and in one week in December about 12,000 wounded and disabled soldiers were transported from Gallipoli. They say also that typhus and cerebro-spinal meningitis and other diseases are causing havoc in the ranks of the Turkish army. Hundreds are dying daily in Constantinople.

Consequently, the Turks in order to fill the ranks of their lost army corps, are taking every step, legal or illegal, to get new recruits. Recently all Persian subjects, numbering 15,000 young men, were forcibly taken into the army in spite of the protests of the Persian Ambassador.

In the same way Serbian and Montenegrins found in Constantinople were conscribed, although, as it is, I learned, Mr. Morgenthau has taken all the necessary steps to get them liberated. In the provinces men up to 60, and in the capital up to 50, have already been recruited.

It is also reported that the Germans are bringing pressure to bear on the Government to levy all persons exempted from military service, and especially those who have paid the exoneration tax. The number of such persons is put approximately at 85,000.

Moreover, one must take into consideration that the Turkish army of to-day is not that of a year ago. The young, well-drilled soldiers are gone forever and the present army is composed mostly of boys of seventeen or eighteen, with no military training and men of from forty to fifty-five.

However, while the quality of the Turkish army is inferior to the armies that the Turks lost in the Caucasus campaign and in Gallipoli, they are better armed.

Besides, the Turks now have facilities for receiving heavy artillery, which they hitherto had not. It is learned also that 40,000 Austrian uniforms have arrived in Constantinople for distribution among the Turkish soldiers as they were needed badly, not any sort being left in the country.

In return for the munitions and guns the Germans are sending to Turkey they have taken from Turkey up to date, great quantities of figs from Smyrna and cotton from Adana.

As for the grain and other articles of necessity that the Germans were expecting to get from Turkey, undoubtedly they will be sorely disappointed. German-Turkish relations are becoming more strained every day.

Latest reports say that German arrogance has aroused ill-feeling among the Turks, and the Germans are generally and openly detested.

The people, who suffer a great deal from the lack and dearness of the necessaries of life, are alarmed at the opening of communication between Berlin and Constantinople, being afraid that they may take away the little provisions that are left in the country. For this reason the Turks oppose openly furnishing cereals or other things to the Germans.

The antagonism between the two allies had advanced so far that it is reported that the Kaiser has addressed a dispatch to Enver Pasha asking him to employ his influence and every possible means to end the conflict. But one must not attach too much importance to this, since it is an absolute fact that the Turks are not masters in their own country and the Germans are in a position to make things go their own way.

The expedition for Egypt is purely a German scheme, and the Turks are driven into it, although they well understand that they have nothing to gain from such an exhausting and dangerous undertaking.

The members of the Young Turk Committee became so alarmed that they demanded the German Government should give an explanation.

"We are not going to pick the chestnuts out of the fire for the Germans," said a prominent member of the committee.

Talaat Bey, representing the Government, assured his co-workers that "We are concentrating all our forces for the Egyptian expedition. Egypt will become an integral part of the Ottoman Empire in all respects; there is no question of making any arrangements on this point with the Germans."

WONDERFUL HOSPITAL

Great Underground Installation Within Yards of French Front

The correspondent of a London newspaper describes a wonderful subterranean hospital, only 500 feet from a French front trench, which he visited "somewhere in France." His description is as follows: "But here am I, ten feet below the ground and 500 yards from a front trench, and I stand in the most modern and up-to-date operating theatre. One's nostrils are assailed by the smell of soap and chloroform; soft-footed nurses flit about; doctors, many of them fashionable Parisian surgeons, walk from bed to bed, dressed in spotless white smocks. Iron bedsteads, painted white, with white counterpanes, shelter patients waiting for the operating table. A man's life often hangs by a thread after he has been hit, and the thread would often snap if he were taken along the shell-swept roads in a motor ambulance to a hospital behind the lines.

"This underground operating theatre is by way of being an experiment, and its undoubted success will lead to the rapid establishment of similar hospitals right along the front in France. The first difficulty to overcome was the want of light. A young doctor hit on a clever idea. The daylight streams in—by what means it is perhaps, not wise to say—and the skylights are proof against asphyxiating gases. By night, operations are performed by the aid of acetylene. The most exacting surgeon would find nothing lacking in this wonderful place. Hot water appears by magic; the floors are scrubbed three times a day; on glass shelves in glass cupboards are all the instruments for easing pain. And all this ten feet below the ground and 500 yards from the front trench."

The General's Teeth

On the retreat from Mons a "distinguished general" thought to snatch a few hours in bed in a peasant's cottage. He left his artificial teeth in the washstand. At night he was aroused with the news that the enemy was near and hurriedly left, forgetting his teeth. After subsisting on [illegible] for a fortnight the battle [illegible] brought the general back to the village. Although only the four walls of the cottage were left, one of the general's A.D.C.'s explored the wreckage. Under a lot of broken bones and champagne bottles they found the teeth intact. The general then had a square meal.

THE BIG GERMAN OFFENSIVE IN THE WEST HAS DWINDLED

MANY LINERS ARE WITHIN WAR ZONE

GERMAN ATTACKS ON VERDUN ARE DWINDLING SAYS FRENCH REPORT

Huns Have Made No Further Progress and Artillery Bombardment Slackened Before the Vigorous Fire of French Guns---French Military Experts Stated That the Situation Around Verdun is Now Well in Hand and Quite Satisfactory.

NOTHING OF IMPORTANCE TO REPORT

PARIS, March 1.—The German attack on Verdun has made no further progress and is now dwindling, according to the latest information reaching Paris. The Germans captured the Village of Manheulles, but gained no strategic advantage thereby, since the whole region is being flooded. TThe French fell back slightly to a strong line from which they can hold the village under their fire. The bombardment to the north of Verdun which continued with great violence during the preceding night, slackened yesterday before the vigorous response of French artillery and the desperate attacks which had been made under cover of darkness by the German infantry in the Douaumont region were not renewed. The French troops still surround the ruined fort of Douaumont, in which several hundred Germans are cut off. That the situation around Verdun is now well in hand and considered quite satisfactory from the French point of view, is freely stated by military experts. Both sides are profiting by a period of comparative calm to bring up fresh forces and supplies of ammunition. While it is realized that the Germans have not yet reached the limit of their offensive resources, it is stated that any fresh onslaught on their part is awaited by the French with supreme confidence in their ability to hurl

CHIEF ATTACKS NOW ARE TO EAST OF VERDUN

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, March 1.—Six miles east and northeast of Verdun, a shifting German attack is being directed with the greatest violence against Forts De Vaux and De Tavannes. The Teutons are battering the French positions on the Mez-Verdun railway with heavy artillery brought up from Etain. The French are making their stand at the railway station of Eix. The guns of Fort De Tavannes two miles away, have beaten back charge after charge by whole German brigades. North and South of the railway, the Crown Prince is smashing heavily at the French front aiming to draw the German net around the French fortress. The Teutons moving southward from Dieppe are advancing on Fort De Vaux, preceded by a hurricane fire of artillery. The French are replying shell for shell, and holding their positions east of Vaux village. Thirteen miles southeast of Verdun the city of Fresnes, an important highway centre, is two-thirds surrounded by the Germans. Vicious fighting is occurring around Manheulles two miles to the northwest, the French attempting to recapture the position and strengthen their front at Fresnes. The latest despatches from Paris report the French positions holding firm along the eight-mile front north of Verdun. Artillery duels are breaking out along the whole western front, from the Belgian coast to the Vosges. The opinion is divided here as to whether these form the prelude to a general offensive by the Germans, or are intended to prevent the shifting of French reserves to the Verdun front. Hand to hand fighting around Fort Douaumont continues with the greatest fury, Paris reported today. French and Germans are in such close contact that neither side has been able to use artillery effectively.

NOTHING OF IMPORTANCE SAYS FRENCH STATEMENT

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, March 1.—The French War Office announces: "In the region to the north of Verdun as well as in the Voevre, there has been nothing of importance to report. During last night there was an intermittent bombardment at various points of our front between Regnieville and Remenauville. To the west of Pont-a-Mousson our artillery fire was directed against the second and third enemy lines, where the Germans apparently were putting through certain preparatory evolutions.

"In Alsace the fire of our batteries has been directed against the roads of communication of the enemy.

"In the region of Cernay, Valely of Thur, a French aeroplane equipped with double motors, was successful in an encounter with an aeroplane of the enemy. A German machine fell at LaBassee into the German trenches and at once caught on fire."

PRESIDENT WANTS THE BACKING OF THE CONGRESS

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Germany to-day inaugurated her new submarine campaign of frightfulness, but no fresh horror is reported. The State Department has not protested against the German intentions, and President Wilson's pressure on Berlin has been withdrawn temporarily in an effort to force both Houses of Congress to vote their confidence in the President. The Teutons pretend to believe that the President is speaking for himself, and that Congress is not behind him. Mr. Wilson wants that point settled in advance, so that when his final decision is made the Germans will know that there is no court of appeal, and that any refusal to meet the President's demands will entail a severance of diplomatic relations.

LONDON, March 1.—The British steamer Thornaby has been sunk, and all members of the crew were killed or drowned.

AMSTERDAM, March 1.—Advices received here from Berlin this afternoon reported that a German declaration of war against Portugal is imminent.

IF YOU WANT TO REALIZE VERDUN SEE THE PICTURES

"Fighting in France" Films Will Give You an Idea of What is Taking Place on Western Front To-day—Wonderful Pictures by Soldier Operators

GREAT GUNS AT WORK

If you want to get an idea of the terrible fighting around Verdun at the present moment, don't fail to see the French government's official motion pictures, "Fighting in France," at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights under the auspices of the Examiner. These pictures, taken at the front by soldier operators, four of whom were wounded in the process, will leave you with a clear understanding of the situation at Verdun, for one section of the film shows the artillery preparation for the drive made by the French last September in the Champagne. In this picture you will see how hundreds of guns are concentrated and you will be able to realize as you see fifteen miles of front trenches battered into ruins, just what is taking place on the western front. Not only that, but it is reasonably certain that some of the men and the guns you will see in the pictures are those that are holding the Germans in check in their fierce attack upon the French stronghold.

The public should not confuse this picture with others they have seen. They are not posed or arranged, but are simply a record in motion picture form of important events at the front. One wonderful picture shows the procession of 21,000 German prisoners to the rear after the battle of Champagne.

Nothing you have read or seen will prove as educative as the official French pictures. Don't fail to see them to-morrow night.

TWELVE BIG LINERS ARE IN WAR ZONE

LONDON, March 1.—The scheduled opening of the new submarine campaign of the Teutonic Powers, which was set for to-day, finds twelve big liners in or near the war zone, in which Austrian and German undersea boats are operating. The first great sea tragedy, if one comes, is expected to come in the Mediterranean. The number of Austrian and German submersibles operating off the Italian coast is known to have been greatly increased recently. To meet the German charge that British merchantmen have been instructed to attack submarines on sight, the British Government is contemplating making known to the United States and other neutrals the exact contents of the Admiralty's instructions to merchantmen. Lord Robert Cecil, the new minister of the blockade, declares that the German statement is false, and is supported only by distortion by the Germans of a passage in the instructions to British merchantmen.

ACCOMMODATION AT ARMOURIES TAXED TO THE LIMIT NOW

As a Result Fifty Members of the Battalion Are Now on Subsistence--Non-Coms. of the Battalion Made Fine Showing in Examinations Yesterday---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

With the 93rd Battalion now over the 800 mark, the accommodation at the armouries is taxed to the limit, and to-day fifty of the single men of the battalion were placed on subsistence, that is they will sleep and eat at home or at a boarding house in order to make more room at the armouries. Not only were the bunks all occupied but there was lack of kitchen and table accommodation. Some time ago the government leased the old Murray street church property across the road from the armouries and this will be turned into dormitories. So far, however, no alterations have been made, so that it is necessary to place a number of men on subsistence.

The examinations of the non-coms of the 93rd conducted yesterday by Lt.Col. Brown, G.S.O. and Major Ponton of the Headquarters Staff, and Capt. Hall of the 93rd, were concluded at 10.30 o'clock last night. It was a gruelling day for the non-coms, but they came through with flying colours, the class making a very high showing in Part A examinations. Although the results will not be published until Parts B and C have been taken it is understood that nearly all the non-coms were successful in passing. The visiting officers were very much impressed with the smartness and efficiency of the men. Col. Brown expressed himself so to the Examiner, while Major Ponon congratulated Sergt.-Major Miller on the showing of the men.

The 93rd Battalion were enjoyably entertained at the recruiting room, Simcoe street, last night, by Knox church organizations. Major Davidson presided. The evening was a most enjoyable one and at the conclusion the chairman expressed the thanks of all concerned to the Knox church people. Rev. Mr. McKenzie in reply referred to the deep interest the people of Peterborough took in the 93rd Battalion. The Ministerial Association were especially interested because two of their members were officers of the 93rd. Next Tuesday the 93rd will be entertained by St. Peter's congregation at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum.

Gordon Hewson Killed At Work on Power Line

High Up on Pole at Corner of Murray and Aylmer Streets He Was Engaged in Making Connection With a Primary Circuit—Body Suspended in Life Belt.

INQUEST WAS OPENED

Gordon H. Hewson, lineman in the employ of the Utilities Commission, was electrocuted yesterday afternoon about four o'clock at the corner of Aylmer and Murray Streets, while engaged in connecting a new line with a primary circuit. As quickly as possible the body was taken down from the post where it was held in suspension by the leather life belt and rushed to the Nicholls Hospital in the Dan Spence ambulance.

On the journey and for over an hour afterwards Dr. Amys, Chief Howard and several nurses applied the city's pulmotor, but without success. Not a sign of life appeared, and apparently death had been instantaneous.

Mr. Hewson was twenty-six years of age, and the son of Mr. John H. Hewson, 98 London Street. He was widely known in Peterborough, especially as an electric lineman, and had previously been in the employ of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. and the Seymour Power Co.

A particularly sad feature of his death was the fact that he had been married only five weeks ago to Miss Doyle, of Reid Street. The body will be taken to Warkworth on Friday for burial.

It was explained that a primary circuit is that from which high power is "stepped down" to the secondary from which the house lighting service is secured, and about 2,300 volts passed through the young man's body. It was also reported that his rubber gloves were found in his pocket, and that he was wearing a pair of leather mitts, in each of which a small hole was found. However, no evidence was taken at an inquest held in Comstock's Undertaking Rooms last night. It was adjourned until Monday night next, when the report of a post-mortem examination made by Dr. Eastwood and Dr. Amys will be presented.

A funeral service will be held at the residence of the deceased's father, 98 London Street, to-morrow evening at 7.30. The remains will be taken to Warkworth on the following morning, via G.T.R., where interment will take place.

BIG RECRUITING MEETING TO-NIGHT AT T.A.S. ROOMS

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien Will Preside and Mr. Dan O'Connell Will Deliver the Principal Address of Evening

A GOOD PROGRAMME

There promises to be a large crowd at the 93rd Battalion recruiting meeting to be held to-night in St. Alphonsus Lyceum, Simcoe Street. The chair will be taken at 8 o'clock by [illegible] Dan. O'Connell will give the principal address of the evening, and speeches will be given by Dr. McNulty and others. Music will be given by members of St. Peter's Choir and by the Bandmaster and some of the 93rd Band. As the latter is on leave it was impossible to secure the services of the whole band. A most interesting meeting is expected.

PROGRESSIVE CLUB HELD CARD PARTY

Successful Social Affair Held Last Evening—220 in Attendance

The card party under the auspices of the Progressive Club at the Barrie building last evening was a great success, everyone reporting a very happy time. There were fifty-five tables of cards and the games played, varied to suit the tastes of the players. The guests were received by Miss Peck, President of the Club. The winner of each table was presented with a carnation.

A dainty supper was served, the soldiers present acting as waiters. Just previous to the serving of supper the entire party, numbering 220, rose and sang the National Anthem. The evening concluded with an informal dance which was greatly enjoyed

Attacked Hostile Aeroplane Which Fell in Flames

PARIS, MARCH 1.—A Belgian official communication states that greater activity has been displayed by the artillery, especially in the region of Dixmude. In the course of the afternoon two German balloons before the Belgian front broke from their moorings and fell, one into the sea opposite La Panne, the other near Coudekerque. The aeronauts were made prisoner.

Flight-Lieut. Simms, of the British Flying Corps, (Tuesday) attacked a hostile aeroplane, which fell in flaflmes a short distance in front of the Belgian lines, the combat and its results being in full view of the Belgian soldiers in the trenches.

The Copenhagen correspondent of the Daily Mail telegraphs. Explosions in the air were heard Sunday evening at several places in South Jutland coming from the direction of Schleswig, and flames were seen at a great height, suggesting that a Zeppelin was afire. The burning mass was seen to fall suddenly.

An Amsterdam despatch says: A German balloon landed inside the Dutch frontier yesterday. The car was empty. The machine was seized by the Dutch guards.

Mother's Promptitude Saved Child's Life

Little Reta Schkiff, the two-year-old daughter of Himie Schkiff, of 124 Grange Avenue, Toronto, had a narrow escape from being strangled to death yesterday morning, when she swallowed a cent. The child had ben given the coin to play with, and putting it in her mouth, she accidentally swallowed it. The cent became wedged in her throat, and but for the prompt action of her mother in running with the child to the hospital she would have strangled. The coin was removed in the hospital operating-room.

WOMEN AND THE WAR.

We know in Peterborough from personal knowledge, derived from daily association, of the noble work the women of this city are doing in the interests of Canada's share in the war. They are making untold sacrifices, small ones individually, perhaps, but collectively, great ones. Some give sons or husbands, but in one way or other, nearly all are busy. This activity of women is not confined to Peterborough, but all over the dominion, in every hamlet and every rural household there are activities in progress to ameliorate the physical conditions of our soldiers who are better equipped and inspirited—strengthened in physique and morale—for the grim work they are, largely thanks to the help and sympathy of our women, so splendidly doing in the battlefield. In Ottawa, women have shown their capacity for doing things by assuming the publication for one day of the Ottawa Free Press, the profits to go to a patriotic fund—the "Soldiers' Comfort" Fund. They have issued a magnificent edition of 28 ages sold at the price of 5 cents each with an embarrassing amount of advertising, and with an illuminated front page. The ladies of the Ottawa Women's Canadian Club are to be congratulated. They have, nobly as they have succeeded, done only what other women are doing in a different way all over Canada to-day. They and the women of Canada richly deserve the tribute paid by Sir Robert Borden, and panelled on the front page of the patriotic edition, as follows:

It would be impossible adequately to express my appreciation of the noble part played by the women of Canada during this crisis. With undaunted hearts they have seen loved ones go forth to battle; with tireless devotion they have given themselves to a thousand missions of mercy. From the beginning, by innumerable ways and channels, a continual stream of comforts and gifts has flowed to the aid of our soldiers and of the stricken peoples of Europe. The present project of the Women's Canadian Club of Ottawa is an admirable one and, will I am sure, be warmly appreciated.

LOOKING AHEAD.

Under the circumstances in which we find ourselves, it seems to be the cue of the city council to go slow in the matter of expenditures; and to be judicious in the undertaking of public works that will add to taxation. Owing to the war we have a considerable addition to our rate of taxtaion, a good deal of which will end with the war; and it seems to be wisdom to confine civic expenditure, that involves immediate levy of taxation to the lowest point, consistent with reasonable efficiency. Last year public works were prosecuted with the view of giving employment. The same necessity for this does not exist this year, or if it does, to a much lesser degree. In spite of the war, times have improved, and there is less unemployment. In this matter we should, it seems, limit our employment-giving undertakings, relying upon the generally improved good times to take care of unemployment.

We have fairly good times now, but we do not know what conditions will be after the war. We know this much, however, and can be reasonably certain of it, that with hundreds of returning soldiers to take their places in the ranks of labour, there will be a demand for employment that will be difficult to meet. If, however, we trust to good times this year and greater demand for labour, to look after the matter of employment and save our resources to be used next year or later in the construction of civic works that will give employment, we shall be in a better position to meet the flood of labour that will be thrown upon the marked by the close of the war and the release of Peterborough soldiers now at the front; and their return to take their places in the ranks of civic life. Might we not look ahead a little and prepare for conditions that we shall have to deal with when the war ends!

CANADA FOR CANADIANS.

The fact that the Examiner, as pointed out by a correspondent, Mr. C. H. Reed, omitted in dealing with question of nickel refinement, to take into account the nickel matte exported for refinement to Swansea in Wales, does not at all affect our chief contention. It rather emphasises our point—that of the refinement of nickel in Canada, with the result of giving employment to Canadian labour and Canadian capital. The fact as Mr. Reed points out, that 35 per cent of Canadian nickel is refined in Britain, removes 35 per cent. of the danger, if not certainty, of Canadian nickel finding its way to Germany.

But it does not remove the injury or loss to Canadian industry, resulting from the failure to do the refining in this country. The Examiner's contention is that all other Canadian resources, as well as nickel, should be reduced to the ultimate form as far as possible, in this country. We shouldn't ship a cord of raw pulp wood out of the country. It should all be manufactured to the ultimate commercial form of paper in Canada. A cord of pulp wood, is worth in the raw state, say seven or eight dollars for export purposes. It is worth for home manufacture, forty or fifty dollars. That is to say, a cord of raw wood manufactured into paper has an added value representing say thirty or forty dollars in wages and industrial supplies. On the same principle the immensely added value of a pound or ton of nickel matte, gained from refinement in Canada, would represent a corresponding employment of labour and other industrial agencies. As far as benefits to Canadian labour and capital are concerned the loss is as great with our nickel matte refined in Great Britain as if it were refined in a foreign country, only in the former case we avoid the danger of our nickel finding its way into the hands of the enemy to be used against us.

This may be considered selfishness, but it is a patriotic selfishness. Canada is a part of the mother country and when the test comes forgets her peculiar selfish interests in devotion to the common cause. We have thrown ourselves heart and soul into the fight. Our help would be of less importance now, but for the patriotic selfishness of the past. When in times of peace Canada has selfishly bent all her energies to the development of her resources she was preparing herself for unselfish service. The greater this development the greater our capacity of giving help to the empire in case of need; and the more we depend upon ourselves for this development, the better the result all round.

Canada for the Canadians, should be our motto in the sense of giving Canada the fullest benefit of the development of our resources. We should do everything for ourselves in this direction; we should not allow a pound of anything that can be manufactured to advantage in this country to go out of it in the raw state. We pay millions in taxation every year for the purpose of encouraging home manufacture, which is not always done to the advantage of the people, nor without imposing some sacrifice in the way of taxation. We should do all we can within ourselves, manufacture our timber, refine our minerals and build our own ships. The more selfish we are in this regard the more capable we make ourselves for unselfish service in the cause of the Empire, of which we form a part. Canada for the Canadians, and Canadians for the Empire, are not inconsistent ideals.

THE HISTORIC VERDICT OF PEEL.

It is impossible to over-estimate the importance of the Peel election. It may be under-estimated by those who attach undue importance to the authority of Governments, to what Walt Whitman describes as the audacity of elected persons.

Nobody in authority, whether he derived his authority from birth or rank or wealth, told the people of Peel what they ought to do, what verdict the jury of Peel ought to render on one of the most tremendous issues arising out of this war. Every farmer, every mechanic, every merchant in Peel, had to depend absolutely on his own judgment and conscience. And Peel made the right decision.

We know of no other election in this war in which the question of war profits was so clearly raised. One would have expected that it would be raised in an election for the Parliament of the United Kingdom or an election from the Parliament of Canada. It happens that it was raised in a bye-election for the Province of Ontario, and in a constituency which boasts of no great wealth, and is not puffed up by any sense of its own importance. In Peel the great test was made, and Peel came out on the right side. Partizanship was disregarded, personal friendship was disregarded—and perhaps the sacrfice of personal friendship was the greatest of all. Those who made these sacrifices were left absolutely without leadership. The Ontario Government gave them no leadership. No leadership came from the financial magnates or social lights of the party with which they were associated. They were left with no light but their own judgment and their own conscience.

It is an impressive and touching spectacle, and it is also a cheering spectacle, for it renews our faith in the conscience and judgment of the people of Canada and of the people everywhere. The battle in Peel was a soldiers' battle, a battle fought and won by the people with no guidance except that of men just like the men of Peel, appealing to reason and conscience in the voice of persuasion, not in "the hectoring voice of authority," as William Cobbett described the tyranny of his age.—Toronto Star.

ECONOMIC AND ALIMENTARY REASONS WHY WE SHOULD EAT FISH

No doubt there are many reasons advanced why fish is not more largely used in the Dominion, and, while some of the reasons may in times past have justified many in tabooing fish, yet at the present time conditions in connection with the handling and transportation of fish, both from the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, also from the many lakes, have been vastly improved. Lack of proper transportation facilities in the past has been possibly the greatest drawback to the increased consumption of fish in our inland centres. We must remember, however, that it is only by transporting perishable goods, such as fish, in large quantities that the express and transportation companies can be prevailed upon to furnish suitable cars and give all possible care in handling and delivering.

For instance, a few years ago fresh halibut as sold in the eastern provinces was taken from the Atlantic ocean, usually by the American fisherman, at certain seasons of the year, and retailed at about 20 cents per pound.

Vessels which were used in catching this fish were fitted out for halibut fishing only at some seasons of the year, making the supply very uncertain.

Of late years, however, the halibut consumed in the eastern section of the Dominion is largely shipped from the Pacific ocean. Prince Rupert, B.C., now ranks as the greatest shipping point for halibut in the world. Vessels engaged in the halibut fishing on the Pacific coast are fitted out for halibut fishng exclusively, and the crews devote their entire attention to this fish, so much so that wthin the last few days the Alaskan halibut interests have appealed to the authorities in the States "for aid in saving their industry from destruction by Canadian competitors."

The Pacific halibut is landed in tremendous quantites a very few hours after being caught, and is, if sold fresh, that is, not frozen immediately packed, and iced in boxes and placed aboard refrigerator cars. In a very short time after being landed the best of halibut is being rushed across the continent in refrigerator cars, at express speed, to the large centres of population, where the cars are opened for the first time since leaving the coast, and the fish distributed to retailers, who sell the fish at about 15 cents per pound.

This is only one instance where improved transportation facilities have resulted in the lowering of the cost to the consumer.

Halibut is not, however, the only economical fish. Variety in fish as in other foods is "the spice of lift." There are easily 20 or 30 varieties of good food fishes abounding in our own coastal and other waters, only waiting to be caught and made use of.

It might be pointed out that the milk dealer advertises milk as being in itself sufficient to sustain life. The baker declares that bread is all we scientifically require. The butcher does go one better and gives us the choice of beef, mutton and pork.

But who is there who, even admitting either the milkman, the baker, or the butcher to be correct, would be prepared to subsist for even a month on milk only, or simply on bread.

Fish is both wholesome, economical and agreeable to the palate. Scientists tell us that in body building matter fish is just as satisfying as most foods. Have we any hardier type of men than the men of Nova Scotia or New Brunswick? or men who overcome difficulties as do these men, yet fish is a regular item on their daily bill of fare.

With a heavier demand for fish the fishermen will be able to use more economical methods of fishing and then it is hoped to retail fish at even lower prices than at present. There is one great difference between the farmer on land, and the fisherman. While the farmer has to plough and fertilize his land and do many other things before he can harvest a crop, the fisherman knows that the crop is ready at any time. He simply waits for the demand.

One great objection on the part of many, to the use of fish at this season of the year, is the fact that so much of our fish just now is frozen. Well, we certainly have cold weather at times but it is well to remember that all frozen fish is not necessarily "cold storage" fish as usually understood. Take winter caught pickerel as an example. This first is one of our most useful food fishes. At the present time this fish is caught through the ice and is frozen within a few seconds after being taken from the water. Is it not reasonable to suppose that the flavour of such a fish when received in Ottawa is superior to the flavour of a pickeral shipped in ice to some large freezing plant and then frozen in a mechanical freezer.

Fishermen, shippers, transportation companies, and distributers show a desire to improve the methods at present in use, just as much or even more, as their efforts are appreciated.

Above all other foods, fish should be carefully handled by clean, healthy salesmen, in sanitary surroundings, where clean ice only is used. Care should be taken in ordering just sufficient for the demand, and especial care should be exercised in delivering fresh fish into the kitchen of the consumer. I believe the time has come when everyone interested in the distribution of fish realizes the above requirements and awaits the demands of the public to demonstrate their eagerness to provide the good things of life at prices much lower than the butcher for example can supply his provisions.

The Financial Position of Canada

In the first of a series of articles reviewing the serious financial condition of Canada, we showed yesterday that the end of the war will find Canada with a debt of one billion dollars, and interest charges of $50,000,000, with the addition of $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 in pensions. We showed, also, that so far Sir Thomas White's taxation has been chiefly of a temporary character, and we analyzed the effect of some of his special taxes he has imposed.

We come now to the war tax of 7 1-2 p.c. on all imported goods (with few exceptions), whether previously dutiable or free. This tax was designated by the Finance Minister as a war tax, pure and simple, and it was stated that it was not intended for protective purposes in any sense whatever. The actual indisputable fact is, however, that the tax is just as protective in its incidence as any other import tax, and adds materially and unnecessarily to the protection previously enjoyed by manufacturers. A more shameful abuse of power and a greater disregard of the interests of the people could scarcely be imagined. It is unthinkable that a political party could so unfairly take advantage of the war necessities of the nation. But they did it, and here is the proof.

Take, by way of illustration, foodstuffs. As every Canadian knows, we are a food-producing country. We can, and practically do produce all our requirements for home consumption. The imports are trifling. The war tax on the imports assuming they keep up, will, therefore, no realize much, and the effect will likely be to diminish imports with correspondingly loss of revenue rather than increase. The Dominion Treasury will also not benefit by the tax on raw materials in the shape of cattle, hogs, sheep, grain vegetables and fruits, because very little of these raw materials are imported. But the large meat packers and canners who produce foodstuffs, knowing that imported foodstuffs have to pay the war tax, are at liberty to increase their prices by 7 1-2 p.c. to the Canadian consumers on all the foodstuffs produced by them in Canada. Attempts may be made by them to show that the farmer will benefit by the increased prices, but it is well known that the meat packers, canners, middle men and large buyers practically control the prices paid to the farmers for cattle, hogs, sheep, vegetables and fruits, butter and cheese, etc.

Thus we see that the war tax on foodstuffs mean a molehill of revenue to the Dominion, and a mountain of burdens to the people in the shape of enhanced prices upon foodstuffs produced in Canada, without benefitting the Treasury.

The same argument applies to other Canadian manufacturers who use native raw materials. In this category we place the manufacturers of brick, cement, tiles, coarse pottery, stone, starch, glue, graphite, mica, paper, and all manufacturers of wooden-ware. These firms get their supplies of raw material in Canada, and consequently the tax on raw materials does not benefit the Treasury, yet the manufacturers are at liberty to increase their prices by the amount of the tax 7 1-2 p.c. without advantage to the Treasury.

Another class of large manufacturers produce goods partly from native and partly from imported raw materials. For instance, boot and shoe manufacturers and distillers, and manufacturers who use as their raw materials iron and steel in semi-finished condition. Ir these cases the Dominion Treasury benefits by the tax on raw materials when they are imported, but the additional protection, through the tax, to the manufacturers is materially greater than the extra duty on raw material.

The least advantage is given to those manufacturers, comprising chiefly cotton and woollen manufacturers, who are obliged to import most of their raw materials, but even in these cases the advantage is substantial. Taking the unit value of the finished product to be $1, the raw material would be worth about 33c., and the manufacturer pays 7 1-2 p.c. on that 33c., or 2 1-2c., but he is at liberty to charge 7 1-2c. more on his finished article, so that his net additional protection is about 5 p.c.

The Finance Minister, with a child-like innocence, gravely asked the people of the country to believe that because he puts a tax of 7 1-2 p.c. on raw materials he is justified in putting exactly the same tax on finished products. Any fourteen-year-old child would understand that raw materials are of much less value than the finished article made therefrom, and that the same rate of taxes being applicable to both must necessarily give the makes of the finished article more protection.—Montreal Herald.

BOARD OF CENSORS FOR MOVING PICTURES
for the Province of Quebec

MONTREAL 7th December 1915

Managing Editor,
Montreal Daily Star, Montreal.

Dear Sir,—

I am pleased to inform you that after a close inspection of the series of War Pictures which you intend to give to the public, the Board of Censors of Moving Pictures for this Province has come to the conclusion that no better object lesson of the gigantic conflict now raging in Flanders and in the Vosges could be had.

There is a sense of reality in the battlefield, in the trenches, which is simply marvellous. The scene of the artillery duel, during the great Champagne drive, is unique. One can almost hear the famous "75" as it thunders. And it really looks as if the 21,000 Boches, gathered in the concentration camp, after the drive, were glad of being made prisoners.

The various personages, His Majesty King George, President Poincare, Lord Kitchener, General Joffre, the Prince of Wales, M. Millerand, Sir John French, cannot be seen to better advantage

The people of this coutnry will realize, as they see Great Britain and France thus fraternizing on the battlefields, how sincere, how deep is the Entente Cordiale.

The perfect organization of the various army corps, which are seen as they march along, preceded by scouts on land and in the air, gives the vivid impression that the Allies will soon rid the world of the Berlin military caste

Believe me,
Dear Sir,
Yours sincerely,

Dr L J Lemieux

Sheriff and President of the Board of Censors of Moving Pictures for the Province of Quebec.

The Pictures have been brought to Peterboro' by 'The Evening Examiner' with the Guarantee that they are as advertised.

You can better appreciate what you read about the War if you see these Pictures.

ORCHESTRA IN ATTENDANCE

Change to Warmer With Southerly Winds For Early in March

On and Touching Saturday 4th to Monday 6th, These Conditions Will Develop Into Very Wide and Forceful Storms of Rain and Thunder—Forecasts by Irl Hicks

A regular storm period is central on the 4th, extending from the 2nd to the 7th. Disturbing causes and things to expect.

It is proper to remind our readers that we have now entered the Vernal equinoctial period, in which all the storm periods will be quickened in their tendency to storminess, and prolonged threatening conditions. Hence the regular Vulcan period will be augmented and prolonged by Earth's Vernal equinox. The Moon is at its conjunction with Sun and Earth, or at new Moon, on the 3rd, and on the celestial equator, veering to north declination on the 4th. Mercury and Uranus are almost in contact conjunction on the 4th and the Moon is in conjunction with Jupiter on the 5th, and with Venus on the 7th.

In all sections to the westward, a change to warmer, with softening skies and southerly winds, will set in by the 2nd and 3rd, the barometer will begin faling and cloudiness will follow, turning to rains starting on their eastward sweep. On and touching Saturday the 4th, to Monday the 6th, these conditions will develop into very wide and forceful storms of rain and thunder. Scattering tornadoes in the southern sections will not be unnatural, and growing indications of such storms should be cautiously heeded. Your barometer—have you got one?—will prove your best friend and your most valuable asset at this and all such times. Before these rains and wind storms arrive at central to eastern sections, rising barometer, snow, and change to much colder will be advancing from the west and north. Storms of wind, thunder and rain will be at their crisis about the 4th, 5th and 6th, merging into blizzardous conditions as they pass eastward across the country. By the 8th clear and colder will have reached the Atlantic coast regions, in its east to southeast swing across the country. A decidedly cold wave would be natural at this time, but for the fact that the Moon is coming northward and on the celestial equator at the centre of the period. These facts will restrain and modify the natural tendency to very cold at the wind up of this period.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 9th, 10th and 11th. We remind our readers that this reactionary period falls centrally in the crisis of the annual magnetic and electric perturbation, growing out of the peculiar relations of the Earth and Sun from about March the 8th to the 15th. The 11th is the central day, on and about which many striking phenomena, in the way of magnetic and electrical manifestation, are almost certain to express themselves. Thunder storms, excessive earth currents, disturbing telegraph lines and instruments, auroral phenomena and all kindred manifestations reach a crisis on and near March the 11th. Other things being equal, volcanic and seismic convulsions break out at this annual period. From about the 9th to the 13th, look for change to warmer, falling barometer, and renewed storms of wind, rain and snow. Changing to rising barometer, westerly winds, snow squalls and much colder, clearing weather will be the sequel to each of these March storm periods.

A regular storm period is central on the 16th, covering Tuesday the 14th, to Sunday the 19th. Disturbing causes and things to expect.

This period, as may be seen by the storm chart, is within a few days of the centre of the Earth's Vernal equinox. The Moon is on the celestial equator on the 18th, and in opposition with Earth and Sun, or at its full, on the 19th. The full Moon at the spring equinox is always on or near the celestial equator, together with the Earth and Sun, hence violent and peculiar storms, and other disturbances are natural at such times. Watch the movements of your barometer at the approach of this period. In western sections it will commence falling on the 14th and 15th, cloudiness, rain and snow will quickly ensue, and during Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, the 16th, 17th, 18th and 19th, these storms will increase "into something worth while," reaching each section of the country in due course, in their daily and hourly progress from west to east. Don't be caught unawares by tropical, tornadic htorms in the south, or by blizzardous snow and high, cold winds from the northwest. We will point out Saturday and Sunday, the 18th and 19th, as days of greatest danger. If the preceding days are warm and bright do ont suffer yourself to be deceived, keep your eye on your barometer, as well as other indications. A very low and fluctuating barometer for a day or so before should put you on your guard, on and next to the 18th and 19th. Storms and weather changes at this period will, most probably assume the character of what may be called the "Eastertide" disturbances—dangerous winds, thunder and rain, with blighting, high barometer and high gales and sharp cold following.

A reactionary storm period follows closely on the heels of the preceding regular storm period, being central on the 21st, 22nd and 23rd.

This period brings the Earth exactly to the centre of her equinoctial passage. On and about the 23nd, the plane of the Earth's equator, if extended far enough into space, would strike the centre of the Sun, bringing our little earth-world to the point in its orbit where day and night are approximately equal from pole to pole. The exchange of the seasons are more marked from this time on, summer advancing northward, and winter descending southward from the equator. In the nature of things, this brings a conflict between the contending forces of the atmosphere. The solar energy pushes northward into the boreal, colder region, creating an unbalance of atmospheric poise, and infusing excesses of magnetic and electric forces not only into the atmosphere above, but into the solid globe beneath. Hence a time of equinoctial turmoil—the high, proverbial winds of March, with dangerous equinoctial hurricanes, cyclones, typhoons and tornadoes. It is a great mistake, however, to suppose that these equinoctial storms are limited to a few days, centring on and about the day when the "Sun crosses the line." We have often explained, in our magazine, Word and Works, and in our almanac, and on the lecture platform, that violent equinoctial storms are liable during a period of six to eight weeks, as the Earth approaches and recedes from the centre of the Vernal or the autumnal equinoxes. The influence of the March equinox begins about the middle of February, and extends to about the second week in April, while the autumnal equinox is felt, in storms and weather conditions and is plainly discernible from the middle of August to near the middle of October. Of course there is a gradual increase of danger up to the centres of both these periods, after which there is a gradual decrease of energy; but any time within three weeks of the 21st of March, or the 23nd of September, there are added probabilities of violent and dangerous storms attended and followed by extreme and destructive revulsions of temperature.

A regular storm period is central on the 27th, extending from the 25th to the 31st. Disturbing causes and things to expect.

This period is near the centre of the March equinox. The Moon is at extreme south declination and in perigee at the beginning, and on the celestial equator at the close of this period. Both the Mercury and the Venus periods are also present before the end of this period. For this reason the period will be intensified and prolonged beyond its normal time. This period will come in with cold, northerly winds, but the barometer will begin to fall in western extremes, by the 26th, and during Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the 27th, 28th and 29th, it will grow much warmer, progressively from the west to east; the barometer will fall in the same progressive order, threatening clouds will appear, and general storms of wind and rain will pass across the country from west to east. These storms will turn to snow and sleet on the western flanks of the storm centre, bringing change to much colder, only a few hours behind the area of warm rains that fall in the forefront of the storm centre. The barometer will again fall suddenly on and about the 31st, rapid change to warmer will ensue, and wicked gusts of thunder, rain and wind will strike many localities. These disturbances promise to reach into April, bringing a prolonged spell of threatening weather, with many violent and destructive storms. This is another time when a good barometer, properly understood and heeded, will prove valuable beyond all possible computation.

Upon the whole, we believe that March will be a "backward month." The Easter full Moon falls very late, that is, on Monday, April the 24th, bringing Easter Sunday on April the 23rd. As a rule, a series of rain and snows, followed by high winds and blighting temperatures and frosts, are to be apprehended within a period of five or six days, taking the Easter full Moon as centre of the period. Those of our doubting, critical friends, who are disposed to "grin and turn up their noses" at this declaration, may easily convince themselves of its truth by watching for themselves, or by tracing up the record of facts. Having passed the Easter full Moon, which is always on, or very near the celestial equator and ecliptic, and having escaped the boreal storms, and cold, blighting winds and frosts that follow, as a rule, there is reasonable safety from killing frosts for that season. Hence we hold that a late Easter betokens a late spring; or if not, a spring of continued cold, look for a late spell of cold, blighting winds and weather that will destroy for the most part all the results of warm and budding and blooming and growing weather that may go before it. As intimated for the full Moon period, central on March the 19th, the Easter perturbations may possibly fall this year at that time, but we advise our readers not to take to much risk with plants and other perishable products late in April.

Earthquake periods — The first earthquake period is central on the 3rd, extending from February the 29th to March 6th. But for the Vernal equinox, with the Moon in conjunction with Earth and Sun, and on the celestial equator, there would be a minimum of earthquake unrest at this period. As it is, there are strong probabilities of heavy earthquake shocks on and touching March the 3rd, 4th and 5th. There are also marked indications that volcanic convulsions will precede and attend these disturbances. Again we ask our readers to watch the world's record and report to us.

The second earthquake period is central on the 19th, extendng from the 16th to the 23nd. This period exactly coincides with the passage of the Sun over the Earth's equator. The Moon is in opposition with Sun and Earth, being at the same time on the celestial equator and near the ecliptic. "Put your ear to the ground" and see if you do not hear the rumble of an earthquake, or the roar of a volcano, within seventy hours of midnight on March 19th.

An additional extra earthquake period is central on April the 2nd extending from March the 29th, to April the 6th. Saturn is in quadrature with Earth and Sun on March 30th. Jupiter is in conjunction with Earth and Sun on April 1st, the Moon is on the equator on March 31st, and in conjunction with Earth and Sun on April the 2nd. These facts well nigh guarantee severe earthquakes and volcanic trouble within seventy hours of midnight on April 2nd.

Captain J. T. Walsh

IT takes a man with a big brain to preside over a big shipping department. To be successful in such a position he must be an amphibious individual — one equally at home on land or water. Captain J. T. Walsh, the genial Assistant Manager of the Canadian Pacific Atlantic Steamship Lines, is a keen business man, brisk and energetic, ever watchful to see that the lines proceed on their various courses safe and comfortable for the public and profitable for the Canadian Pacific Company. Captain Walsh has little to learn about the sea or about anything on land that concerns the sea, for, ever since he was 14 years of age his career has been floating along on the waves. Like Lord Shaughnessy, President of the Canadian Pacific Company, Captain Walsh is the son of Irish parents; he first saw the light in Chichester, England, in 1857. After receiving his education at the schools of the Christian Brothers he began his career as a seaman, and from the outset success followed his track. He had travelled on merchant ships to most parts of the world, and he had obtained a wide knowledge of his business. In 1880 he was commissioned as a Lieutenant in the Royal Naval Reserve. While at Lagos, West Africa, during the Ashanti War in 1900 the dexterity with which he managed the embarkation services gained him honourable mention in the despatches of Colonel Sir J. Wilcox. In 1902 Captain Walsh retired from the Naval Reserve with the rank of Commander. He then took up the responsible position of Superintendent of the Elder Dempster Line in England. But, in a short time afterwards, when that concern was absorbed by the Canadian Pacific Company, Captain Walsh became connected with the greatest transportation corporation in the world. Ever since embarking on the steamship business, in 1883, the Canadian Pacific marine service has had a triumphant career. From the outset there were competent men at the helm of the ships and at the head of the various governing departments, but none has filled the post of superintendent with more foresight and general ability than Captain Walsh. During his regime the Saint Lawrence route to the British Isles, thought always popular, has advanced considerably in popularity. At present many of the C. P. R. big vessels are in the service of the Empire. Captain Walsh pays a high tribute to the worth of the Mercantile Marine in the struggle that is being conducted on land and sea. Addressing the Montreal Sailors' Club a short time ago he said: "At one time it was considered that on account of the officers and men being distributed all over the globe the number procurable at short notice would be so small that their value as a naval reserve would not be very great. On this account a short service scheme was created from which men passed into the Royal Fleet service, and through this an immediate reserve was always available. It was found that directly the Royal Naval Reserve was called upon they flocked to the rendezvous in such numbers that it was difficult to place them all." On the same occasion he said: "As a sailor I am absolutely satisfied, come what may, that the Mercantile Marine may be relied upon to do its part to the bitter end. When the history of the war comes to be written the splendid services rendered by the Mercantile Marine are likely to find favourable mention, and the C. P. R. vessels are certain to have their meed of praise for the C. P. R. liners 'Metagama' and 'Missanabee' have carried more Canadian troops to the war zone than any other vessels. They also have brought back to Canada many wounded warriors."

The superintendent of these and other Atlantic C. P. R. vessels takes a wide interest in many departments of life in Montreal; he is President of the Catholic Sailors' Club of Montreal; member of the Royal Colonial Institute; Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, and Trustee and Vice-President of the Last Post Imperial Navy and Military Contingency Fund. Under the heading of "War and Meritorious Service" the major part of Captain Walsh's official Government services are embodied in Colonel McLean's Royal Naval list.

New French Line Is Very Strong

Woevre Withdrawal Quite Escapes Foe's Detection

BEATEN BY 12 HOURS

Holding by the French of the Positions Commanding Douaumont Watched With Deep Interest—Republic is Confident.

(By G. H. Perris, Correspondent of The London Chronicle.)

PARIS, Feb. 29.—The Germans are no nearer breaking the French army to-day than they were a week ago, but because so effective is the French military principle, never more respected than under the Commander-in-chief, General Joffre, and because it is evident common sense in a grand action to fight on your strongest ground, the Germans have won four or five miles of French salient by sacrifices which when they are known will send a shiver or horror through the nation on which lies the guilt of this deluge of blood

The abandonment of the French segment lying beyond the hills in the flats of the Woevre is rather indifferent. The French staff decided upon a movement on Friday night without any special pressure from the enemy. It is not difficult to one who knows the region to divine their motives. Always marshy in the winter, the clay of the plain would be like a sponge under Friday's sheet of snow. Moreover, the trenches here facing eastward would be under rear and flank fire from the new German positions in the hills, while if only the northern portion in the crescent were given up the remainder would be a protrusion difficult to defend, hence, be a protrusion difficult to defend, hence, doubtless, the withdrawal to the foot of the hills. So far from being forced, it was fully 12 hours before the German watchers discovered the positions had been evacuated.

The recapture of Douaumont proves that if that were needed the French position are the end of nine days of mortal trial are as strong as any Brandenburgers the Kaiser can hurl to their doom. The ways of approach to Douaumont are narrow, being limited to a defile between Hill 378 and the Vaux Wood, with a few hill tracks coming over the spur of the Louvemont hills on the northwest. The enemy was swept back into these approaches by the French assaults of Saturday afternoon and the plateau thus cleared is now, it is believed, securely held. These events, it is needless to say, are being followed with breathless interest. These, of course cause anxiety, both private and public, but there is no failing of confidence that has borne the Republic through so many dire sufferings, and will yet carry it through victory to a stable peace.

Sergeant Fred Reed Tells of Trip to Scotland and the Celebration of Burns' Anniversary — Artillery Getting More Training for Summer Offensive.

GETTING TOBACCO SUPPLIES

Sergt. Fred Reed, of the 3rd Artillery Brigade, 1st Canadian Division, writing on Feb. 10 from "Somewhere in France," to Mr. and Mrs. Bert Watts, 219 Stewart street, gives the following account of a holiday spent in England of a prospective training course back of the lines:

We received two bundles of papers last week and appreciated them very much as they are the best thing we get to keep us in touch with the news of the day in Canada.

Wednesday of this week a parcel arrived from Martin's Ltd., containing cigarettes with cards enclosed from Tommy Sills and yourself, and we thank you ever so much for your kindness. A big box of cigarettes and tobacco arrived next day for the column from the same firm and the whole issue was certainly an improvement on previous issues, as the tobacco was supplied by Tuckett's, Hamilton, Ont.

At present all the 1st Div. Artillery is 15 miles back of the firing line for a rest (?) but they succeed in keeping time from hanging heavy on our hands, as all harness has to be cleaned, equipment overhauled, and all deficiencies made up, horses exercised, etc., etc.

Next week we go 22 miles farther down country for two weeks' field manoeuvres in preparation for an open campaign this summer after an anticipated drive this spring when we all expect to give the Huns a good strafeing, although we know our losses are bound to be heavy at the start, but apparently the job must be done soon if we are going to get through this war before next Christmas.

Fred Cole and I had twelve days' leave to Blighty the latter part of January, and although we lost four days in travelling and in delays at Boulogne we crammed our eight free days full of so many trips that there was room for nothing more and we had the time of our young lives. We went to Edinburgh first and it is certainly a fine city, and Princess street is the pride of Scotland. We visited Holyrood Palace and Edinburgh Castle, and saw the Scottish crown jewels, a great collection of banners, flags, suits of mail, cutlasses, swords, pikes, etc., relics of the good old days when knights were bold. We also inspected Darnley's bedroom in which he was assassinated, also the bedroom of Mary Queen of Scots, in which her son James was born. It was from this bedroom window that James was lowered to be secretly taken away to be christened, and after looking at the big drop we think James was lucky the rope did not break. The old times do not appear to have gone in very heavily for all the comforts of home. The furniture was all wood and rather plain, and Queen Mary's bedroom was about the size of a bedroom in a modern apartment—two by twice.

We were also lucky to be in Scotland for Burn's anniversary, and Cole and I went right to it and outdistanced all the natives and even aroused the amazement of the head waiter at our varied capacities. The menu card required the asistance of an interpreter to translate it, but after the session we knew a lot about kale, taiters an' herrin', butbbyjock, basked neifs, etc., not forgetting the wee drams. We intended going on to Glasgow, but we woke up one morning to find that we were stone broke, and our airship came out of the clouds with a bump, so we hied us back to London town, raised another "fifty," and started out again. In London we toured Piccadilly, the Strand, Trafalgar and Leicester squares, Oxford and Regent streets, the Embankment, and last but not least, Pettycoat Lane, where we spent half a Sunday watching the fun of market day. Mostly Jews were represented, but there was a good sprinkling of other nationalities. They were all keen bargainers, and the spielers could certainly hold forth. You could buy anything from a pickle to a silk waist, a fish to a stove. We also spent some time going through the House of Lords and the Commons, and the visit was more than worth while. There were lots of fine paintings, statuary, finely carved woodwork, and practically every nook and corner has an interesting story with historical connection attached to it.

On the trip eats commanded our early and continued attention and oysters, fish, sausages, greens, apple pie and cream, and anything that did not look like army rations came in for a severe belting. Cole wished we had kept a record of our hotel and restaurant expense, and I think it would have made an interesting document, as I remember lots of dinners that ran us nine and ten shillings each. Well it's all over and we are back to the mud again. We only had four pense ha'penny between us when we returned, but we should worry. We only live once, and then we are a long time dead.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hughson Johnstone, painter and decorator, 510 College Street, will be answered on Wednesdays questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of strin gency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign-whiting, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating, may be sent to The Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

Bolivar Street, Peterborough, Ont —Is it true that most wall papers are poisonous? What are the colours that are to be avoided? Are the green papers full of arsenic? Is there any way that I could be sure whether poison was present or not? Generally speaking, is wall paper unhealthy?

Ans.—(1) It is not true that most wall papers are poisonous. When used for the purpose for which they are intended, viz., decoration purposes. (2) I would suggest that you avoid any colour that is repugnant to your sense of taste, or that is uncomplementary or inharmonious to the immediate environments, such as lights, shades, carpets, furniture, etc. (3) Opinion varys greatly on this very question. One English authority says to "avoid greens unless warranted to be non-arsenical," claiming to have discovered from 6 to 60 grains in a square foot of wall paper. This sounds bad; very bad! But who would care to eat wall paper, and if one does not eat it, where is the danger to? Then, there is also given off while the paper is being hung, and if there is, say, 50 grains to a square foot, and there are 500 square feet of wall paper in a room, (and that would be a fair-sized room) then on the surface of that paper would be some 2,500 grains of arsenic. Imagine if you can the poor paperhanger's condition, after brushing over 500 square feet of paper containing 2,500 grains (enough to kill 1,000 people), and inhaling whatever dust is created. And mind you the paper-hanger may be hanging many times that quantity of the same paper; and some live to a ripe old age too. Another and more recent authority claims that greens contain little or no arsenic or its modifications, but rather, are the reds to be looked upon with suspicion. To sum up, personally: I do not believe for one instant that there is poisons of any kind used in the manufacture of wall paper in sufficient quantity to be inimical to health.

(4) One test is given as follows: Lay a piece of the suspected paper on a watch glass, cover it with ammonia, allow it to stand three minutes; then drop into the solution a piece of nitrate of silver. If a yellow precipitate forms as the silver dissolves, the paper contains arsenic."

(5) Personally, I think wall paper very unhealthy if selected and hung at random. The clashing of strong colours; the use of inappropriate colours and lack of harmony, etc., all have their effect on one's health, especially the nerves.

Constant Reader, Peterborough, Ont.—What is the proper colour to paint doors and windows before they are grained?

Ans.—There are so many kinds of graining, so many kinds of wood to imitate, I mean, that I cannot know by your questions what kind you refer to. If you mean oak graining, simply add raw sienna to white until the proper depth is obtained for medium oak; mix about nine parts white and two of raw sienna. In any case have the ground colour slightly lighter than the wood to be imitated.

Normalite, City.—Strictly speaking are there three or five primary colours?

Ans.—"Fools rush in where angels fear to tread." Were I to plunge into this and commit myself, I doubt not some would class me with the former. So "safety first". My humble opinion, however, is that "strictly speaking" there are only three. White is claimed by some to be pure light not broken into colours, yet a composition of all colours, while black is pure darkness in which all colours are absorbed. Red, yellow and blue, I was taught, were the primaries. Not long ago, though Newton, the famous English colorist claimed this to be wrong.

"C. B. R." will be answered in next week's column.

Belleville Expects Very Serious Flood

BELLEVILLE, March 1.—The Moira river threatens shortly to cause a very serious flood in this city. The intense cold of the past few days has caused the water to rise so that several industries are unable to operate. All the furnaces on the west side of Front street have been put out, as the water has invaded the cellars. Every hotel yards on that side is flooded. In the lower portion of the city the water has come into the buildings, and already Victoria Island Park is covered. No relief is in sight, and many predict the most serious flood since 1867.

A TRIBUTE TO MR. DELA FOSSE

Normal School Magazine Eulogizes Librarian For His Good Service

The Normal School magazine has the following tribute to Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse, librarian of the Public Library:

"Frequently we hear of the value of libraries as educational institutions. That they may be of value they must be used, and quite often this use depends to a great extent on the librarian in charge of the institution.

In a large and well-stocked library the librarian should be more than a mere book-keeper. He should be well versed in the books on the shelves so that he may direct inquirers to any particular section in which the information sought can readily be found. In this way he can be very useful to the public generally, and especially useful to students in search of information on various topics. Since coming to the Normal School we have been unfortunate enough to participate in several debates, etc., and wondered where we should find the required information. We were directed to the Public Library and told to ask for the librarian, Mr. Dela Fosse.

We obeyed instructions and were delighted to find an intelligent, obliging gentleman, who spared no pains to help us in our search. Through his endeavours we found the required information without much effort on our part, and we came away possessed with the idea that the Public Library of Peterborough is filling its duty as an educational institution in the city, and that this is due mainly to the knowledge, skill and charitable nature of the librarian.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY.

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

MONTREAL, March 1.—The Bonaventure Station fire loss is estimated at $300,000, as the building was an old one, constructed in the eighties, but it will cost over one million dollars to erect a new depot. Fined For Breach of Motor Act

William Eason Failed to Have a Chauffeur's License—To-day's Police Court

Failure to have a chauffeur's license cost William Eason two dollars in the police court this morning. Eason was charged with driving a motor vehicle without first having secured a license for the current year. He possessed the necessary papers for last year and had filled out an application for a 1916 license. Magistrate Dumble reminded defendant that two months of the present year had faded into oblivion and that he should have procured his license before this. Eason replied by saying that he did not commence to drive until a few days ago. The court declined to accept this as an excuse, claiming that the law is clear and specific as to the qualifications of drivers of public vehicles. "Some would have good excuses and others would have poor ones. The court cannot discriminate," said Magistrate Dumble.

The law provides that not only the owner but the driver of a motor vehicle for the use of the public, must have a license.

EARTH QUAKED IN QUEBEC

Three Hard Shocks Were Felt Shortly After Midnight.

QUEBEC, March 1. — Three successive and strong shocks of earthquake were distinctively felt all over Quebec district about 12.15 yesterday. The disturbance was felt all over the city, and police and fire stations were kept busy for hours answering queries from alarmed citizens who were inclined to believe that some ammunition plant or depot had been blown up. All along the Beaupre coast and down the south shore of the St. Lawrence, down the river the shocks were felt.

In St. Sauveur, a suburb of Quebec, the shocks were strong enough to cause clinking of crockery in china cabinets.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair with SAGE TEA.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known down-town druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure mitigation or prevention of disease.

French Under No Necessity to Relieve Pressure at Verdun

Examiner Special:

LONDON, March 1.—Private reports which reached London to-day from authoritative sources in Paris describe the French General staff as supremely confident that the German offensive against Verdun can forces nothing in the nature of a decision. Although it is not yet possible to say that the German effort at this section of the line is wearing itself out, as there is a tendency to say in London, the French view is that Gen. Joffre has the situation well in hand.

In fact, the most significant feature in that the French general staff has been under no necessity of changing its dispositions in consequence of the strong offensive at Verdun, which has long been foreseen. There has been no need, either, to seek to relieve the pressure on the Verdun front by making an offensive elsewhere, as could easily have been done.

The French authority, whose statements I am quoting, said:

"The victor of the Marne will know when it is the psychological moment to strike. It is unlikely that the Germans will succeed in forcing him to action which might be premature. Even should the tide of battle necessitate the evacuation of Verdun, all the requisite dispositions have been taken, and the German 'prize' would not, militarily speaking, be very valuable."

The French authorities are still confident that even the moral effect of the taking of Verdun will be denied the Crown Prince and the Kaiser.

LONDON, March 1.—The German War Office reports that Anglo-French artillery men by violent bombardments in the Yser and Champagne districts, and between the Meuse and Moselle, tried to lead the Germans to believe that an attack was coming.

LONDON, March 1.—The steady flow of bachelors toward all recruiting offices to-day marked the closing of the chance to enlist voluntarily in Lord Kitchener's armies.

LONDON, March 1.—Copenhagen despatches to the Daily Mail to-day reported that following several explosions in the air south of Jutland Sunday, a great burning mass, believed to have been a Zeppelin, was seen to fall.

Bill Relating to Prohibition of Sale of Intoxicating Liquor

Within the Province of Ontario Likely to be Submitted--Definite Intimation in the Speech From the Throne

TORONTO, March. 1.—The main feature of the Speech from the Throne delivered in the Legislature yesterday was the announcement that legislation would be introduced relating to prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquor, and for the submission of this to the electors. The other measures will deal with power developments at Niagara, additional revenues, aid to settlers in Northern Ontario, and the creation of a Trades and Labor branch of the Public Works Department.

Consideration of the Speech of the Lieutenant-Governor will be taken into consideration by the House to-day.

Liquor Legislation.

It is expected, according to the statement of a Cabinet Minister last night, that the liquor legislation will be introduced within the next ten days. It is also anticipated that the plan for aiding settlers in the north will be unfolded shortly.

Real Wartime Opening.

War-time considerations stripped the opening of the Legislature of much of its former spectacular glory. The hint which had been given that it was desirable that simplicity should rule was carried out to the letter, and by reason of restrictions, the old-time crowded scenes in the chamber were absent.

Speech from the Throne.

The Speech from the Throne was as follows:

"I welcome you to the discharge of your duties at the second session of the fourteenth Legislature of this Province.

"We have followed the varying fortunes of the great war with deep concern, and with a full realization of the grave issues involved. The determination of this country to help by every means in its power to achieve complete and final victory for the allies has grown stronger as the war has progressed, and as the magnitude of the struggle has become more apparent.

Value of Canada's Soldiers

"It has been a matter of justifiable pride that services of the greatest value have been rendered by Canadian soldiers, who have displayed courage and heroism that will be a lasting glory to our country. I am glad to observe that the efforts being made to recruit additional forces in this Province are meeting with satisfactory results, aided by the inspiring example and heroic conduct of our soldiers who have gone to the front, many of whom have given their lives for the great cause.

Assisting the Empire.

"It has been our privilege as a Province to assist the Empire in a number of ways through the expenditure of the proceeds of the war tax authorized by this Legislature. In addition to this, our people have responded generously to every appeal made to them on behalf of patriotic funds. The results of the collection on Trafalgar Day, made at the instance of the President of the British Red Cross Society, were specially gratifying, and have received thankful acknowledgment. Greater and heavier sacrifices will yet be required, but I am convinced that the people of this Province will ungrudgingly assume every burden, and make every effort that may be required of them for the security of the Empire, and the preservation of the liberties of the world.

An Abundant Harvest.

"Our thanks are due to Almighty God for the abundant harvest of the past year which has contributed greatly to the prosperity and comfort of our people.

"I desire to express the deep regret of the people of Ontario for the destruction by fire of the historic Parliament Buildings at Ottawa, an event rendered more melancholy by reason of the sacrifices of life which accompanied it.

Prohibition and Power.

"Legislation will be submitted to you creating a Trades and Labor Branch of the Public Works Department; respecting further aid to settlers in the northern portions of the Province; respecting power development; to provide additional revenues; relating to the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquor within the Province, and for the submission of the same to the electors, and for other purposes.

"The public accounts will be submitted to you without delay, and also the supplementary estimates for the present year, and the estimates for the ensuing fiscal year.

"It is my earnest hope that your deliberations will, under the guidance of Providence, materially assist our Empire in the struggle in which it is now engaged and contribute alike to the moral and material welfare of this Providence.

AN UNUSUAL LEAP YEAR

Girls Have Fifty-three Saturdays and Sundays Chances in 1916

Thirty days hath September,
April, June, and November—
All the rest have thirty-one,
February has twenty-eight alone,
But Leap Year coming once in four,
February then, has one day more

So runs the rhyme, and this year of war, 1916, is a "once in four" year. But it is also much more, it is a year which offers opportunities to the "leap year" maiden such as she has not enjoyed since 1876. If she failed to land "him" in 1876 she should take advantage of the unique opportunities of 1916, as she will probably be completely shelved in 1944 and cannot hope to have a chance in 2000.

The year 1916, which began on Saturday, has a calendar showing fifty-three Saturdays and fifty-three Sundays.

No maiden under forty, which means all, ever saw before a year with so many Saturday afternoons and Sunday evenings. Hesitant swains may well tremble, but if they escape they may feel secure till 1944 and cannot hope to be eligible in 2000.

MILITARY NEWS

place this afternoon, when eighteen thousand troops and seven hundred officers, including twenty-one battalions of infantry, three artillery batteries, soldier students from the school of instruction and many other units filed past, headed by Sir Sam Hughes and Brigadier Gen.. W. A. Logie, on their way to Queen's Park to be inspected by the Minister of Militia. The column itself, in dimensions greater than a British army division was about six miles in length, and presented a splendid spectacle of Canadians response to the Motherland's call. This fact was heartily appreciated by thousands lining the twelve mile route of march, who were carried away by the great exhibition of patriotic fervour.

A letter received in town this week from Capt. Calvin P. Fee, of the 4th Brigade, Field Artillery, tells of his having had a week's furlough in January last, visiting London and Belfast. In a very few words he refers to conditions at the front prior to his leave — rain and mud, mud and rain; and of the exciting times among the shrapnel and shells. Outside of weather conditions he is braving the elements unscathed.

Here is the Music of "The Birth of a Nation"

During the previous engagement of "The Birth of a Nation," at The Grand, a great number of patrons were curious to know what selections the Orchestra played during the presentation of the picture. Manager Turner has written to the office and has received word that the following selections are included in the orchestration which is used for 'The Birth of a Nation': 'Suwanee River,' 'Seeing Nellie Home,' 'In the Gloaming, 'Dixie,' 'Turkey in the Straw,' 'Doo Dah,' 'The Girl I Left Behind Me,' 'Home, Sweet Home,' 'Good Night Ladies,' 'The Mocking Bird,' 'Hail to the Chief,' 'The Star Spangled Banner,' 'My Country 'Tis of Thee,' and selections from The Peer Gynt Suite, Zampa, Freichuts, The Ride of the Valkyries, Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody.

Unusual interest is manifest in the forthcoming return of this wonderful attraction for three days, commencing Monday, March 6.

Most of these selections are carried by the local music house.

Runs German War Machine

Neutral Writer Describes Amazing Control Exercised by Gen. Von Falkenhayn.

Mr. Hendrick Hudson, a neutral who has returned recently to France after a prolonged visit to Germany, has contributed a very interesting article to the Paris Tempo, from which the subsequent passages are quoted:

"Gen. Von Falkenhayn, who was placed at the head of the great general staff when Field Marshal Von Moltke fell into disgrace immediately after the battle of the Marne, is at the present hour the most powerful man in Germany. In regard to his antecedents one knows that Von Falkenhayn, while a young officer, was obliged to give up his military career on account of having run scandalously into debt. He left for China, where he obtained employment in a commercial house.

"When the expedition against the Boxers was organized in 1900, Von Falkenhayn was permitted to re-enter the army service, because of his valuable knowledge of the country in which the military operations were conducted. Since then he has risen steadily in rank, but he has not been able to shake off his previous reputation.

"Maximilian Harden, the well known journalist, was unsparing in his criticism of General Von Falkenhayn's selection as Von Moltke's successor. In his publication, the Zukunft, he declared that 'it was a bad policy to intrust the fate of Germany to a gambler, even if he were a good one at the game.' This bold utterance caused the suppression of the Zukunft for a whole week.

"Von Falkenhayn's power rests on the extraordinary influence he wields over the Kaiser, which is altogether inexplicable to those intimately acquainted with the German ruler. Our Emperor has been hypnotized by this general, said a prominent German. 'He is the victim of the dominating spell which the later has managed to cast over him.'

Boss of the Kaiser.

"Being extremely jealous of his authority, General Von Falkenhayn keeps away from the general headquarters all persons whom he suspects of trying to gain the confidence of the Kaiser. Many court officials have on different occasions tried to get audiences with their sovereign, only to be invariably rebuffed by Von Falkenhayn. Sometimes the refusal is very curt and ungracious. In other instances, diplomacy requires that some thinly veiled excuse be given. The chief of staff then usually informs the petitioner that His Majesty is just getting ready to depart for another front, but that he will grant the desired audience on his return to headquarters. This promise however, is never kept. It is by such means that Count August zu Eulenberg, Grand Marshal of the Imperial Court since 1900, has been prevented from seeing Emperor William for several months. The isolation of the Kaiser is an important factor in the plans of the militarist party. The ruler does not learn any more of the real situation and events than General Von Falkenhayn deigns to let him know. William II. is to-day actually the prisoner of his own military camarillia."

If the prohibition creed is true, if alcoholic liquor is really a poison and a curse, then I say in all seriousness that the catechism of the Episcopal church and of the Church of England, in teaching that wine is a food and a blessing, is teaching a damnable creed."

The speaker then went on to point out the next step after prohibition in the dry States would be a dry church.

"Should the prohibitionists gain the ascendancy in this country," said the Rev. Mr. Wasson, "they will not stop with their present programme. They will raise the new war cry: 'We demand a dry church! Rum must be abolished from the altar. Down with sanctified booze.' And if any religious body should protest against this attack on religious freedom, the answer will come quickly and with cruel logic: 'You church people helped us to abolish the curse of rum outside the church. Why should you complain now if we carry the reform a step farther and abolish this curse within the church?' That the prohibitionists would go to do this extreme cannot be doubted by any one who has witnessed the spirit of hatred, bigotry and intolerance than has always and everywhere characterized their propaganda."

ELEVEN COMMANDMENTS OF THE TRENCHES

Written by a Canadian who went to the front with the Queen's University Engineering Corps, and is now an officer in a Scottish regiment.

The 1st Commandment is—Thou shalt challenge all persons approaching.

The 2nd Commandment is—Thou shalt not send any engraving or any likeness of an airship in the heavens above, or any postcard of the earth beneath, or any drawing of any submarine in the waters under the earth for I, the Censor, am a jealous Censor, visiting the iniquities of the offenders with three months C.B., but showing mercy upon thousands by letting their letters go free; who keep my commandments.

The 3rd Commandment is—Thou shalt not use profane language, unless under extraordinary circumstances, such as seeing your comrade shot, or getting petrol in your tea.

The 4th Commandment is—Remember the soldiers' week consists of seven days. Six days shalt thou labour and do al lthy work and on the seventh do all thy odd jobs.

The 5th Commandment is — Keep thy rifle well oiled, shoot straight, so that thy days may be long upon the land which the enemy giveth thee.

The 6th Commandment is — Thou shalt not kill—time.

The 7th Commandment is—Thou shalt not adulterate thy issue tin by using it as a shaving jug.

The 8th Commandment is — Thou shalt not steal thy neighbour's kit.

The 9th Commandment is — Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy comrade, but preserve discreet silence as to his goings out and comings in.

The 10th Commandment is — Thou shalt not covet thy sergeant's post nor thy corporal's, nor thy staff-major's, but by dint, of perseverance, rise to the high position of a field-marshal.

The 11th Commandment is — Thou shalt love thy comrades of whatever race or colour they be, but thou shalt hate the Germans as thou does hate HELL.

FEARS CHURCH MAY GO "DRY"

Pastor Tells Wine Men of Hardships to Follow Prohibition.

NEW YORK, March 1.—The cause of prohibition got many body blows at the twelfth annual dinner of the American Wine Growers' Association at the Waldorf. Everybody present had some new reason to offer why this nation should not prohibit the sale of liquor. Greek and Roman history was drawn upon and Bachus was mentioned prominently. An Episcopal clergyman who was there appealed to the doctrines of his church for support in his contention that he could not favour prohibition and be true to his creed.

"If I believed in the doctrine of prohibition," said the Rev. William A. Wasson, formerly pastor of an Episcopal church in Riverhead, L.I., "I should withdraw from the ministry of the Episcopal church without delay. I should consider it dishonourable to remain in the church and at the same time repudiate the church's teachings.

NOT FOR PUBLICATION.

Communications Between Allies as to Refusal of Separate Peace.

LONDON, March 1.—In the House of Commons David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, said in reply to a question that it was not desirable to publish information concerning the communications that has passed between the Allies when they mutually bound themselves not to conclude a separate peace.

Mr. Snowden, Socialist member for Blackburn, intervened a question as to whether a secret treaty had not been concluded as the price of Italy's intervention in the war, offering to give Italy large tracts of Austrian territory. At this point the speaker stopped Mr. Snowden's further progress with his question, which remained unanswered.

New Submarines Being Constructed

Every day seems to indicate more clearly that the German negotiations with the United States about the Lusitania and similar outrages have been simply a cloak to gain time for Germany and in the end, humiliate the United States, without the least intention of voluntarily accepting the demands of the United States. During these negotiations she has been putting forth her greatest possible effort in the construction of a large number of enormous submarines, larger, more powerful, and of a greater radius of action than any submarine even vaguely considered possible at the outbreak of war. These new submarines are of the monitor type with very heavily armored deck and upper structure and have at least one large turret in which are mounted a full set of large naval guns, nearly as powerful as those carried by the first class battle cruisers. These dangerous vessels, also, travel at a comparatively high speed. When firing, they submerge all but the turret, thus presenting the smallest possible target. If forced to run, by approach of superior numbers of greater force, they submerge completely, as the regular submarines. It is reported, on good authority, that they will be able to attack openly, any vessel or less power than a first class destroyer. Since they have been designed, especially, for attacks on merchantmen, it is evident that any unconvoyed merchantman however heavily armed, will have a short but tragic fate when she falls in with one of these new sea monsters. It is estimated that these boats are so constructed and equipped that they will be able to make a complete return voyage from their German base to the American coast and back without taking on supplies of any kind after starting. In the last German note to the United States Germany has stated that her future submarine policy, beginning March 1st, will be to sink on sight any armed merchantman. She classes passenger vessels as merchantmen and, apparently, she is to be the sole judge as to whether her prey is armed. If there is any act, move, or appearance which her submarine murderers can possibly mis-construe as suspicious the boat will be sunk, with or without warning, as these modern pirates wish. It is not difficult to forsee many more terrible tragedies like the Lusitania in the near future. Germany has, already threatened that she outrages in the near future than she tends to commit far more terrible has in the past.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter,

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.

Fifteen Degrees Below Zero

Thermometer Took Another Drop Last Evening—The First of March

Last night the thermometer was down to 15 degrees below zero.

This is the first day of March and we give herewith a few old sams and proverbs relating to the month. Some of these old sayings are familiar, while others are not as well known:

"If March comes in like a lamb it goes out like a lion." "If it comes in like a lion it goes out like a lamb."

"As it rains in March so it rains in June."

"March flowers make no summer bowers."

"March in January, January in March, I fear."

"When March has April weather, April will have March weather."

"March damp and warm will do the farmer no harm."

"March winds and April showers, bring forth May flowers."

"Winds in March and showers in April, promise great blessings in May."

"Dust in March brings grass and foliage."

"Snow in March is bad for fruit and vegetables."

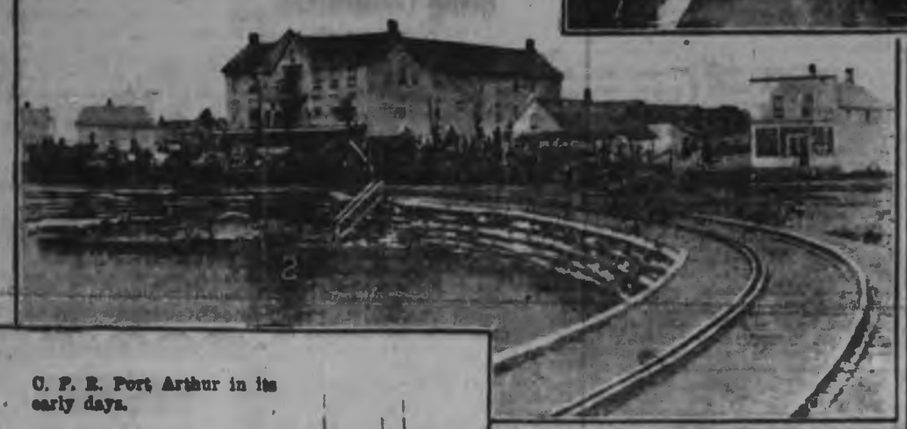
AT FLAHERTY'S

Port Arthur at present time.



Lieut.-Gov. McDonald starting from Port Arthur for Winnipeg in 1879.

Waterfront in 1886, Flaherty's in back ground.

C. P. R. Port Arthur in its early days.

"Flaherty's" in C. P. R. construction days.

WHEN the Canadian Pacific Railway was but a promise unfulfilled, and at the time when "Section Fifteen and "Section B" were live spots, and the Big Men of the early seventies gathered together, it was at "Flaherty's," Port Arthur, they met. Flaherty's door was big and wide and hospitably open at all times and seasons. Flaherty himself, big bodied, big minded, and big hearted, standing in the doorway of his popular hostel, used to wag his head and say: "They say the C. P. R. is goin' to make the town, but Flaherty is goin' to make the railway!" He did, he made the railway builders comfortable.

Flaherty's may not be mentioned without naming its popular mistress, a lady from Belfast, "one of the Bogue's!" Flaherty used to say, proudly; for she it was who gave to "Prince Arthur's Landing" its first social stamp. The times were rough (as railway times ever are), but nothing was ever said or done at Flaherty's which wouldn't "pass' in any drawing room on the continent. Mrs. Flaherty was an exacting hostess; many a big fellow came into the house roaring like a lion—it being sheer exhuberance of life—but in two seconds the biggest and roaringest of them was reduced to a lamb-like bleat! What a "mother" the gentle voiced lady was to all the down-and-outs in those early days! They were "unafraid," under Mrs. Flaherty's smile, for no request was ever refused and empty pockets were housed as were the "sure pays" in those pioneer days.

The town itself was a one-street-along-the-bay affair. The woods came right down to the water's edge. "Jim Conmee's mail" made the overland run to and from Duluth by dogs, and I hope someone has kept a photograph of the old "Ontario Bank," which blocked the highway, and like the Catholic Church, was "built upon a rock!" D. F. Burk and "young Ray," now a distinguished citizen and financier of the new town, Port Arthur, were bursers of the bank, which was "the size of a minute," in those historic days.

But "Flaherty's" hotel, "The Queens," it was called, was then the rendezvous of the Big Men who were building the Big Road. Not one of them, no matter where he be to-day, but will remember the "little room" off the hall where these gigantic minds met to discuss way and means of the work. That little room with its horse-hair covered seats was a sort of "House-of-Parliament," there some of the big deals undertaken were laid out, planned and shaped in that little room off the hall at Flaherty's, and during the solemn conclave, no one could get past Mrs. Flaherty herself, who like a bird defending a nest of her young, would keep off all and sundry, sending them to right and left, while the "millions" for the great work were "raised" in that little room fronting the bay.

Outside in the hall, dressed in his Sunday best, Thomas O'Hagan was waiting for "news." Thomas O'Hagan being the editor of "The Sentinel," whose voice filled all the spaces between Toronto and Winnipeg in those early days. Gentlemen, do you recollect Thomas O'Hagan, who ran what he called "The biggest weekly in all Nawrth Amurica!" Well, if some were to uproot old files of "the Sentinel," I feel sure pickings for "Forty Years Ago" to-day might be found.

It was at Flaherty's I first met the late Mr. Van Horne, even then a colossus of the day. Mr. Collingwood Schrieber too haunted Flaherty's. Marcus Smith and Jas. Mingaye were large factors in the engineering work undertaken and "Big Rory" McLennan, with "Sam" Hazelwood; "Paddy" Purcell, Hugh Ryan and Alex. Livingston, the bridge specialist, and B. A. Stewart were also striking forms in the early seventies and the C. P. R. I remember seeing Mr. George Middleton coming in with the late Frank Moberly, whose name should live while the railway runs. Frank Moberly was one of the titantic figures of the C. P. R., and these I have mentioned, as many more, used to meet and "talk things over" at Flaherty's.

Many a laugh went round the ample board at Flaherty's. Infractions of the game laws took place in the big dining room too, but Flaherty and his Irish wit could meet, make and break laws with a wink, for "in-the-out-of season," as he used to say in his droll way, "shure the best venison is only frogs' legs," and "frogs legs" it went down on the menu! There was a time when nothing stronger than coffee was allowed by a paternal act, and then the "coffee" went to men's heads; but they were level heads, as has been proved since, for, wherever you go and find men at the head of affairs generally, question them and you'll find they "worked on the C. P. R. in the seventies!"

Flaherty is no more. Its genial owner and master and host has been gathered to his forefathers, whom he used to boast "were kings in Ireland!" and who that has partaken of the hospitality at Flaherty's will deny that royalty descended with the line. Not you, nor I, who met at Flaherty's. Now-a-days when I go to Port Arthur, once Prince Arthur's Landing, and "Flaherty's," I find a grander, grayer hostel risen upon the old site. The eye is charged by changes, great changes, for the C. P. R. fulfilled its every promise and made a great city there, but memory brings back to mind the warm-hearted Flaherty himself and his smiling wife who to-day sleeps in the little cemetery beyond the town, where, if you go to a prettily kept green spot you will find: "Sacred to the memory of James and Elizabeth Flaherty," and a bunch of lately left blooms.

SAVE WAR ORPHANS LINDSEY TELLS FORD

Last of Peace Crusade Back, With Changed Views of the Situation in Europe

SEE MORAL FORCE IS FUTILE

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—The Old Guard of the Ford Peace crusade arrived at Hoboken on the Nieuw Amsterdam from Rotterdam. There were nine of them out of the original 168 who left on December 4 last to clear the trenches by Christmas.

The cost of the trip, as announced by Gaston Plaintiff, manager of the expedition was "a trifle more than $40,000.

Mr Plaintiff and some of the delegates issued statements estimating the return to the cause of peace for this expenditure. Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver, made a big item of the education some delegates had received in the politics and problems of Europe. Other delegates maximized the effect of the crusade on neutral sentiment.

Judge Lindsey returns with the belief that the war will some end and that the biggest work that Mr. Ford could undertake with the hope of effectively forwarding civilization and reducing human suffering is to turn his attention and his wealth toward the care of the thousands of orphans and miserable children in the hostile lands.

Mr. Ford entertained a party of twenty, including the delegates, at a luncheon in honor of Gaston Plaintiff. He spoke of a statement of his future plans at 5 o'clock but at that hour said he must have time to think it over.

The main obstacle in the way of taking care of war orphans, Judge Lindsey said, was the necessity for getting both sides to agree to allow milk and other food for children to pass the lines.

"More than 500,000 children have perished for lack of nourishment in the fighting countries," said Judge Lindsey, who left the Ford party to study the plight of war orphans for a month.

"In some parts of Poland, practically all children under six years have died, and all through that country few children of three years or under are still alive.

I am opposed to any undertaking to remove children or concentrate them. They ought to be cared for where they are.

"In Germany, where I spent ten days, there is a marked scarcity of milk. Beef is scarce, too, but there is plenty of other food. I dined well in Germany for less than it would cost in Denver, not to speak of New York. At an inn in Merseburg Prussian Saxony, I had for the equivalent of 30 cents a dinner consisting of a rich vegetable soup, a big platter of fresh pork, celery salad, a delicious fruit compote, cheese, bread and coffee. It would cost me $2 for such a meal at my hotel to-night.

"Close observation has greatly altered my opinion on the situation in Europe, and most other delegates have had similar changes of view. It looks to me like a long war. I see little chance at present for efforts to bring about peace. I spoke English all the time I was in Germany and was well treated, but it is true of the people of the belligerent countries that, even if they do not hate us, they certainly do like Americans."

Peace and harmony marked the return of the final crusade remnant. The Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, who told S. S. McClure to "go to bed," and called reporters "serpents in our Eden," was affable and benign.

The delegates freely admitted that the original plan had been based on incomplete information of the European situation and that the personnel had not been sufficiently select, but they were convinced that Mr. Ford had conferred a vast benefit upon humanity.

The Rev. Mr. Jones issued a statement with the concurrence of all the other delegates, in which he said:

"The members of the party admit the crudities and incoherencies incidental to such an expedition, because the company was hastily gathered and therefore poorly organized. But they think that a very definite impression was made in at least four of the neutral countries of Europe.

"The returning members had three weeks to get acquainted with the situation after the departure of the main body of the party for home, and they are of the opinion that the future work of Mr. Ford and his associates for peace in Europe had better be concentrated at The Hague in co-operation with the Anti War Council, which already has very important international connections and an efficient working force together with the Woman's International Committee for Permanent Peace and kindred organizations."

Henry Ford, who went down the bay to meet the remnant, said little but seemed very determined. He conferred with them, and afterward Manager Plaintiff said:

"As Mr. Ford has said, the idea has at least put peace on the front pages of the newspapers of the world, and the thought thus created may be the means of an earlier settlement than otherwise.

The returning delegates, who went to the Waldorf to confer with Mr. Ford, were R. B. English, Mrs. Frederick Holt of Detroit, R. S. Neely of New York, the Rev Mr. and Mrs Jones of Chicago, Governor L. B. Hanna of North Dakota, Judge and Mrs. Lindsey of Denver, and Gaston Plaintiff.

Mr. Plaintiff said the largest items in the $465,000 spent were ocean fares and the special train through Germany.

When told that a member of the party had estimated the item for champagne and liquors at $30,000 he said:

"No Sir. There were no such items in the bills. If any member of the party drank he paid for it himself."

TRY "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS IF SICK OR BILIOUS

To-night! Clean Your Bowels and Stop Headache, Colds, Sour Stomach

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and bad colds—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels, or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken.

HOW THE BIBLE IS MADE UP

Dramatic and Allied Elements Take 82 Per Cent. of the Sacred Pages; Doctrine and Exhortation About 7

Information, interesting as well as suggestive, is contained in an accurate analysis by the Rev. W. W. Paris of the literary content of the Bible. Mr. Paris is pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Miami, Florida, and one of the ablest preachers in the States.

The analysis was made while preparing an article for publication and is the result of a careful scrutiny of the text of the American revised Bible. Several months were occupied in taking up the Bible page by page, sentence by sentence, and in some cases even line by line, that the results might be accurate.

Theology's Small Place.

To those who regard the Bible, not as the literature of the Jews and of the early Christian Church, but as a compendium of texts, which may be used to bolster up beliefs sometimes more or less fantastic, it may come as a shock to learn that, of the total contents of the Bible, only 17.5 per cent. is devoted to doctrine and discussion, church organization and ritual and matters of dogmatic theology.

Church organization, ceremonial and religious observances are discussed in 19 per cent. of the Bible and a large proportion of this is found in the ceremonial of the Jewish Church, given in Leviticus. To doctrinal discussions 2.5 per cent. is devoted and 4.7 to evangelical exhortations.

National Literature.

The remainder of the Holy writings is devoted to history, biography, poetry, philosophy and practical exhortations, much of this is in highly dramatic and fragmentary form, such as would appeal to peoples who intellectually were but as children. While this literature differs but little in form to that of the Semitic races any student of Oriental literature will at once be struck with the marked difference in kind.

MORATORIUM FOR SOLDIERS.

Provision May Be Made to Relieve Britain's Volunteers.

LONDON, March 1. — Recent recruiting in Great Britain has revealed a good deal of dissatisfaction over the failure of the Government to make adequate financial arrangements for married men in good positions enlisting under the Lord Derby scheme, and in whose behalf agitation arose for a moratorium for the rents of their residences and other liabilities.

Walter Hume Long, President of the Local Government Board, announced in the House of Commons that the Government was considering the question of establishing such a moratorium, but that no detailed statement was yet possible.

MARCH ENTERS LIKE A LAMB

Old Superstition is Losing Favour —Records Since 1900

March entered like a lamb. Last year the month came in quietly and ended quietly, and so, as in regard to other sayings, the Weather Man does not believe in the old superstition, "In like a lamb, out like a lion," and vice versa.

March is not really the windiest or fiercest month in the year, as many people imagine, and yet it holds the record for the heaviest one day snowfall, 16.2 inches having fallen on on the 28th of March, 1876. On the 27th, 1870, there was a snow storm which left behind sixteen inches of snow. Citizens will not likely forget the 1st of March, 1914, when, for a short time, the wind blew out of the northwest at the rate of 96 miles an hour. In that year the month ended with a storm.

Records Since 1900.

Since 1900 the old saying has worked only five times. Following is the record of the 1st and 31st days of March in the past 16 years:

THE WORLD OF SPORT

THE SCHEDULED GAMES ARE NEARING COMPLETION

Finals Will Be Played Off Some Time This Week--Last Night's Games Produced Some Close Finishes

The scheduled games have simmered down to the finals. J. W. McDermid will play off with W. M. Lang for the first prizes and Herb. Martin meets Dr. Wightman as the respective runners-up in the two groups. It is expected that these games will be played off some time this week. They were to have been played to-night, but it was decided to put on the vice-skips' bonspiel at once, and two draws of these games will be played to-night.

The Scheduled Games.

Last night's games all ran to close finishes, producing considerable good curling. By way of review, it might be stated that at the beginning of the season the club was divided into two groups, for each of which a schedule was arranged. The games have been played since the first of the year, and in each group it was simply a process of elimination or the survival of the fittest, represented in this instance by the rinks which won the most games. W. M. Lang won the honours in group A and Mr. McDermid, by defeating W. D. Campbell last night, won the other group. At the same time Dr. Wightman was the runner-up in group A and Herb. Martin is second best in group B. Hence the play off will be as follows:

First prizes—McDermid vs. Lang.
Second prizes—Martin vs. Wightman.

Both these games should see close contests, and the announcement of the play-off will likely be a signal for another gallery crowd.

Scores Were Close.

Last night's games had a distinct bearing upon the finals and actually affected three of the rinks that play for the prizes. Group B had spun out, leaving Campbell and McDermid to fight it out for the first place Campbell drew away with a big lead, but McDermid came strong about half way and finally won out in the last end. At that it was practically a question of the skips' stones and Campbell's critical shot was a little wide. The score by ends was:

Campbell . . . . . 0103300010 20—10
McDermid . . . . . 1010011501 01—11

While this game was in progress Alex. Kay with a rabbit's foot tucked away in his vest pocket was battling George Giroux. Thanks to the charm and to Giroux's falling down on the last two ends Kay nosed out a win by one point the score being 10 to 9. This does not allow much credit for Kay's game but the fact remains that he hung on all the way and won out with a nice final end. The game meant the elimination of Giroux as a runner-up. The score was thus:

Giroux . . . . . 2220002110 10— 9
Kay . . . . . 2021100030 01—10

In the meantime Herb Martin's alleged Winnipeg rink won from Tom Brightman by 12 to 10, by the combination of his win and Giroux's loss Martin qualified as a runner-up. Those who had scanned the dope sheet observed the three important games. It read thus: If McDermid beats Campbell, Kay beats Giroux and Brightman loses to Martin, Group B was decided there and then, all in one night. When it was all over there were quite a number modestly admitting that they had called the night's play right across the board. These men are wasting valuable time doping curling. With a record like that they should be following the Havana form sheet and picking off some easy money on the ponies. The score was as follows:

Brightman . . . . . 0103020110 20—10
Martin . . . . . 1010301002 04—12

Coming home Martin was down 2, and right here the rabbit's foot returns. Kay had just interred Giroux's hopes and crossing to ice 3 passed the mystic trinket to Martin, who needed two shots to tie and three to win. And right there Martin got a four end. Quick Watson with the hypodermic. Some of the wise ones in the gallery were inclined to believe that Brightman did not try to do much with his last two stones. That may be, but he certainly played a good game right up to that point; both rinks in fact shared in the quality of curling that characterized the night's play. Probably Martin's best work was on the tenth and when he made a fine draw to the button right up to his other shot.

Taking it all in all, it was a big night. Something doing all the time and a three ring circus was slow in comparison.

Dr. Wightman won two games. He defeated Harstone by 14 to 9 and Harry Foote defaulted to him, thus cleaning up the scheduled game slate. The doctor didn't have a rabbit's foot, either. He doesn't need it with his uncanny aptitude of getting within reaching distance of some of the prizes. He may not be making a lot of noise about it, but you can be fairly sure that he is somewhere around, a Joffre eye to his own campaign, enjoying the game and getting results. He has already rung the bell once this year, in the open bonspiel, and if he trims Martin he can cut another notch in his broom.

10,000 Germans Killed Near Pepper Hill

PARIS, March 1. — Among the wounded who arrived at Paris was a Sergeant of the 75th Battery in the section near Regneville, who describes the German attack of Saturday morning against Cote du Poivre (Pepper Hill). "From dawn till seven their howitzers had tried to demolish us, without hurting a man or gun. We held our fire, waiting for their infantry. At 9.30 the message came that they were moving forward. We could not see them because they were hidden by Talou Hill. As we tried to look out a Lieutenant ordered us under cover. Suddenly the telephone operator gave the signal; we began firing at eighteen hundred metres. We fired at full speed for twenty minutes. When 'cease fire' came there was a heap of shell cases fully a man high behind our guns. At the order I rushed to a look-out trench at the side of a battery. At the top of the ravine on the edge of the plateau was a great heap of Germans. They looked like a swarm of ants crawling over each other. Not one was standing. Every minute shells threw bodies and debris into the air. The whole ravine slope was grey with corpses. One could not see the ground, they were so numerous and the snow no longer white. We calculated that there were fully ten thousand dead at that point alone, and the river ran past dappled with patches and streaks of blood. I had read of rivers running blood, now I have seen it. While the stream wasn't crimson, one could trace reddish patches distinctly. We watched fascinated, then came a German shell, a piece of which lodged in my shoulder. The Lieutenant said it served me right for not keeping covered. I would gladly have given both arms to have been able to stay until the enemy was beaten."

Lady Warwick Tells Story of a Royal Feud

Once Said England Needed a Dose of Their Efficiency, Only They Wouldn't Retire Later.

In the February number of Nash's Magazine of London Lady Warwick lays bare for the first time in print an intimate view of the relations which existed between the late King Edward VII. and his nephew, the German Kaiser. Her statement, she frankly declares, is the outcome of "having enjoyed the confidence of King Edward before and after he came to the throne," and of "having heard from his own lips, scores of times his attitude toward Germany and the Germans."

At the very threshold of her article she denies emphatically that the diplomatic policy of England, which King Edward was supposed to have followed after the death of his mother, Queen Victoria, had for its aim the isolation of Germany. He was a constitutional monarch, she says, and always followed the advice of his ministers, who according to the British Constitution, were responsible for his actions in Parliament.

After the meeting of the Czar and King at Revel in 1907, when the foundations of the Anglo-Russian entente were laid, Lady Warwick says she asked King Edward to describe to her the political situation and records his reply as follows:

"Germany is our commercial rival; she has a magnificent business attitude; she might develop, with growing riches and a few adventurous statesmen, a rivalry of another kind. The Revel meeting, with the French Convention, will, I hope put an end to the possibility. But nothing has been done that stands in the way of a good understanding between London and Berlin. I believe all sensible men desire peace. We have no quarrel with Germany or any other power."

Lady Warwick makes it clear that King Edward resented Germany's forcing M. Delcasse being "thrown to the wolves" because he regarded the growing friendship among England, France and Russia as one of the best guarantees of European peace. He saw no reason why Germany should interfere when France and England came to an agreement in regard to their outstanding differences in Egypt, Morocco, Newfoundland, etc.

One of the most curious of the Countess's reminiscences is that in which she recalls her meeting with King Edward in February, 1910—three months before his death.

"I may add," she begins, "that King Edward admired Germany almost as much as he loved France. The thoroughness of the German business methods, the rejection of everything slovenly in thought and action, impressed him greatly, and he once made a remarkable statement to me.

"It was in London in the late winter of 1909-10, less than three months before he died. He came to tea and talked of German administration.

"'Do you know,' he said, 'that if this country could be controlled in the same way, we should be all the better for it? If we could be ruled by Germans just long enough to have our house put in order—' he paused and added with a laugh—'You know the trouble is that if we once had them we could not get rid of them.'"

When the King was Prince of Wales, the Countess writes, there was undoubtedly much fiction between uncle and nephew—"a sort of family quarrel, intensified by the high standing of both parties"—and she remembers having heard the Prince speak angrily of the Kaiser owing to the way the latter treated his mother, the Empress Frederick, the Prince's sister. He then said that his nephew was "suffering from megalomania and had not learned to control a rather unruly tongue."

"But," she adds, "in all the years I have passed mentally in review I never remember hearing King Edward utter a single sentence of ill will to Germany; the worst he ever said was that the Germans were a 'heavy race'. That was his expression.

"The Russian and French embassies were in the Marlborough House set, but the German Embassy never was, and the only Ambassador there who ever approached terms of intimacy was Prince Hatzfeldt. In all probability the influence of Queen Alexandra had something to do with the failure of the German Embassy for she had learned by the bitter experience of her own country to suspect German motives, knowing as she did the real truth about Schleswig-Holstein."

There were a variety of reasons for the coldness between uncle and nephew, writes the Countess.

"The Kaiser chafed at his uncle's association with a financier, (Baron Hirsch;) he chafed, too, when King Edward spent long hours at Homburg with the Empress Frederick, who had a castle there in the days of her widowhood. The love between the brother and sister was very beautiful. She confided all her troubles to him from the early days, for oddly enough, when there were family quarrels in Berlin, Queen Victoria always sided with her grandson against the Princess Royal. The old Queen was devoted to the Kaiser, and perhaps unwisely would hold him up to her eldest son as an example of what a man should be; but it is only right and fair to say that Wilhelm II. reciprocated her affection, and his grief when she passed away was heartfelt. If only he had loved his mother as well as he loved his grandmother!"

After Queen Victoria died the relations between King Edward and the Kaiser are said to have improved. The attempt was made on the King's life by an anarchist at the end of the Boer war seems to have helped this, for the Kaiser met the Royal train at the frontier station to congratulate his uncle and inquire after his health.

"King Edward," Lady Warwack records, "wrote to me from Sandringham on his return. After thanking me for a telegram and letter of congratulation, he told me the Kaiser had come all the way from Berlin to Altona to inquire after his health. He thought that was very kind of him."

Lady Warwick firmly believes that had King Edward been alive in July, 1914, there would have been no war, because the King's personal influence was so strong that he would have been able to reconcile all differences at the last moment.

She bases this belief on the fact that whatever may have been the King's personal views, they would never have been to Germany's detriment, even had they been able to affect political issues; but it would have been the weight of his personality and complete knowledge of the situation which would have made themselves felt as Berlin and St. Petersburg.

Newspaper That is a Great Worry German General

Brussels takes its captivity with a sardonic humor that often gives uneasy hours to the enemy within her gates. Not long ago The Outlook (New York) published from the pen of Arno Dosch a vivacious account of the pranks played upon the army of occupation by the lawless element akin to the Paris Apache. There are a fearless and desperate band who fail on all the signs of outward respect demanded by conquerors of a subject people, and who yet keep within the letter of the law. The London Daily News reveals another thorn in the flesh of von Bissing and his ruling staff. It is a newspaper—La Libre Belgique, Free Belgium—"one of the brightest and certainly one of the most remarkable papers in the world." Says the writer, Mr. G F. Steward:

"It's existence is a paradox; its presence a perfect post—to the Prussians. It is safe to say that absolutely nothing has so annoyed the supersensitiveness of the Junior governors of Brussels, or caused them to look more ridiculous in the eyes of the Brusselois, than this will-o'-the-wisp that dances tantalizingly before their eyes, appears regularly as from some supernatural agency, gibes at their effort to capture it, and disappears for a period only to reappear in order to satirize and raise a laugh at the clumsy Teutons. It is free as the day; but it is chased with as much keenness as Victory is chased by the Kaiser. There are thousands of spies in Brussels to whom its discovery would mean the sunshine of von Bissing's smiles and a pat of approval from Sauberzweig. They have searched every printing work and studied the types of machines; they have peered into hundreds of houses, cellars, they found. They have seized unsuspecting suspects in the streets, and rifled their pockets, and have broken in suddenly upon little gatherings; but all to no purpose.

"It's well-advertised telegraphic address is: Kommandatur, Bruxelles. As to its printing works and office of administration, it blithely says: 'Ne pouvant etre un lieu de tout repos, lis sont installes dans une cave automobile.' (Lacking a safe base, we issue from an automobile oil-tank.)

"Von Bissing is on the free list. Not an addition appears but a copy of it is deposited in his letter-box. That box has been watched for days at a stretch, but the elusive culprit has not been caught. Regularly the paper is delivered by the invisible hand, regularly there is another outburst of ineffective rage and unsuccessful searching. No German can stand the sarcastic reprinting of these sentences of good advice to the Belgian population by Cardinal Mercier.

"'Toward the persons who dominate our country by military force have the regard demanded by the general interest. Respect the rules that they impose so long as they do not carry a blow at the liberty of our Christian consciences and our patriotic dignity.

"'Could anything be more irritating than the republication of these words under such circumstances? Another blood-hunt commences. One day, among the numerous anonymous communications that go to the German Governor was the advice that La Libre Belgique was actually published by Dr. Andre Vesale, of Place des Martyrs. This was regarded as a sure tip. The German sleuth-hounds went to the square and methodically called at every house, inquiring for the doctor, until one individual plucked up courage to point to the medico's statue and explain that the gentleman flourished some centuries ago, was known as a great anatomist and credibly regarded as having indulged in body-snatching!"

I.

Brother Jonathan sat by the kitchen fire,
Nursin' his foot on his knee.
"It's a turrible fight they're havin' out there,
But they can't git over to me."
And Jonathan 'jingled the coins in his han'
An' thanked the good God for the sea.

II.

"They'll be wantin' my cattle and hogs an' corn,
An' powder and guns mebbee,
But they'll pay on the nail! cash down down, by gum!
For all they git from me."
An' he smiled kinder slow and jingled the coins,
"It's good for business," sez 'ee.

III.

"They're killin' 'em off like flies, they say,
They can't blame it onto me,
It ain't my war, yet I do feel bad
For them poor Belgiums," sez 'ee.
And he took a few dollars out of his jeans,
And sent it across the sea.

IV.

Then he heard they'd drownded a thousand men,
And some from Amerikee.
So he said right out, "If you do that ag'in
You'll git me mad," sez 'ee.
An' he kep' on jingtin' the coins in his han'
An' thankin' God for the sea.

V.

They did it ag'in and then ag'in;
"You quit that now!" sez 'ee;
"I'll give you fellers a piece o' my mind
If I git hol' o' ye."
An' he winked one eye with his tongue in his cheek;
"I'm too proud to fight," sez 'ee.

VI.

Then they got to plottin' an' blowin' up things,
An' he sez: "You let me be.
I won't stand these furrin' tricks o' yours
In this here lan' o' the free."
And it got old Jonathan all het up,
An' he took his feet from his knee.

VII.

An' he got to thinkin' and thinkin' hard,
Worryin' how it would be.
An' wonderin' what in Sam Hill he'd do
If some pesky enemy
With all them dreadnoughts and submarines
Came a-rippin' across the sea.

VIII.

An' he thought of the army he wished he had,
An' he reckoned up his navy.
"I guess I've set here long enough,
I'll have to git busy," sez 'ee.
But the last I saw he was a-settin' there yit
An' strokin' his long goatee.

IX.

It ain't no time to be settin' round,
I kin tell ye—no sirree.
He better be gittin' up out o' that cheer
An' git outdoors and see,
An' do his chores an' fix things up
The way things oughter be.

X.

He might be helpin' them cousins o' hisn
To fight for liberty.
An' he might git in a few licks hisself
Jes' for humanity.
Anyhow, I wish he'd quit jingtin' them coins
An' thankin' God fer the sea.

A HIGH-GRADE HAVANA FILLED CIGAR, FINE SUMATRA WRAPPER.

The cigar smoker will do well if he selects the improved "Halpins Ten" cigar, manufactured by the Peterborough Havana Cigar Co.

We received a large shipment of imported leaf early in January and have the manufactured article now on sale at all the leading cigar stands.

Our 1915 product was a high-grade cigar, yet we can say unhesitatingly that the 1916 production is superior. The 1916 "Halpins Ten" cigar is second to no ten cent cigar on the market, and it retails at 4 for 25 cents.

We are putting forth every effort to attract the patronage of the cigar smokers and would earnestly solicit a trial, which we feel sure will merit your continued patronage. 28d-tf

THE LITTLE BATTLE WITHIN THE BIG ONE ON FRENCH FRONT

With the French Army in Alsace, Jan. 20. (By Mail)—A feud in the middle of a big war, this is what this position of Hartsmannswillerkopf is; a feud just like they have down in Breathit county, Kentucky. For French officers will admit and so will German officers, that this position on the western battlefront has no more and no less importance than scores of other points elsewhere between the sea and Switzerland.

Every few days the French and German communiques mention scraping on the knob in the Vosges mountains known as "Old Armand," or Hartsmannswillerkopf. One might imagine that the side holding this crest held the key to Paris or to Berlin. It is not so. It's simply the feud going on, each side determined to have the honor of holding the top of the mountain. It is like the struggle about a flag; a matter of pride in taking and holding.

The quarrel began exactly a year ago. A small detachment of French Chasseurs established an advance post of the summit of Hartsmannswillerkoff. They were surprised by a larger force, surrounded and beaten. This was on Jan. 15, 1915.

Fortifying the position strongly as an observation point, the Germans held the crest until March 23, when the French stormed the hill, took the trenches at the top, captured 10 officers, 84 noncoms and 313 men, all unwounded.

Early in April the Germans recaptured part of the lost trenches, but the French, on April 6, charged again, took all they had lost, together with the big rock on the far side of the summit.

"Blue Devils" Win.

Humiliated, the Germans prepared a counter-attack, which they launched April 26, taking everything back to and including the summit where they feverishly set to work organizing the position so it would be stronger than ever. All night they worked, but with dawn came the Blue Devils, as the Alpine Chasseurs are called, swarmed up the precipitous slopes of "Old Armand," and despite machine guns, rifle fire and bayonets, they reached the top and put the Germans to rout once more. Immediately the Germans tried to rally, but failed, though they established trenches within seven yards of those of the French at the top.

Throughout the summer the little war in the middle of the big war was kept going, first the Germans gaining a section of trench at this point or that, then the French driving them out and taking a corresponding slice of the German trenches a bit lower down the slope.

On Sept. 9 the Germans, after a period of comparative calm, slammed home a surprise attack and retook the summit. The French, undismayed, came back at the Germans the same night and in the dark fought like the blue demons people call them. They retook their trenches and many German dead were left behind.

The same thing happened all over again Oct. 15, when the Kaiser's men sent wave after wave against the bitterly contested mountain top, finally taking the whole works, driving the French back down the hill in the direction of France. But on Oct. 16 the French came tearing up the hill again and drove the Germans out.

The Germans came back in December several times, gaining a foothold, but just before Christmas the French drove them back with heavy losses, including nearly 1400 prisoners. Two days later the Germans retook part of the lost ground and some French prisoners. Then the French surged forward, making new gains and taking about 800 more prisoners.

So the struggle for the top of the mountain goes on. To hold it is an honor. To win this honor many soldiers have died. To the layman their death may seem vain, foolish, useless, but to the soldier not a drop of blood has been wasted. For in war, victory or defeat depends largely on what the French call "Moral" and to hold the top of Hartsmannswillerkoff helps the moral of the whole army of the Vosges.

MARCHED 24 MILES

KRYWALSKI CHARGED WITH MURDER IN FIRST DEGREE

Lottie Broniszewska, Girl Shot, Dies at Her Home, From Hemorrhages.

BUFFALO, March 1.—Bronislaus Krywalski, 23 years old, of 15 Ball street, Sloan, who the police say, shot and fatally wounded Lottie Broniszewska, 20 years old, Tuesday night while they were visiting friends at 76 Milburn street, was charged with murder, first degree, by Police Inspector Henry J. Girvin. Miss Broniszewska died at her home from hemorrhages of the right lung.

Inspector Girvin stated that although several witnesses made statements saying the shooting was accidental, he had enough evidence to place the murder charge against Krywalski. Miss Broniszewska at first stated she did not know who shot her, but later she said her lover, Krywalski, did the shooting, the police say.

Krywalski and Zigmund Nowaczaki, also of Sloan, and the young woman went to the Milburn address Tuesday night and there Krywalski started examining a revolver. He declares he jokingly held up Miss Broniszewka and the revolver discharged.

After the shooting the two young men took the girl to Dr. James P. Barr's office, and said they had been held up in Broadway, near the city line and the woman was shot. Later they told the story of the shooting at the Milburn address. Nowaczki is being held as a witness.

HOW I DARKENED MY GRAY HAIR

Lady Gives Simple Home Receipe That She Used to Darken Her Gray Hair.

For years I tried to restore my gray hair to its natural colour with the prepared dyes and stains, but none of them gave satisfaction, and they were all expensive. I finally ran onto a simple recipe which I mixed at home that gives wonderful results. I gave the recipe, which is as follows, to a number of my friends, and they all delighted with it. To 7 ozs. of water add a small box of Orlex Compound, 1 oz. of bay rum and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Use every other day until the hair becomes the required shade, then every two weeks. It will not only darken the gray hair, but removes dandruff and scalp humors, and acts as a tonic to the hair. It is not sticky or greasy, does not rub off and does not colour the scalp.

Declares Greece Hopes For Move Against Salonica

BERLIN, (by Wireless to Sayville, L.I.) March 2.—"Do you consider it possible to force our people to give up their neutrality by pressure with bayonets? Whoever believes that the Greeks will abandon their King does not knew the Greek character."

Thus declared Mr. Skouloudis, Prime Minister of Greece, to the correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt, who was interviewing him, according to the Overseas News Agency, which summarizes the interview as follows:

"Mr. Skouloudis asserted that between January 1 and January 10 the Entente Powers tried to move the Greek people to rebellion against their government by attempting to starve them out, but that the Greeks got along on vegetables and fruits. When the Entente Powers saw this, added the Premier, they understood that not only the Greek army, but the majority of the Greek people, indorsed their government's policy.

"The Entente, therefore, changed its tactics, continued Mr. Skouloudis, and allowed the Greeks their regular rations.

"Greece hopes for and would welcome an offensive against Salonika, the Premier asserted, because the occupation of that port affects every Greek like a nightmare. He felt certain, he said, that if the Bulgarians were to enter Greece for war operations the feelings of the Greeks would not be hurt. Finally he declared emphatically:—

"At all events, the world will see that Greece will not give up her neutrality. She will not allow herself to be forced by events nor by arms."

SEGREGATION OF NEGROES.

St. Louis, Mo., Passes Two Ordinances—Negroes Make Legal Fight.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 2.—Ordinances providing for the segregation of whites and negroes in separate blocks were carried yesterday by a vote of 52,300 to 17,867.

The ordinances are to go into effect in ten days, but prominent negroes state that an injunction would be applied for at once, and if necessary the case will be carried to the Supreme Court of the United States, which has never passed on segregation.

One ordinance provides that no white or negro person can become a resident in a block occupied entirely by the other race. The other ordinance provides that no white or negro can become a resident in a block of which 75 per cent. of the residents are of the opposite race. The ordinances also apply to churches, schools, theatres and all assembly places.

USE TRAINS IN TRENCHES.

The narrow track requirements will permit their passage back and forth through almost any part of the earthworks on the firing line for the transportation of munitions and supplies.

Kills Four Wild Dogs Which Attacked Deer

Passaic Game Warden Wars on Dangerous Pack.

PASSAIC, N.J., March 2.—William B. Klein, game warden of Passaic county, who left here to kill off a pack of wild dogs in the mountainous section of the lower end of Greenwood lake, has returned home. He killed four wild dogs and said that because of the heavy crust on the snow he was unable to track the animals.

He said that the farmers in that section of the country had been terrorized by the wild dogs, which had killed much livestock. As for the deer, quail and partridge they had been practically exterminated by the dogs. Warden Klein and two guides will return to their camp later and expect to be gone a week. By this time he believes the snow will be in such a condition he can track the dogs, and he hopes to exterminate the pack.

Thin Men and Women Who Want to Gain Weight Should Try At Once This 10 Days Flesh Building Test

Report Gains at Rate of Three to Five Pounds a Week in Many Instances. Full Directions Given.

Most thin, run down men and women would probably be glad to increase their weight with ten to twenty-five pounds of good, firm, solid, healthy stay-there flesh and fat if they believed it possible to accomplish such results by just merely making the materials in their daily meals do a little more work than they are doing now.

This is said to be the chief reason why most thin people do stay under weight. They are so constituted that they fail to fully assimilate the nourishment of their food, a great deal of which passes from the body as waste. Increase assimilation to normal and normal weight follows as a matter of course.

If you are ten pounds or more underweight and believe this can't be done in your case, here is a simple, inexpensive, and really harmless test that is well worth trying.

First, weigh yourself. Then with each meal for ten days and each night as you go to bed take a single Sargol tablet. Then weigh yourself again and let the scales tell the story.

Sargol may not increase your weight as much as one pound a day but with whatever increase in your weight may be shown you can decide what the continued use for a few weeks further may be able to do for you. Sargol does not of itself make fat but consisting of a splendidly balanced combination of assimilative aids and flesh building agents it mixes with your meals for the purpose of making it easier for your blood to accept their strength, flesh and fat-making nourishment and turn it into strength, flesh and fat upon your body.

A great many people have gladly told that it succeeds. There are many reports like the following: "I have increased 18 pounds in less than a month," wrote a man from Colorado. Another man who said that he had been losing over a pound a week and was under 156 pounds, gained two pounds the first week taking Sargol, and "been gaining ever since." Last report over 178 pounds. Better than 15 pounds gain. A lady from St. Louis wrote, "Have gained 16 pounds and am still gaining." Sargol as a rule should be taken 30 days or more where results like above are desired.

The tablets are small, easily swallowed, produce no disagreeable effects, contain no habit drugs, are harmless and not at all expensive as compared with results said to be obtained.

NOTE—Sargol, referred to above is well known as a flesh builder to many of the leading local druggists who furthermore sell it on the positive guarantee, as found in each large package, of satisfactory weight increase or money back. In view of this liberal offer and the harmless nature of the remedy, it would seem that all who desire increased weight should be glad to give this method a trial.

A Certified Cure of Bilious Headache

Chronic Liver Trouble Was Entirely Cured by the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills—Endorsement by Justice of The Peace

Many people are habitually bilious. Mode of life tends to make chronic a torpid condition of the liver. The result is spells of biliousness with sick headache, stomach derangements and much irritability and depression of spirits.

To many neglect to take active means of curing biliousness. The bad spell passes over and for a time they are all right. But an unusually hearty meal upsets the liver and consequently the usual discomfort and suffering.

The writer of this letter has broken up this habit of biliousness and is now enjoying the best of health. Her experience should prove of value to many who, like her, have suffered for years from bilious spells and sick headaches.

Miss Cora Cochran, Salisbury, N. B., writes:—"I was nearly always troubled with headaches, and every two or three weeks would have to lose a day or two from school with bilious sick headache. I have taken doctor's medicine and other preparations which did little good.

"When I had the sick headache I would vomit a lot and could keep nothing on my stomach. My mother got Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and I was soon improved, and continued the treatment until entirely cured. My condition generally was greatly benefitted, and I am now in the best of health."

Mr. J.J. Keohan, J. P., writes:—"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Miss Cora Cochran and believe her statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

Keep the liver active by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and you will prevent a multitude of petty ills. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

Yvonne, watching his progress, suddenly yielded to another memory of Tollemache swinging from the shepherd's hooks of Sainte Barbe's tower. Suppose the rope was to break—just as one of the rings had come away in Lorry's grip? Of course the notion was stupid. She knew that each strand of that particular rope was sound, that it might be trusted to hold the Hirondelle herself against the straining of wind and tide, let alone bear the dead weight of two people; but a woman's intuition is stronger than reason. And in this instance her foreboding came true, though from a cause that she had not foreseen.

All at once Peridot uttered a yell that degenerated into a semi-hysterical shriek; for temper among counts in such crisis, and the Breton nature was being strung to a high pitch.

"Hold tight, all hands! Here's a tidal wave!"

The monster whose coming the fisherman had feared all day was upon them before Tollemache could translate the warning. It broke against the Stella's hull, and literally dashed solid tons of water on the Hirondelle and the hapless pair now midway between the two vessels. During some seconds the staunch sardine boat seemed veritably to have foundered. Even in the convulsive and choking effort needed to cling with the strength of desperation to the nearest rope or stay, her occupants were aware that she sank appreciably beneath the sheer weight and fury of that tremendous sea.

Then their blinded eyes emerged into blessed daylight again, their lungs filled with air, the flood subsided, the Hirondelle rose, trembling like a living creature, and the wave boomed away across the half-mile of channel to tear at the rocks of Finistere in a last paroxysm.

Peridot, secure in the faith that one born with a caul could not drown, was perhaps the first to regain his senses. When he swept the water from his eyes he looked for the Stella; but that unfortunate little vessel had only been driven still more tightly into the jaws of the reef, though a great gap showed to starboard amidships. She was breaking in two.

"God be thanked for that, at any rate!" he muttered.

The concession was due to the strong commonsense of a Breton, which old him that signs and portents would prove of no avail against instant death if the Stella had rolled over. Then, having ascertained that his own people were safe, he looked for the colossus he had last seen clutching the ropes. The ropes were there; but man and woman had vanished. something bobbed up among the spume and foam close to the Hirondelle's side. He leaned over and grabbed a huge arm. With one powerful tug he drew a body half out of the water. It was the man; but the woman had been reft from his close embrace at the moment when some chance of safety seemed to have come most surely within reach. His sou'wester cap had been wrenched off, and, even when hauling the limp body on board, Peridot knew that in his quickness of eye and hand would avail naught.

He held a corpse in his grasp. The top of the unfortunate man's skull was visibly flattened, and the gray hair was already darkened by an ominous dye. In all likelihood the wave struck him when least prepared, tore his fingers from the ropes, and dashed him head foremost against the Hirondelle's timbers.

Peridot was no sentimentalist. He did not waste a needless sigh over the fate of one when the lives of many were trembling in the balance. Even when he was placing the body at Yvonne's feet, where it would be out of the way for the time, he peered up at her with a grim smile.

"Two gone, Ma'mselle," he said; "but with the help of the Madonna we'll save the rest!"

A shriek from the girl's lips, and an expression of terror in her eyes which assuredly was not there after the gallant Hirondelle had thrown off her mightiest and most vindictive assailant, told him that some worse tragedy was imminent. He turned, and saw Tollemache leaping into the frothing vortex that raged between the stern of the boat and the nearest rock. The Breton guessed instantly that the young American had seen the drowning woman. Leaving the Stella [illegible] raced after and [illegible] sweep that Tollemache had dropped. Simultaneously his friend's head rose above the maelstrom; for the cork jacket bore Larry bravely. He was clasping the woman's apparently lifeless form with one hand, and battling against the sea with the other when the long oar was thrust within reach, and he too was drawn to the side.

Meanwhile Ingersol, exercising splendid self control, had not deserted his post. After the heavy backwash caused by the tidal wave, a sea had curled in from the open to fill the inlet again, and the Hirondelle was carried so near the reef that the stout oar bent under the strain of fending her off, and might conceivably have snapped had not some assistance been given by the ropes attached to the Stella. Another and more normal backwash came in the nick of time, and the boat retreated to her earlier position. Now, if the Fates were aught but merciless, there might be a breathing space.

Peridot's grey-green eyes sparkled as they met Tollemache's brown eyes, gazing up steadily from the swirl of waters.

"You all right?" he said, seizing the woman's arms.

"Why not?" said Tollemache. "Lift her aboard. Don't bother about me."

Ere Peridot had laid the dead or unconscious woman by the side of the man who had already given his life for her sake, Tollemache was on deck again, and lending a hand to the first sailor to cross by the ropes. The survivors followed rapidly, and the last to leave the Stella was her captain.

Ten men were rescued,—five sailors, including the master, two stokers, an engineer, a steward, and a passenger. The two last were in the saloon when the vessel struck, and had crawled on deck as best they could, the passenger having sustained a broken arm, and the steward a sprained ankle.

It was obvious, from the measures taken to safeguard the injured pair, that they were in urgent need of attention; but Peridot knew that the lives of all still trembled in the balance. So he bawled to Tollemache: "Get the lady below, and as many of the others as you can pack in. During the next few minutes I want none but sailors on deck. Gars! Be quick about it too! No, don't trouble about that poor fellow. He's gone!".

Already he had cast off the ropes that formed the precarious bridge. Tollemache told the shipwrecked crew what the Breton had said, and they obeyed with the readiness of men who were aware of the paramount necessity of prompt action.

The Stella's captain had already summed up the new problem facing the Hirondelle, and issued his orders with decision. He and a sturdy deckhand helped Tollemache and Ingersoll with the sweeps, which were now to be used as oars, while the others carried the woman to the cabin, and helped their disabled shipmates to make the descent.

Yvonne, though unwilling to leave the deck until the next ordeal was ended, felt that she ought to sacrifice her own wishes to the need of a sister in distress; but Peridot settled the matter by bidding her take the tiller.

"We can't get back to the inside passage on this wind. If we tried it, Les Verres would catch us," he said. "We'll forge out a bit with the sweeps. When clear of the yacht we'll be just clear of the reef too. When you see me begin to haul at the sail put the helm hard over for the seaward tack. We're going outside. You understand?"

"Perfectly," she said.

She ran between the four men labouring at the oars, well pleased to have a task that would absorb her mind to the exclusion of all else, and profoundly relieved because it took her away from the vicinity of the dead body. Even as the Stella's company were climbing on board she could not avoid an occasional glance at the huge and inert form at her feet. It was a dreadful thing to see the soul battered out of such a magnificent frame in such a way. Never before had she set eyes on a man of similar proportions. He was inches over six feet in height, and stout withal, so that he completely dwarfed the tall and sinewy frame of Laurence Tollemache, who hitherto had loomed as a giant among undersized Frenchmen. Oilskins and heavy sea boots added to the dead man's apparent bulk. His face, which were a singularly placid expression was well modeled. In youth he must have been extremely good looking; in middle age—apparently he was over fifty—he still retained clear-cut features, and strands of a plentiful crop of iron-gray hair dropped over a broad and high forehead.

The woman whom he had declined to intrust to the care of any but himself was probably his wife. Was she dead too? Yvnne wondered. It was almost equally certain that the yacht was theirs; though perhaps they might have hired it for a winter cruise in the Mediterranean by way of the Spanish coast.

These thoughts flitted through the girl's brain as she followed the last phase of the rescue. Now that her hand was on the tiller, and the open sea began to show beyond the yacht's bowsprit, her mind was occupied by the one remaining hazard to the execution of all else. She had every confidence in Peridot's seamanship, having been out with him many a time in weather that, if not quite so threatening as this, offered sufficient test of skill and nerve. But she knew well that once the full force of the tide was felt the oars would be useless, chiefly owing to their unwieldy length, and the doubt remained whether the Hirondelle would gain enough way to win out close hauled into deep water.

Still her heart leaped with high courage as her eyes took in the bold and striking picture presented by the deck of the fishing boat during that brief transit through broken seas. In the immediate foreground a small hatchway framed the weather-tanned faces of two men lodged in the companionway so as to avoid overcrowding the cabin. Behind were her father and the yacht's captain at one oar, and Tollemache and a sailor at the other, pulling with the short, jerky, but powerful stroke alone possible in the conditions. Ingersoll's sallow, well-marked, intellectual features were in sharp contrast with the fiery red skin, heavy cheeks and chin, bullet head, and short neck of the man by his side. For an instant the eyes of father and daughter met. He smiled encouragement, and the odd notion occurred to Yvonne that strangest of all the occurrences in an hour packed with incident was the fact that the thin hands that could achieve such marvels by the delicate manipulation of a camel's hair brush should be able to toil manfully at a cumbrous oar.

Then she looked at Larry, and he grinned most cheerfully.

Skipper and sailor wore the stolid expression of men who didn't know, and didn't care, what happened next. If anything, their watchful glances betrayed a total lack of belief in the wisdom of intrusting the helm to this slip of a girl.

Amidships, and slightly forward, Peridot was standing, both hands laced in the rope that should hoist the sail. The small jib had not been lowered. It was now flapping in the wind with reports like irregular pistol shots; but Yvonne knew it would fill and draw instantly when the tiller brought the boat's head around.

And beyond Peridot was the body of the man who had been snatched from life with such awful suddenness. The broad back and slightly outstretched legs kept it motionless no matter how the deck tilted; but the front skirts of the oilskin coat crackled noisily in the gale, and a lock of hair, though soaked and thick with salt, fleet itself from the clammy forehead, and moved fitfully in every gust.

The artist instinct in the girl's heart dominated every other emotion at that moment. She felt that she could transfer this somber scene to canvas if she was spared. And what a study of action it would make! What staring lights and shadows! What types of character! The four men in strenuous effort, the anxious faces peering from the semiobscurity of the hatch, Peridot's sturdy figure braced for prompt and fierce endeavour, the still form with sightless eye peering up at the sky, and all contained within the narrow compass of the deck, with the boat's prow now cutting the horizon, now threatening to take one last horrible dive into a wave overhanging it like a moving hillock! Beyond were a slate-blue sea flecked with white and scurrying clouds tipped with russet and gold by the last beams of a wintry sun.

"In the autumn of 1911, I suffered with a continual pain in the back. As a druggist, I tried various remedies without any apparent results. TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or exposure to eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by stimulating them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels, by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

KEEP VINEGAR HANDY.

Vinegar will remove stains of any kind from the hands.

Vinegar and salt (one teaspoon of salt to half cup vinegar) will clean brass or any metal.

Vinegar and salt will remove rust and stains from clothes.

One cup of vinegar in a ham, fowl or a piece of pot roast makes these meats more tender and gives them a good flavour.

One cupful of molasses, one tablespoon butter and one tablespoon of vinegar will cure hoarseness of the throat and a bronchial cold. Heat the vinegar, molasses and butter and then take a tablespoonful every hour.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to flush Kidneys neutralize irritating acids

Kidney and bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter the acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation, and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders, caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

Had Palpitation OF THE HEART ALSO WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

When the heart begins to palpitate it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow; then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells, and if you should happen to wake up in the night with your heart palpitating, and that "all gone" sinking sensation, you feel as if you were surely going to die.

When you feel this way, you may be sure that both your heart and nerves are out of order, and what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will build up and strengthen both the heart and nerve system.

For this purpose nothing can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble, ever since childhood, and finds great relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

PAINTING THE MEETING HOUSE.

By M. QUAD.

The village of Hicksville contained 300 inhabitants, and yet there was only one place to worship. In the earlier days the Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians had clubbed together, and as time went on the three denominations had agreed so well that no move had been made for the erection of another building.

From time immemorial it has been the privilege of the farmer's dog to accompany his master to church and take up his station on the front steps until time to go home again. The question as to whether this had made better dogs of them is not to be debated here. It is sufficient to say that on this particular Sabbath day there were seven dogs occupying seven different wagons and that when a lightning rod man's dog came along he was looked upon as an intruder and promptly attacked. Seven dogs pitching into one must soon confuse things. In this case after a moment it became a battle royal, and the racket stopped the sermon and was heard to the limits of the village. The worshipers came out of the church to see and to interfere and to take sides, and the affair broke up the services for the morning and left a good deal of acrimony floating around. Most of the blame was laid on the man of lightning rods, who was stopping in the town over Sunday. He repudiated it and had hot words and on Monday was arrested for using profane language and fined $7. Up to the moment he was fined he was defiant. Then he changed to humility, paid his fine and apologized all around.

There was no one in the town of Hicksville who really knew a lightning rod man's other side or who even suspected that he had a second side. If there had been, a note of warning would have been sounded when this man changed to humility. They accepted his attitude and his expressions, and some of them even shook hands with him and forgave him for having such a dog. He went away and was absent for three days and then returned to say that he felt like doing something for the church people to show that no hard feelings rankled in his soul. There was the old meeting house. It needed painting badly. Under its shadow his dog had raised a row and created temporary hard feelings and he would beg the privilege of paying for two fresh coats. The proposition fell like a thunderclap on the town. It beat the coming of a circus all hollow. All the church folks had to do, said the donor, was to get together and decide on the color and he would furnish the paints and the painters—simple as A B C.

A meeting of the church people was called for a certain night, and they were there to the last man and woman. All knew the issue, and all had come prepared. The question to be settled was one of color, and it was a dead easy one. The minister presided, as was eminently proper, and he arose to say that of course there could be but one color for a frame meeting house. That was white, to represent purity. The lightning rod man could be notified to have his painter on hand next day. Was there anything further before the meeting?

To the good man's surprise, there was. Deacon Tompkins arose to say that while art was in its infancy in this country a plain white meeting house did very well, but art had advanced. Meeting houses should also advance. Speaking for the Methodist contingent, his choice was chrome yellow for the body of the building, with dark brown for the steeple and the doors and window casings. He would move that those colors be adopted.

Deacon Williams arose to hope that no one would second the motion. Speaking for the Baptists, he would say that a pea green color for the body, with trimmings of darker green, would be more in harmony with the surrounding landscape and prevent strangers from taking the cider mill for the meeting house. He didn't advance pea green as symbolic of the Baptist faith alone, but of all faiths. It even took in the Adventists. He would move pea green as an amendment for chrome yellow. Deacon Jones said that he represented the Presbyterians in the congregation and that the Presbyterians had decided on lead color for the body of the building and dark blue for doors, casings and steeple. He would move his colors as an amendment to the last amendment and he hoped that no further time would be wasted over the matter.

But his hopes were disappointed. The lightning rod man was appealed to, but he replied that it was a question to be left entirely to the congregation.

It was left to them. Meeting after meeting was held, but no one gave way—the more meetings the more acrimony, the more acrimony the less neighborly feeling. When it had reached that stage, which it did in about four months, that not a Methodist would lend a Baptist his wheelbarrow and not a Baptist would borrow dutiress of a Presbyterian the good minister sent in his resignation, the meeting house was closed, and only last summer it was unroofed by a cyclone and left a wreck. The lightning rod man was about the only man that had nothing to say. He could afford to be silent.

FIVE VIRTUES.

To be able under all circumstances to practice five things constitutes perfect virtue. These are gravity, generosity of soul, sincerity, earnestness and kindness.—Confucius.

MY TERRIBLE HACKING AND SPLITTING COUGH WAS ENTIRELY CURED BY DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Clara Jackson, Huntsville, Ont., writes us under date of January 12th, 1915. "I take great pleasure in writing you concerning Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Last winter I contracted a very bad cough which troubled me all through the summer. This winter I started to take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after taking three bottles I can truthfully say that I fell like another woman.

"The terrible hacking and splitting cough, and the dry sensation in my throat is entirely cured. I would certainly recommend it to anyone troubled with bronchitis or lung trouble. I have not words too grateful to give you."

All obstinate coughs and colds yield quickly to the action of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, combining as it does all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, and the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other excellent herbs, roots and barks.

"Dr. Wood's" has been on the market for the past twenty-five years, and we claim that it is the best cure for a cough or cold that you can possibly procure. The thousands of testimonials we have received prove that our claim is right.

All we ask you is to see that you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it, and don't accept some no-account substitute.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

IF YOUR THROAT IS HUSKY CATARRH MAY BE STARTING

A weak or irritated throat is the first step towards catarrh. Everything depends on your remedy. A cough mixture slips quickly over the weak spots, drops into the stomach, and does little but harm. It's altogether different with Catarrhozone—it cures because it gets right at the trouble. You inhale Catarrhozone, breathe in the vapor of healing balsams that strengthen and restore the weak throat tissues. You'll never have colds or coughs. Throat trouble and catarrh will disappear with the use of Catarrhozone. Get the large dollar outfit, which includes the inhaler; it lasts two months, and is guaranteed to cure. Smaller sizes 25c and 50c, sold everywhere.

Several Cases of Measles Reported in the Village—Public Library Concert on Friday Evening

HASTINGS, Feb. 29—A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Hess on Wednesday evening, when their daughter, Miss Myrtle, entertained a number of her young friends. Music and games were indulged in and a very dainty luncheon served. All present report a pleasant time.

Several cases of measles are reported and the medical officer of health is doing his best to stay the progress of the disease.

Mrs. Harry Buck and little child have been laid up with an attack, but we are pleased to hear that they are both improving.

The plan for the public library concert on Friday evening of this week is open at Coughlan's store. The programme promises to be one of unusual interest.

We are informed that the funeral of the late Willis Faux, on Tuesday last, was one of the largest in the vicinity for some time.

The stork visited last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Buck and left a baby girl to gladden their home.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church met on Thursday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. Wm. Tate when important business was discussed and disposed of. After the business session the hostess served dainty luncheon, and a short time was spent socially.

A Westwood wedding of interest was solemnized on Thursday, Feb 17th, at the home of Mrs. J. Comstock, when her daughter, Agnes, became the bride of Mr. Gordon Fox, of Otonabee. Mr. and Mrs. Fox have a host of friends who join in wishing them a long life of connubial bliss.

The recruiting meeting in the town hall on Sunday night was not very well attended, owing, doubtless, to the extreme weather conditions.

Lieut. Masson has recovered from an attack of la grippe, and was gone for a short visit to his home.

DOCTOR SAID "INCURABLE" BUT ZAM-BUK CURED ECZEMA

The little son of Mrs. W. Adams of 409 La Salle Road, Verdun, Montreal, suffered for five years with the worst form of eczema. Mrs. Adams tried everything—took the child to various hospitals, where he received the best possible medical treatment, but of no avail. The doctors said the case was incurable! Then she heard of Zam-Buk and used it, with the result that to-day the child is completely cured of the terrible disease.

Mrs. Adams writes: "The eruption started on the child's neck, and spread rapidly until his body was entirely covered. I first took him to a hospital for the treatment of the skin, but instead of getting better the eruption got worse. I then took him to another hospital, with the same result. I took him to a third hospital, where he remained for some time, and, although at first he seemed to improve, the improvement was only temporary, and finally the doctors pronounced the disease incurable.

Five years had now elapsed since the eruption had first appeared, and I feared the doctors were right! Some one advised me to try Zam-Buk, and it was so highly spoken of that I determined to do so. A few weeks after I commenced using Zam-Buk I noticed a decided improvement. This was so encouraging that I continued the treatment. Gradually my boy got better and better, until, after four months of Zam-Buk treatment, he was entirely cured and his skin was absolutely clear. I cannot tell you how grateful I am for what Zam-Buk has done, and I shall never be without it."

Why Zam-Buk is Best

First, because Zam-Buk has marvelous power of penetration and is capable of reaching the root of skin diseases, whereas ordinary ointments either do not penetrate the skin at all or only the surface, with the result that the disease, untouched at the root, breaks out again.

Diseased tissue contains millions of germs. Germs cannot live where Zam-Buk is applied, and when the germs are destroyed the healing power of Zam-Buk begins to take effect. Zam-Buk is also pure, being composed entirely of herbal essences.

Zam-Buk should be used for eczema, ulcers, abscesses, rashes, blood-poisoning, ringworm, piles, boils, pimples, burns, cuts, cold sores, chapped hands, chilblains, etc. Best for baby's eruptions. 50c. box. 3 for $1.25. All druggists, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

Peterboro' is Not in the Potato Belt---Bottom Knocked Out of Grain Prices---Seed Grain Situation--"To Hold or Not to Hold"---Small Change--Comparison in Prices

MARKET FEATURES.

Peas decrease over half a dollar.
Flour declines 50 cents a hundred.

Live hens, each	$1.00

Butter took another sensational advance on Saturday, reaching 38 cts. a pound. Some vendors quoted 37c., but the majority stuck to the higher level. In Toronto it brings 29c.

Eggs remained firm last Saturday at 30 cents a dozen, though a few asked 29 and 28c., which showed that "hen fruit" is on the decline. Toronto price on new-lands is 26cts. per doz.

Grains, Hay.

Spring Wheat, bushel	88 to 90c
Wheat, bush.	86c
Oats	38c
Barley	58c

Flour, cwt.	$3.25
Baled hay, ton	$20.00 to $22.00
Loose hay	19.00 to 20.00

The bottom has been knocked out of grain prices locally. Wheat, oats and peas, as well as flour, have taken a sensational drop, following Winnipeg prices, which fell as a result of the tremendous slump on the Chicago grain exchange.

Cereal wheat at Toronto is $1.14 to $1.15 a bushel.

Toronto prices on coarse grains are: Oats, 49 to 50 cents; barley, 66 to 68 cents; rye, 86 cents; buckwheat 78 cents; and peas, $1.50 to $1.75 a bushel.

Flour, on the outside market, has dropped 20 cents. This is due largely to freight congestion; if this situation should clear, and vessels be found to carry the huge exports awaiting transportation, then, and not till then, may we look for higher levels.

To Hold or Not to Hold.

"To hold or not to hold." That is the question which Mr. Farmer is trying to settle regarding his grain.

Compared with last year:

The outlook for fall wheat is not first-class.

The U.S. acreage is not so great.

There will be much less wheat grown in Europe, and Western Canada's crop will not likely be so great as last year.

All of which may mean "Sit tight," unless the war ends—Ah! There's the rub.

Seed Grain.

Red clover, cwt.	$27.00
Alsike, cwt.	$25.00
Alfalfa, cwt.	$27.00

The New York sugar market is higher now than at any time since the declaration of war — save once, and this in face of a bumper crop of sugar cane in Cuba. But the scarcity of transporation facilities, coupled with the fact that the supply of raws was allowed to get low has boosted the prices.

Contrary to expectations the Government did not put a tax on tea, therefore that most common of all table necessities will not likely advance much in price.

The action of the British Government in placing an embargo on the exports of its Eastern dependencies will have the effect of enhancing the price of spices.

A CHILD HATES OIL, CALOMEL, PILLS FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Sick, Feverish, Constipated

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

UPHELD FOR SLAYING MAN

"Mrs. Harrison's Deed Justifiable" Say Fort Worth Residents

FORT WORTH, Tex., March 2.—"Justifiable" is the word with which the residents of the city characterize the slaying of W. L. Warren by fifteen-year-old Katherine Vance on Dec. 22 last—two days before she became the bride of Charles Harrison, nephew of United States Senator Culberson's wife.

So decided and general is this opinion that the county officials hesitated to ask the Grand Jury for an indictment, and only upon insistence by the wealthy Harrison family did they agree to bring the case to trial. Mrs. Harrison, her husband and relatives demand a speedy trial that the killing of Warren may be approved officially by a jury's verdict.

The crime of which Warren is accused by Mrs. Harrison is punishable by death in this state, and indeed, she is commended by many for taking the law in her own hands. She was not of age when Warren lured her into his hotel, and Texas law does not permit the trial of minors for murders.

FIGHT FOR MAN'S BODY.

Death Exposed Double Life Led by Detroit Detective.

DETROIT, March 2.—Deputy Sheriffs armed with an injunction stopped the funeral of Detective Thomas Green to-day. They overtook the hearse and forced the undertaker to place the body in a vault. Two women are fighting for its possession.

To-night Mrs. Bridget Green, the "legal widow" got the body through a writ of replevin. Green had lived with a "love widow" for nineteen years. Death exposed his double life.

An attachment for hand pumps has been invented in which springs are used to equalize the load and help lift the weight of water.

These Pictures were in Montreal under the Auspices of the MONTREAL DAILY STAR and the following is an expression of opinion from the President of the Board of Censors for the Province of Quebec.

For the First Time in its History The Censor Board has Expressed Itself:

Address all communications to the President of the Board of Censors, 65 St. Gabriel Street, Montreal.

Dr. L. J. LEMIEUX, President
M. J. WALSH
C. M. SINN

BOARD OF CENSORS FOR MOVING PICTURES
for the Province of Quebec

MONTREAL, 7th December 1915.

Managing Editor,
Montreal Daily Star, Montreal.

Dear Sir,—

I am pleased to inform you that after a close inspection of the series of War Pictures which you intend to give to the public, the Board of Censors of Moving Pictures for this Province has come to the conclusion that no better object lesson of the gigantic conflict now raging in Flanders and in the Vosges could be had.

There is a sense of reality in the battlefie ld, in the trenches, which is simply marvellous. The scene of the artillery duel, during the great Champagne drive, is unique. One can almost hear the famous "75" as it thunders. And it really looks as if the 21,000 Boches, gathered in the concentration camp, after the drive, were glad of being made prisoners.

The various personages, His Majesty King George, President Poincare, Lord Kitchener, General Joffre, the Prince of Wales, M. Millerand, Sir John French, cannot be seen to better advantage

The people of this coutnry will realize, as they see Great Britain and France thus fraternizing on the battlefields, how sincere, how deep is the Entente Cordiale.

The perfect organization of the various army corps, which are seen as they march along, preceded by scouts on land and in the air, gives the vivid impression that the Allies will soon rid the world of the Berlin military caste

Believe me,
Dear Sir,
Yours sincerely,

L. J. Lemieux

Sheriff and President of the Board of Censors of Moving Pictures for the Province of Quebec.

MRS. PANKHURST'S MEETINGS WILL BE A DRAWING CARD

Famous Suffragette Leader Will Address Mass Meetings on Saturday and Sunday in Aid of the 93rd Battalion

A NOTABLE EVENT

Peterborough is to have an opportunity of hearing one of the most famous in the world on Saturday and Sunday nights, when Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the celebrated militant suffragette, will address mass meetings in the Armouries in the interests of the 93rd Battalion. Whatever some people may think of the methods adopted by Mrs. Pankhurst and her followers to further the interests of their cause, there is no doubt that from the very outbreak of the war Mrs. Pankhurst has been a power for good in the British Empire along patriotic lines. She is a forcible, magnetic speaker, and her messages to the people of Peterborough will be well worth hearing. The meeting on Saturday night will commence at 8 o'clock and on Sunday at 8.30 p.m. At the Saturday meeting a free-will offering will be taken up, the proceeds to be used in the carrying on of recruiting work in Peterborough. The band of the 93d Battalion will be on hand at both services and there will be other special features.

Lord Chief Justice Attacked By Woman

Baron Reading Refuses Eccentric's Request—She Shrieks Accusations.

LONDON, March 2.—An unprecedented scene was enacted in the dignified High Court yesterday, owing to an outburst by Miss Jane Cormack, an eccentric English woman.

Miss Cormack appeared before Baron Reading, Lord Chief Justice, and asked court assistance in launching proceedings against the Crown and Government.

Baron Reading denied the request, and was immediately attacked by Miss Cormack who shrieked accusations at the Chief Justice.

"You all act in the capacity of brigands," she shouted as she was seized by court officers, who dragged her from the court room, still shrieking and hitting at the Court.

A GOOD CHANCE FOR BAKERS TO GO OVERSEAS AT ONCE

Lieut. Hills Asked to Recruit Bakers for the Canadian Army Service Corps---Particulars May Be Secured at the Armouries--To-day's Orders and General Military News

Any local bakers who are physically fit and who wish to do their bit for the Empire overseas, have their opportunity now. Lieut. Hills of the Canadian Army Service Corps, who is the supply officer in connection with the 93rd Battalion, C.E.F., has received orders to recruit bakers for the Army Service Corps. Applicants must pass the medical examination. Particulars may be secured from Lieut. Hills at the armouries.

Pte. Sherman Young, formerly of the second battalion, first Canadian contingent, and taken prisoner and wounded at St. Julien, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Rogers, 147 Hunter street east. Pte. Young, on account of a permanent injury to his hand, was exchanged and reached Canada early in December. He was a prisoner with Pte. Heber Rogers at Giessen, Germany.

In order to set at rest one of the baseless rumours that some people delight to circulate, the following letter received by Mrs. A. J. Losey, 182 Water street, wife of Pte. Losey of the 93rd and mother of Pte. Harold Losey, of the 39th, is published.

39th Battalion, C.E.F.,
Feb. 14th, 1916.

My Dear Mrs. Losey,—I hear from your son Harold that you have heard a rumour that when I went to Peterborough on business last June for the purpose of escorting a deserter back to Belleville and used Harold, as I had instructions to do, by handcuffing him to the prisoner, it was stated by some people of Peterborough (who possibly know more of somebody else's business than they did of their own) that he was being taken back as a deserter.

Now I wish to state that this is false and very untrue. It is customary for the safe return of a prisoner to handcuff him to one who can be thoroughly relied upon, and Harold was the man I picked out, and I will also state that I have found him deserving of that reliance ever since, and only wish that we had all the men like him we wanted.

I might say that he has a very great sense of honour which we may not be able to find in some of the "stay at home critics."

Hoping this will prove to you that Harold was not guilty of such an offence.

The 93rd Machine Gun Section hockey team journeyed to Keene on Tuesday night and were handed a jolt by the Otonabee boys. The censor forbids the publishing of the score, but it is rumoured that the Sutcliffe Squad were done to a crisp.

Scotch broth will be a familiar item on the 93rd bill-of-fare now. A well-known gentleman of the Land o' Cakes has been transferred from No 1 Platoon to the kitchen staff.

Yesterday a formal challenge appeared on the bulletin board of the 93rd Battalion. It was from Captain Widdifield, O.C. A Company, challenging B Company to a game of hockey, six men aside, to be played at Brock Street Rink to-morrow (Friday) evening, at 5 o'clock. The challenge has been counter-signed "Accepted," by Capt. Hall of B Company. This will be a rattling good game as each Company has a number of members of the 93rd O.H.A team.

It is rumored that Company Sergt Major Sam. Calladine will play goal for B Company against A Company in the hockey game to-morrow night Sergt.-Major Calladine is a soccer goalie of note and figures that a six-foot crease is easier to take care of than the eighteen foot goal used in football.

The following is sent by Signaller Cuthbert Rowan of the Canadian Field Artillery, from "Somewhere in Flanders":

TO ATTEMPT ANOTHER SMASH AT FORTRESS

GUNNER HAROLD DEVEY
Son of Mr. R. J. Devey who left with the last 33rd Battery Draft.

Germans Are Reported to Be Bringing Up Hundreds of Their Most Powerful Howitzers For Another Attack.

BATTLE NOW HALTED.

LONDON, MARCH 2.—With their advanced lines around Verdun in a great semi-circle, the Germans last night are reported bringing up hundreds of their most powerful howitzers to attempt another smash at the great fortress. During the entire day no action by foot-soldiers took place, according to the French midnight statement. The artillery duel still rages along the entire front.

The quiet of the day, however, is taken in both London and Paris merely to herald a still greater battle. While the Germans are believed to be rushing up their newest and heaviest Krupps, together with huge stores of munitions, the French are strengthening their defences against the renewed drive. They await the onslaught with supreme confidence.

Prepare Two Blows.

It is believed that the Germans contemplate two tremendous blows—one from the north against Pepper Heights (Cote du Poivre), and one from the east against Forts Tavanne and Vaux. The French are concentrating great reserves, just brought back to the battlefront, at the threatened points. Their system of defences has been selected until the ring around Verdun is declared well nigh impregnable. To the east of the fortress the French have put the flood waters of the Meuse to their defence, inundating a wide stretch of territory around Manhuelles, one of the villages captured by the Germans on Monday.

The Meuse is also a sewer for the battlefield. Hundreds of bodies are being carried by its swift current to the North Sea.

The city of Fresnes, thirteen miles southeast of Verdun, the scene of much bitter fighting during the last few days, is reported to be in the hands of the Germans. The correspondent of the Lokal Anzeiger, telegraphing from the Crown Prince's headquarters, states:

"French have been compelled to completely evacuate the city."

British Extend Line.

The latest British official communication reports the British fighting to the north of the Somme which would show that they have stretched their front between thirty and forty miles down to the region of Amiens.

Serious differences among the German General Staff are reported from Mainz as a result of the Verdun campaign. The Crown Prince has been summoned to headquarters, and is not to return to the fighting front. A staff officer estimates the losses of the three days at 75,000 to 100,000.

The last few days have witnessed the removal of the centre of pressure eastward over the edge of the Meuse heights to the plain beneath. The highroad and narrow-gauge railway run southward at the foot of the plateau, and well beyond them two to three miles from hills lie the French trenches between the station of Eix-Abaucourt, and the Verdun-Metz railway and Fresnes. The German advanced positions are now under fire from the French forts and field batteries on the hills, where every movement is visible.

LOCAL MAN WAS FINED FIFTY DOLLARS

William Graystock Was Convicted of Having Supplied a Couple of Treaty Indians With Red-eye

INDIANS ALSO FINED

In this morning's police court, two redskins from the Chemong reserve pleaded guilty to a charge of being under the influence of liquor contrary to the Indian Act. They answered to the names of George Taylor and Alexander Knot. The former was fined five dollars and the latter double that amount. The lighter fine was imposed on Taylor on the grounds that he gave a more lucid and consistent account of what actually took place and did not attempt to conceal the facts. William Graystock was convicted of having supplied the two Indians and was fined fifty dollars, with the option of two months in the county gaol.

"I think there is no doubt about the two men being treaty Indians," said Magistrate Dumble after he had given the two men the once over. They admitted having negotiated for the purchase of a bottle of "skidawaboo," which is an Indian term for red-eye. Both men also stated that Graystock had supplied them with liquor on previous occasions.

French War Pictures The Finest Ever Shown—At The Grand To-night

A traveller in the city to-day in conversation with a local merchant stated that he had seen the French war pictures twice, and without a doubt they were the finest of their kind that have ever been shown. He hoped to see them again to-night at the Grand if a business engagement did not prevent him from doing so.

COMPENSATION.

The Boche Butcher of Berlin wasted twice as many lives as the population of Peterborough numbers in an insane attempt to capture Verdun by assault. He failed; was defeated. But there is compensation in another great victory achieved in England. One of his air raiders dropped a bomb on the Kentish Coast that killed one child nine months old. This great triumph should take the sting out of the Verdun defeat.

THE LONG BOW.

Sir Sam Hughes is the father of the dry canteen, but is very intemperate—in his talk. He told a representative of the New York Times that Canada will do its full share in the war and that if necessary she can supply 1,750,000 men. That may be true on paper; but Sir Geo. Foster told the House yesterday that there was, according to the census, 1,534,488 males of military age in Canada. But it is manifestly unwise for a man in a responsible position to draw the long bow as Sir Sam is in the habit of doing. There's a big difference between a million and three quarters of men on the census records and the number we can put under arms. Canada will do her full share in the war, but we'd rather that Sir Sam did not commit us to a contract we may find it difficult to carry out.

A WAR OF DEMOCRACY.

This is a war of democracy on autocracy. It is waged in the interests of real democracy and is as much opposed to the demagoguery of Socialism as it is to the tyranny of the Kaiser brand. At a Socialist meeting in Vancouver, a speaker said:

"Take this war; the working classes are sent out to fight; the aristocracy are too wise to go."

There is a substantial reply to this foolish talk. Debrett's Peerage, a competent authority on such a subject, estimates that the number of British peers and sons of peers at this moment in active service—under fire—exceeds one thousand, and the same authority some time ago published a list of 2,000 of the British "nobility," "the aristocracy," who have been killed in action or died of their wounds. It is a fact that in this war there is a splendid fusion of all classes. "The working classes" and "the aristocrats" are fighting shoulder to shoulder at home and in the trenches; the common danger to the common interest begets common action. In the battle lines, as in South Africa,

"Duke's son, cook's son,
Son of a belted earl,"

are alike "doing their bit."

"This war is a leveller, in the higher sense of the term. It has developed the true spirit of brotherhood and removed class distinctions as elements of merit. Promotion in the armies goes by merit, and merit alone decides. Family connection or social influence won't save an "aristocrat" officer from a wigging if he deserves it, nor will lack of them prevent the son of a costermonger, for instance, from getting a commission if he wins it and is capable. While from numerical superiority the common people of the empire are doing most to win this war the "classes" as a distinguishing term are also doing their full share. We are all in it, and all are determined to see the thing through. We are fighting for liberty and equality of right and opportunity, and in so doing if we are forgetting comparatively petty, artificial divisions of class and standing shoulder to shoulder upon the same level of common ambition, common endeavour, and common sacrifice.

TO CLEAR THEIR CHARACTERS

Messrs. Pierce and Simpson, Liberal members of the Saskatchewan Legislature, asked that criminal actions be instituted against them to give them a chance to clear their characters. The Attorney-General will start actions at once.

TEMPERANCE AND PROHIBITION.

There is some "method in sober" nonsense sometimes. There is a good deal of truth and sound sense contained in the nonsense rhyme quoted by Sir Sam Hughes to avoid committing himself to an expression of opinion on prohibition in Ontario. A press interviewer in Toronto asked Sir Sam his opinion of Ontario prohibition. He replied with this little nonsense rhyme:

"There is a little public house
That every man can close,
And that's the little public house
That's just beneath his nose."

This may have been employed as a diplomatic evasion; but the rhyme holds a good deal of reason. It is no disparagement of prohibition to say that the best, the only true temperance propaganda, has to do with the man. Get at the man, convince his reason, rouse his conscience, as to the wrong of his intemperate courses, get him to reform himself, to vindicate his manhood, to base his action in the matter of reform on principle and the work is thoroughly done. All true, individual, moral reform comes from within the man. Outward safeguards and the removal of temptation may be an aid, but these things are in themselves not reform. The argumentum ad hominem—the appeal to the man—has been productive of more real, true temperance reform than any or all of the diffused, general work in the exploitation of protective devices put together. In the first case the man is reformed, and with the man reformed, his bad habits cease. A thousand men in a community made total abstainers from drink under the influence of principle, represents a true triumph. If we could extend this form of appeal to manhood so as to make it general in the city, and should secure corresponding results, with what has been done under one organization, we should have revolutionary results. We should not need to banish the bar by legislation; we should starve the bar; for with total abstinence extended tenfold beyond its present local existence, there would be no patrons of the bar, and it would die of starvation. It wouldn't pay to heat the fires of Moloch if the supply of victims were cut off.

But the majority of temperance reformers trust to prophylactic treatment—to treatment of symptoms instead of striking at the root, the cause, of the disease. The existence of strong drink is not the true cause of intemperance, it's its intemperate use. The depraved appetite and moral failure of the man are the real cause. Get at the man and put him right in relation to strong drink and the man is saved.

But with things as they are, with the general impulse to, and practice of, surface treatment, for the evils of intemperance, prohibition is the next best thing and in fact the logical thing. We have for centuries legalised the liquor traffic, and the reasonable way to remove—or minify—the evil results it has developed, is to un-legalise it; deprive it of its legal right to existence.

If we do that, we shall, however, only have taken the first step in helping temperance reform. The success of prohibition will depend upon the continued and more energetic efforts of temperance reformers. Attention must still be concentrated upon saving the man. There will be just as much need, for a time at least, cause of total abstinence under prohibition as under license. The mistake of temperance reformers will be to regard prohibition as an end—it is only a means to an end—a help to the temperance reformer to make good his work upon the man.

A NEW SPIRIT AWAKE.

The day when purely material appeals can be made with success to an electorate—at any rate to a British Columbia electorate—is passing. A new spirit is abroad—a spirit that is not to be imprisoned in the cogs and cranks and spindles of a party "machine."—Vancouver World.

A DEMOCRATIC VICTORY.

It has been said that Sir Jas. Whitney would not have allowed matters to drift as they did in Peel. That is true. He would either have forbidden Mr. Fallis to be a candidate again, or, if he had made up his mind to support him, he would have backed him up with his heaviest artillery. The people of Peel would have been left in no doubt as to his attitude.

But aside from personal regrets for the passing of Sir James Whitney, it is better as it is. It is better that leadership should come from within than from without. It is better to follow reason and conscience than to submit to authority, and to the domination of a strong personality. Peel did this. The people did it. A large body of Conservatives in Peel, all honour to them, defied the authority of the party convention.

The party aspect of the Peel election is far less important than the victory for true democracy.—Toronto Star.

The Inevitable Arrival of Woman Suffrage

The debate on Dr. Pugsley's motion in the House of Commons may safely be taken as a presage of success by the workers for the political enfranchisement of women. One reason for thinking so is that the members of the Borden Ministry were obviously afraid to leave the question to a non-partisan vote. It would have been better for the Government, and the Conservative party to take that course, but as the matter now stands they must accept the consequences. These are not likely to be less unpleasant because of Mr. Rogers' uncalled-for disparagement of the honour of women voters in the West. This is an insult that will be long remembered and indignantly resented. The Premier was more tactful than Mr. Rogers, but his remarks were placatory rather than encouraging; calculated to prevent harm to the Government from the unruly tongue of its spokesman rather than promote the success of this particular measure of franchise reform.

The ostensible ground for the defeat of Dr. Pugsley's motion was that the franchise is not the same for all the Provinces, and that any Province which gives the Provincial franchise to women would have some unfair but unspecified advantage over a Province that deprives women of the right to vote. This contention is too absurd for serious argument. The Dominion Parliament, having accepted the Provincial voters' lists as the basis of the Dominion franchise, is not concerned about how those lists are made up as to classes of voters. The Provinces are represented in the House of Commons according to population, not according to the numbers of voters. If any Province chose to have an educational qualification, or to restrict the franchise to persons of more mature age than the present minimum, that is nothing, or should be nothing, to the Dominion Parliament. The expedient of [illegible] to women the right to vote in Dominion elections must be, decided on some other ground than [illegible] infancy and childish.

One [illegible] reason for [illegible] the franchise to women [illegible] monopolized living during [illegible] died for some time after it is over. The private expenditure that ought first to be dealt with, if there is to be sumptuary legislation at all, is the consumption of alcoholic liquors for beverage and social purposes. That consumption is injurious to those who indulge in it, productive of social demoralization, and enormously expensive. There can be no doubt about the truth of these statements and there is no other article of general consumption about which they may as truthfully be made. Women are generally opposed to the traffic because they are the worst sufferers from it, and those who are opposed to this enforced economy are naturally opposed to giving the franchise to women. That is, of course, all the stronger reason why they should get and use it. — The Globe.

Sub Trapped On Sea Bottom By Queer Ruse

Rops Message to Sub-Sea Men —Signal to Surrender is Made With Shoe

We were operating on the south coast of Ireland and had sunk a big red-funneled steamer. Yes, I think there was a white band and a black top (Hesperian?) Directly our Captain-lieutenant saw that his torpedo had got home he gave orders for the boat to make for the bay, where he usually lay hidden on the bottom when there was any reason to suppose that the destroyers were out looking for us.

I do not know the name of this bay, but at the mouth of it there is an extraordinary headland jutting out into the sea like a finger, with a town and a harbour on the other side of it. (Probably Courtmacsherry bay on the western side of the Old Head of Kinsale; but the description might possibly apply to a small bay on the eastern side of which is Waterford town and harbour.

We sat on the slit at the bottom of the bay all that night and well on to the next day, until the air smelt sour, like the sweat of a man suffering from acute rheumatism. It is a fearful feeling that comes over one when the air in a submarine gets like that. One's nerves get all on edge, one is oppressed with foreboding of disaster, and small worries are magnified into a thousandfold.

If you can appreciate that and bring yourself to imagine what a nervous, apprehensive lot we had become you will be able to realize the sensation in that submarine when everybody on board distinctly heard the rasping clank of iron on the outer skin.

At Kiel and at Wilhelmshafen they tell tales in sailors' beer halls, when submarine after submarine fails to return and nothing is heard of the fate of those on board, of the English trawling for submarines as the fishing boats in the German ocean trawl for flat-fish, but with a trawl net made of steel mesh, through which no submarine can hope to pass. Such tales had been heard by most of us on that submarine, and they had made great impression on those of us—and it was nearly everybody—whose first expedition a gainst the enemy it was.

I was standing under the hatch when this happened, and the torpedo mate was facing me, and in the act of giving me some orders. He stopped dead, looked at me and then turned as if he would go and report to the commander, who was in the engine room.

Just as he took the first step there came a new sound from above and the torpedo mate stopped with his legs stretched out as he made the step.

The sound was as if some one was tapping on the hatch with a hammer.

"Fetch the Herr Captain Lieutenant quickly," shouted the torpedo mate excitedly, and I started to obey the command, but another man anticipated me and I stayed.

The tapping continued—two single sharp taps, then a pause, then two more single taps and so on.

Yes, it did sound something like that—iddy, iddy, iddy, all the time.

The torpedo mate became very excited. He made a move as if he would mount the steps leading to the hatch, changed his mind and then bolted in the direction of the engine room.

That tapping still went on and it sounded so uncanny that I felt uneasy in my stomach.

Presently the torpedo mate came back, and the Captain-Lieutenant was with him. I heard them speaking in English—the torpedo mate had been on particular service in England for a long time and was said to have served in the English navy—but they stopped as they got near me and I did not distinguish what they said, although all you get I speak English very well.

The torpedo mate mounted the steps to the hatch, took off his shoe, and with the heel gave two single taps on the hatch cover, with an interval between them.

As soon as he did this the tapping on the outside stopped, but recommenced a moment afterward with a change in the sound:

"Yes, that is right," iddy, pause, umpty, iddy, iddy, umpty, pause, iddy, umpty, umpty, iddy, pause iddy, umpty, iddy, iddy, pause, umpty, umpty, umpty, pause, iddy, iddy, iddy, pause, iddy, iddy, pause, iddy iddy, iddy, umpty, pause, iddy.

It went on like that for a long time, and all the while the torpedo mate was writing in his book.

When the tapping ceased the torpedo-mate held out the book to me so that I could pass it to the commanding officer but he waved it away and told the torpedo-mate to "read it."

As near as I can remember the torpedo-mate read as follows, in English: "Explosive" charged fixed to your hull and connected by wire to destroyer above. Chain attached to your periscope, with other end round steam-winch. You cannot get away. Will you surrender or be blown up?"

"Read it again," said the Captain-Lieutenant, speaking like a dazed and inoreduious man.

The torpedo-mate read it again slowly and emphatically, as if to give each word time to sink into the commanding officer's mind. When he had finished he added a word of his own. That word was "Diver."

There was some excitement in the submarine in the minutes that followed. The captain-lieutenant took counsel with the other officers in whispers and at last told the torpedo mate to signal on the hatch that we would surrender. An intense feeling of satisfaction took possession of me and I could see that the torpedo-mate was relieved also. No doubt he, like myself, had been oppressed by the fear that the captain-lieutenant would attempt to escape and sacrifice all our lives.

The signal of surrender was made with the heel of the torpedo mate's shoe, and a reply was tapped out from above.

"Rise to the surface, and remember that if you sink the boat you will go down with it," the torpdeo read out.

The captain-lieutenant sadly gave the necessary orders, and presently we were on the surface, the hatch was opened and I followed the officers and the torpedo-mate on deck.

There, almost alongside us, was a big destroyer, with her guns trained on us, and there, sitting on our hull, with an arm cuddling our periscope, was the figure of a man in diving dress, dangling a bit of heavy chain in his hand.

But there was no sign of any explosive attached to the hull.

"Down below," said the captain lieutenant, making a move toward the hatch.

"Please stay where you are," said a polite voice from the destroyer, as the men lining the side levelled their rifles.

"Swindled!" said the Captain lieutenant, with a hopeless movement of his hands.

The destroyer edged alongside and we were ordered to come on board.

The captain is engaged for a moment," said a young officer waving his hand to where the diver was being extracted from his diving dress. "He will introduce himself presently."

The above article was sent by a writer who says: "I send you a story told to me the other day by a German naval prisoner of war. It is as strange and as unconvincing as anything that Jules Verne ever wrote but it was related with an air of simple sincerity and truth by a stolid German sailor, who seemed to be absolutely incapable of inventing it. Moreover, it was confirmed in its essential details, by two other prisoners taken from the same boat. I do not pretend to have the story here in the narrator's own words, but in its essentials this story is the same story as was told to me."

No man or woman of the humblest sort can really be strong, pure, and good without the world being the better for it, without somebody being helped and comforted by the very existence of this goodness.

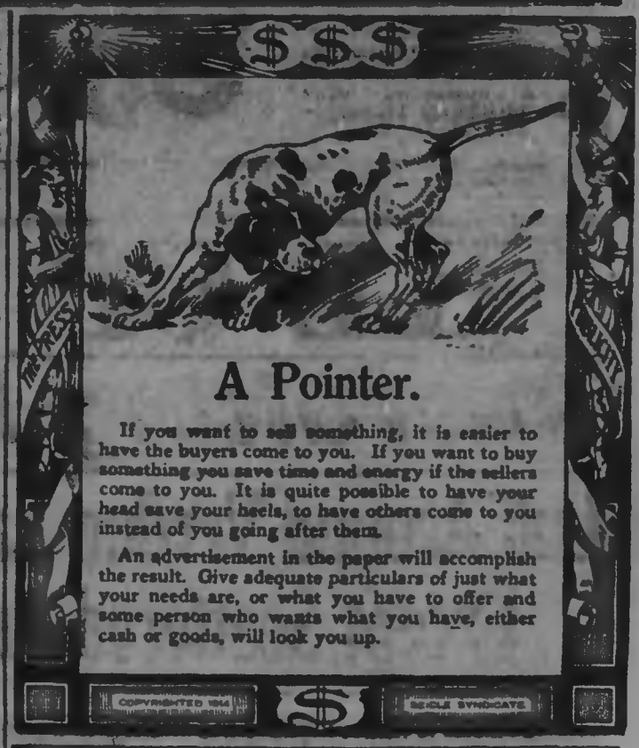
DIRECTORY OF OPPORTUNITIES.

It is a good plan to take the time to acquaint one's self with the opportunities that are presented through the Examiner Want Columns.

Keeping close track of the "Wants" means being in touch with chances that are well worth while.

Opportunities for employment, for renting, for selling, for buying, for exchanging—chances for investment—all are enumerated from time to time in the "Want" Columns of the EXAMINER.



A Pointer.

If you want to sell something, it is easier to have the buyers come to you. If you want to buy something you save time and energy if the sellers come to you. It is quite possible to have your head save your heels, to have others come to you instead of you going after them.

An advertisement in the paper will accomplish the result. Give adequate particulars of just what your needs are, or what you have to offer and some person who wants what you have, either cash or goods, will look you up.

Vice-Skips Bonspiel Got Away Last Night With Splendid Start

Fourteen Games Played and the Same Number Set Down For To-night---Consolation Games to Be Commenced To-night---Results of Last Night's Play.

The vice-skips are having their innings at the Charlotte Street Rink these nights in their bonspiel which got away to a good start last night. The regular skips are conspicuous in the position of "vices" to which they have been relegated and most of them must have felt out of tune as mere second fiddles. Of course it is something of a novelty in the season's play, but it is also a merited compensation to the men who have been "viceing" all winter. At that there was considerable good curling presented and it should grow more interesting as the finals approach. Twenty-eight rinks responded to the first draw and a like number replaced them in the second. And during the evening there were only eighteen substitutions due to temporary illness and the absence of other men out of the city. At the commencement of the first games there wasn't a sign of life in the gallery except the eight-day clock, the calendar and the gum slot machine. Every available man was pressed into action, even Angus McIntosh taking a broom in Bruce Sloan's rink. The games went ten ends each, and both draws were completed in good time.

The First Draw.

The results of the first draw were:

Among those who were unable to be present last night were W. G. Ferguson and C. Langley, both of whom were indisposed, Dickson Hall is in New York on business. W. H. Denham was out of the city also on business, D. Eason ditto, W. G. Read indisposed and so on.

M. C. Tooley and Andy Webb won their own games, but lost as substitute skips, the former for Dickson Hall, and the latter for Dave Eason.

Lance-Corporal Jack Moore received word too late to get leave from his duties with the Nassau guard last night, but will likely be around to-night.

In Gus Hay's absence, W. Taylor skipped the rink, with F. M. Dela Fosse vice, W. Adamson second, and Bob. Sturgeon lead. Some ring that, but Ross Dobbin with George Giroux viceing put them away.

Private T. S. Wood, formerly of Bobcaygeon, played on W. G. Read's ring last night, providing a prominent khaki among the "civvies."

MIDLAND'S SIX-GOAL LEAD ON BELLEVILLE

MIDLAND, March 2.—The first of the home-and-home games between Belleville and Midland in the semi-finals of the O.H.A. intermediate series was played here last night and resulted in a victory for the locals by 10 to 4. The game was a fast exhibition from start to finish, with Midland being superior in combination work, which resulted in many of their goals. Belleville are a much heavier team than the home seven and during the first period used their weight to advantage.

Both teams started the game with a burst of speed, but the locals checked the visitors to a standstill and held them to one goal, while they themselves tallied four. In the second session the play was more even each team adding two goals to their credit. During this period the Belleville players tried to mix things up out the referee soon put a stop to this by penalizing the offenders.

Midland had the visitors bewildered in the final period and poured shot after shot on the Belleville goal but were only successful in scoring four, an it was not until one second before the gong sounded for full time that Belleville added their only tally of this period, the final score being 10 to 4 for Midland. McDonald in goal for Midland, put up a great game and saved several sure looking goals. The line-up:

Belleville—Goal, Conley; defence, Whitty and Simmons; rover, Finkle; centre, Whalen; wings, Mitchell and Symons.

Midland — Goal, W. McDonald; defence, Beatty and Simpson; rover A. Simple; centre, McGill; wings, E. McDonald and D. Simple.

A and B Company to Clash in Hard Game

There will be a battle royal at Brock street rink between 7 and 8 o'clock tomorrow evening when A and B companies of the 93rd will clash in a hockey struggle. The game will be played under O.H.A. playing rules but the N.H.A. six man aside will be introduced for the first time. The men of both companies will be on hand to cheer for their favourites and there is all kinds of money going up on the result. Lieut Gillham, the signalling officer of the battalion, will referee. He has been advised to do so from the balcony or from one of the rafters, but says he will be right out on the ice. All the doctors, nurses and ambulance drivers in the city have been notified that their services will be needed. A guard will search every man coming into the rink for razors or other concealed weapons. Here are the line-ups:

A Company—

Goal—Pte. "Gibraltar" Cook.
Defence — Capt. "Osgoode Hall" Widdifield; Lieut. "Halifax" Sexton.
Centre—Pte. "Dark Horse" Maxwell or Pte. "Lakefield" Bowe.

B Company—

Goal—Sergt. "Y.M.C.A." Loomis.
Defence —Lieut. "Swastika" Dupuy; Lance Corp "N.H.A." Miller.
Centre—Pte. "Bridgenorth" Cullen.
Right wing—Pte. "Ding Dong" Bell or Lieut. "Hod" Stuart.
Left wing—Pte. "Gett em" Belkirk or Pte. "Hook em" Crowell.

HOCKEY

One of the fastest and most exciting games of hockey of the season was played last night on the Mark street rink, when the married men of Mark street church played the junior members, defeating them by 3 to 2.

Married Men	Goal	Juniors
Hendry		Mitchell
	Defence
Whattam		Lipsett
Glover		Williams
	Centre
Orchard		Lipsett
	Rover
McIntyre		Payne
	Left Wing
Agnew		Stephen
	Right Wing
Throop		Record

It would be hard to pick the star on the married men's team, for they all went at it as if they were fighting the Germans. Hendry is goal had a busy night, stopping thousands of hard shots and letting the easy ones roll in. Rev. Whattam on the defence, slashed and slugged everybody that came near him, keeping everybody from the goal. Glover worked hard, making many brilliant rushes.

Orchard and McIntyre were the stars on the forward line. Agnew was always in the road of the other team and broke up many a nice rush. If Throop had stayed on his feet instead of falling all over the ice he might have been able to play hockey.

On the junior side they all played a good clean game. It would be hard to pick the best man on their team as each did his utmost to hold the old men down.

The Gathering of the Ku Klux Clan a Wonderful Spectacle in "The Birth of a Nation"

The Ku Klux Klan which forms such an interesting part of D. W. Griffith's great production, "The Birth of a Nation," was organized as a secret and social band in the State of Tennessee in May, 1866. This title was taken from the Greek word "kuklos" meaning circle. The third word "Klan" was added by the members who were in a large percentage descended from the Scotch who settled in old Virginia. In subsequent years when the Klans went forth to put down the desperadoes who swarmed down from the north to grab everything in sight of the South, the riders adopted the emblem of the fiery cross which the Scotch Highlanders had long used as a call to battle in the early days of wars in their native land. The seat sale opens at "The Grand" to-morrow (Friday) morning.

ners;
But to quit we wouldn't dare.
Now come out and prove your manhood,
And we'll help you do your share.

Think of the ones who've fallen,
While you've stayed at home so long,
For that fact we think you rotters,
Hurry up and come along.

Think of Ypres and Festubert,
Where Canadians gave their best,
And it's ten months since we came here,
Yet we cannot get a rest.

Still you boys at home are sleeping,
In a soft bed every night,
You are spending money freely,
While for you we have to fight.

Have you men no sense of duty?
Have you not a scrap of shame?
Tho' it isn't quite like hockey,
Won't you come and play the game?

Don't you think it would be better
If you'd leave your cosy nest,
And come out and join our party,
So that we could get a rest?

O. R. 7-12-15, Flanders.

The Examiner has received the following letter:

Zeist, Feb. 1, 1916.

Mr. Editor,—I am a Belgian prisoner of war and thinking the war will be long yet I need to gain a little money and in this way I made, here in the camp, a lot of rings—souvenirs. They are very nicely made with the inscription "War, 1915."

I should be happy if you would be so kind as to publish the fact that the readers who will send me an international post money order for 50 cents will receive one ring by registered mail.

As the Canadians have done very much to help my country, I am sure you also will like to help me a little on this occasion.

Pardon me for troubling you and with many thanks, I remain,

Very respectfully yours,
F. BAUDSON,

Young Germans Have Plans of U. S. Forts

NEW YORK, March 2.—Plans of United States fortification have been found in the possession of Richard von Arend and Rudolph von Krachs two young Germans, arrested here on a charge of operating the mails to swindle, according to a statement made to-day by Assistant United States District Attorney McDonald.

Von Arend and Von Krachs were held in $5,000 bail each for a hearing Saturday.

They said they were penniless and were commanded in the custody of the United States Marshal. The prisoners said they were graduates of the University of Berlin and had been in this country five years. They vlaimed ever having had any plans of United States forts and said the only thing answering such a description that they owned were pictures sent them from Germany by relatives in that country.

Entertainment at Murray Street

The lecture and concert given in Murray St., Baptist Sunday School under the auspices of the "Pennant Club" on Tuesday last was a complete success.

Chief of Police Thompson who acted as chairman for the evening, proved himself equal to the occasion.

An exceptionally good programme was rendered and the numbers were heartily applauded.

Mr. H. E. H. Kenner, principal of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, delighted his hearers with an excellent talk on the subject "The Empire we are fighting for".

The other numbers were equally appreciated.

The programme was as follows:

2—Chorus—Good Luck to the Boys of the Allies—Leader family (six members).

Baltimore Man Confessed When Billy Sunday Reached City.

BALTIMORE, March 2.—The arrival of Billy Sunday in Baltimore gave such a shock to the conscience of Wm. F. Husselbaugh, twenty-nine, who had married two women, that he tried to commit suicide. Failing, he confessed to the police.

Husselbaugh, in his cell, declared that the presence of Billy Sunday had caused him to realize his sin.

"I am responsible for the sorrow brought to two good women," he said, "and if I could I would go to that tabernacle and admit my guilt. When I saw Mr. Sunday's picture and read some of his forceful words, I could deceive my first wife any longer."

Both wives visited the police station and wept while they talked to Husselbaugh. Both are about thirty years old.

Both wives still profess the strongest love for the man.

CITY LEAGUE GAMES TO-NIGHT

Two Good Games To Be Played, Ladies Free

To-night the City League games will be played with Mr. Percy Windsor as referee. The games scheduled are as follows:

Pennants vs. Bachelors, first.
East City vs. Americans, second.

The games will start at 7.30 o'clock. The admission is, gentlemen, 10c Ladies, free. Boys, 5c.

AURA LEE ENTERS THE JUNIOR FINAL

As expected Aura Lee won from Belleville last night in their second of home-and-home O.H.A. junior semi-final games at the Arena. The score was 13 to 1, and, as Aura Lee also won the first game at Belleville by 11 to 8, they thus take the round by fifteen goals. For two periods Belleville had just as much, if not more, of the play than the locals, but they could not beat Wilkinson in goal. The last time Belleville played at the Arena against St. Andrew's College they had an abundance of luck, but it was a minus quantity with them last night.

Aura Lee did not show much until the last period. Their play in the first two periods was loose and they showed signs of cheatiness over their win in Belleville. However, when they finally realised that they would have to get right down to work to win, it was a different story. They scored nine goals in the last period, and all were from right in on top of the goal.

RIVERSIDES ARE EASY WINNERS

Defeat Kingston By Score of 10-1

KINGSTON, March 2.—In the first of home-and-home games in the O.H.A. senior semi-finals here to-night, the Riversides of Toronto, winners of group No. 2, defeated the Frontenacs of this city, winners of Group No. 1, by 10 goals to 2. The return game will take place at Toronto on Friday night. The game to-night was a big surprise to both Riversides and Frontenacs. It was expected that the locals would win to-night.

Frontenacs presented a weak team. Jack Geoch, the Toronto boy, who played with the 40th Battery team of the Queen City, but who was transferred to Kingston, was unable to take his place on the Frontenac defence owing to an injured foot. This necessitated change. Browne was sent back on the defence, and Hainsman to rover. "Bub is" Milan was at centre, and it was the first game he has played for the Frontenacs this season. The change on the local team disrupted their play.

May Be Third Draw In Bonspiel To-night

In all probability there will be a third draw of primary games in the vice-skips' bonspiel to-night. The first two are at 7.15 and 9.15 o'clock respectively, and it is felt that another at 11.15 is imperative if the finals in both primary and consolation series are to be concluded in good time. The last draw if it is held, will likely be a regular affair, but it will expedite the 'spiel.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

WITH THE 33rd BATTERY DRAFT ON ITS TRIP ON THE METAGAMA

Signaller Fred Primeau of the Examiner News Room Staff Writes Gossipy Letter About the Voyage of the Peterborough Artillerymen---Are Now Safe in England.

The following interesting letter has been received by Mrs. John Primeau, 32 Cricket Place, from her son, Signaller Fred Primeau, until a short time ago a member of The Examiner news room staff, and now overseas with the 33rd Battery draft:

Metagama, Feb. 9, 1916.

Dear Mother and Dad:—

Well here I am aboard ship and at present feeling O.K. I guess it is best to start this little story back at Kingston and let you know what has been going on since we left there.

We lined up for parade at 10 o'clock last Thursday morning and left there for the R.C.H.A. where about a thousand more men were lined up waiting for our departure. The band of the R.C.H.A. and 146 played us to the train.

Did not get in the same car as Harold. He was in seven and I was in eight, but we could get to see each other when we wanted. We had a very good crowd in our car, about five or six Peterborough fellows and some Kingston boys. Ken McClelland and Hunter Lewis had lower berths, while Sergeant Fowler and I had the top one. Mrs. Lewis and her husband were down to see Hunter off and she had a box for him, and Sergeant Fowler had about four given to him at Kingston, and when we arrived at Brockville three more were waiting for him there, so you may be sure we didn't fare bad in the eating line. Slept very good on the train, but was on guard every night. We had a guard at each end of the coach all the time. Everybody had to do guard, so we only got one hour each day.

Well I must say I have seen some sights I would never have seen had I not enlisted. We did most of our travelling in Quebec by day, so we did not miss much of the scenery. Travelled through the Laurentian Hills and there are sure some pretty spots. Seen lots of little hamlets in Quebec. The French people seem to have things much different from the people in Ontario. You would see a horse and sleigh going along the road, and at first you would think they had very big horses in Quebec, but after a second look you would see that it was just a natural size horse but a very small sleigh. We stopped at River de Loup for about fifteen minutes, and Ken McClelland got a picture of something you read of but very seldom see. It was a little ox or something of that sort, drawing a sleigh. It sure made one think what a change there would be if we had to go back again to the old times. Did not get out again till we reached Moncton, Halifax, and there they took us out and made us run around the block at the station about a half a dozen times.

Arrived at St. John's about seven o'clock, and what we could see from the train it seemed to be a very nice place. We were brought from there to the boat on the train, so we weren't off the train more than five minutes till we were on board the boat.

Got on board ship about eight o'clock and had supper. After that we came down to our berths and you may be sure that the beds looked inviting to us. I struck a very good berth, about a second-class. There are two of us sleeping together, and I was lucky enough to get the lower berth. It certainly makes one think of home when he has a nice set of springs, a good mattress, with a pillow, and white linen on the bed.

Went to bed at nine o'clock, and when we awoke next morning we were out of sight of land. There is sure some difference between this and the barracks I must say. The bugle is sounded every morning at six o'clock, but as we are on the third setting for our meals and our breakfast is not till eight o'clock, we can sleep till about seven-thirty and then the steward comes and tells us it is time to get up.

Well, I thought maybe I would be one of the lucky ones and get over without being sick but———. Felt fine all day Sunday, but Monday morning after getting up and having a wash I felt a little weak. Thought I would be brave and fight it off, so I went down to the dining room, but just took one bite and had to make a quick get-away. Had five meals that day, one down and four up. Did not feel very sick only I didn't want to eat. Was up on deck most of the time, or suppose I might have been worse.

Tuesday morning woke up feeling fine as a top, and able to eat all that was put before me. Nothing unusual happened Tuesday. This part of my story is nearly at a close now as I have only to-day's doings to tell now. Saw a boat this morning about ten miles away, the first we have seen since leaving St. John's.

We have been having it very easy so far, as we don't have to fall in till ten o'clock, and only have about half an hour drill and two in the afternoon. Well, as this is all now, I will have to let this wait over for a day or so till I get some more news.

Well, here I am started again. Three days have passed since I began this letter. Nothing very startling has happened yet, but we are just entering the danger zone. Was on kitchen fatigue Wednesday, but didn't have very much work to do. Had to get up and be all ready for work at six o'clock. Worked from six till about seven-fifteen and then was dismissed from that duty till eight o'clock that night, and after about fifteen minutes was finished.

Have had our first casualty, although not in our battery or brigade. A fellow named Snider from one of the Toronto batteries in the eighth brigade, who was hit on the head by a Toronto policeman a few nights before they left, died of a fractured skull. He felt all right till about Sunday, and then was sent to the hospital. He was operated on but died Tuesday night some time. Had a military funeral and I can sure tell you there is some difference between the military funeral on land and the one at sea. They wrapped the corpse in canvas and tied some iron weights to it, and it was dropped from the back of the ship. The boat stopped long enough to let them drop it overboard. None of the boys saw them dropping it, as it was right at the back of the deck.

Had our first life-belt drill Wednesday, and made very good time getting on deck. Well another day has passed, it is now Sunday night. Had second life-belt drill yesterday, and I can tell you it gave some of the boys quite a scare. About four o'clock we met a fishing vessel, and most of the boys were watching it when the whistle blew the danger signal. You should have seen how quick the deck was cleared.

Have got our escort with us now. They were first sighted to-day, about one o'clock, and it made a good bunch of them feel much safer. There are two sailing with us about half a mile at each side of us, but there may be more further away.

Well, as we can't give any information as to when we land or where we land, I guess I will have to bring this letter to a close.

FRED

BROTHER ON VESSEL SUNK BY SUBMARINE

Capt. Sharpe of the "Crofton Hall" a Brother of Mr. J. Arthur Sharpe of Peterborough

When the former Elder-Dempster steamer, "Crofton Hall" was submarined some time ago in the Mediterranean no word was received as to what members of the crew were saved. Capt. Sharp, who was in charge of the vessel, is a brother of Mr. J. Arthur Sharp of this city, and no word has been received from him since the despatches reported the Crofton Hall's sinking. Some may remember that this steamer was the first one mentioned for having rammed an enemy's submarine. It was many months ago in the first phases of the undersea campaign. Capt. Sharp was on the Elder-Dempster route from Liverpool to the Cape along the African coast.

PETERBORO' IS 632 FEET ABOVE LEVEL OF THE SEA

The Highest Point on the C. P. R. Between Havelock and Toronto is Pontypool—Altitude is More Important Than Latitude

RELATION TO HEALTH

A comparison of some of the altitudes shows that Havelock is considerably higher than any of the surrounding villages or towns, and in fact is 52 feet higher than Round Lake. Peterborough is 632 feet above sea level.

The elevation in feet above mean sea level for the following places:

Havelock station	701
Hastings station	619
Norwood station	673
Campbellford station	496
Peterborough station	632
Burketon Jct. station	1056
Toronto station Union	254
Marmora	597
Tweed station	475
Cent. Ont. Jct. station	597
Round Lake	649
Round Lake Limestone cliffs	719
Belmont Lake	698
Belmont Lake, Big Island	734
Belmont Iron Mine	651
Ontario Rock Co.'s hill	730
Healy Falls	604
Rice Lake	613
Stoney Lake	770
Madoc station	575
Lakefield station	770
Muskoka Lake	739
Montreal	110
Calgary	3437
Edmonton	2185

The highest point on the C. P. R. between Havelock and Toronto is near Pontypool, an elevation of 1105 feet. The highest between Havelock and Smith's Falls on the C. P. R. is near Mountain Grove, an elevation of 751 feet.

As uniformed critics occasionally question the utility of such a report as this, a number of uses are given:

(1) In relation to climate, and particularly agriculture, altitude is, relatively more important than latitude. It is not possible to give exact figures, but an increase in altitude of 1,000 feet would have a greater adverse effect upon agricultural possibilities than many miles of increased latitude. For instance although Edmonton is many miles farther north than Calgary, its altitude is over 1,000 feet lower, which assists its favourableness towards agriculture.

(2) In relation to health. The beneficial effect in certain places of tuberculosis and other diseases is well known.

(3) As compared with lowlands, highlands are characterized by a greater frequency of, and up to a certain altitude, more precipitation.

(4) The effect of altitude upon tree growth is too well known to need description.

Turks in Flight From Trebizond Petrograd Hears

LONDON, March 2.—A despatch from Petrograd says the Turks are hastily evacuating Trebizond and the neighbouring towns on the Black Sea coast of the Caucasus region.

Announcement has been made semi officially in Petrograd that tremendous activity has been observed over the whole length of the German front in the East. There are many indications that spring will see another great effort by the Germans on the Russian front.

Enormous quantities of incendiary and explosive bombs have been collected by the Germans. Another feature of these preparations is the bringing up of apparatus for aerial warfare on an increasing scale. Aerodromes are being enlarged and great numbers of aeroplanes forwarded from Germany.

THE TWO ORPHANS

Adapted and Produced by Herbert Brenon

(Adapted and Produced by Herbert Brenon).

Henrietta, (Theda Bara), and Louise (Jean Southern) are the two orphans. Henrietta is vividly beautiful and Louise, while equally fair to look upon, is blind. On the death of their parents in a French province, they are sent to Paris, where an uncle has promised to provide for them. On their arrival in the capitol Henrietta, who has attracted the eye of the rascally Marquis De Presles, is abducted by his orders. Louise falls into hands of Mother Frochard, a professional beggar. Mother Frochard has two sons, Jacques, a swaggering handsome daredevil, too proud to work, and Pierre, a hunchback, who earns an honest living as a knife-grinder. In the squalid cellar that the Frochards call home, Louise is terrified by the unwelcome attentions paid to her by Jacques. Pierre, on the other hand, does all in his power to protect the blind waif. Meanwhile Henrietta has been taken to the Marquis' chateau. Frightened by her experiences and half mad with apprehension, she appeals to the assembled guests, one of whom, hevalier De Vaudrey, rescues her after a duel with De Presles. Won by Henrietta's appealing beauty, the Chevalier wishes to marry her. His father indignantly refuses his consent and causes the girl to be sentenced to prison and exile. How she escapes this fate and with her blind sister finds the way to peace and happiness, makes a story of compelling charm and thrilling interest.

At the Empire Theatre, Charlotte Street, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, afternoon and evening. Carrying a strong supporting cast. Will undoubtedly prove a big drawing card. Seven full reels.

To The Parents Of Peterboro'

In many homes the question of enlistment is interfered with by the idea that in joining a regiment a boy is immediately placed within the reach of manifold temptations and in the midst of questionable company. To parents who are troubled by misgivings of that nature the 93rd Battalion is commended. You have had an opportunity of sizing these men up during the past few months. They have been here all winter, and there has not been the slightest indication of rowdyism or misconduct. The men have behaved themselves like soldiers and gentlemen, and it is safe to say that in no way have they brought any discredit upon the uniform they wear. The "crime" sheet of the battalion is one of the smallest on record in any unit, and no parents need worry about the companions their sons will meet in the Peterborough Battalion. Think it up and if your sons want to join the 93rd give them your blessing and let them go.

Meuse Ran Red With Blood Spilled in Assault on Verdun

French Soldier Saw What He Had Only Read of Before—Ten Thousand German Dead Before One Position—All Caures' Wood Blown Up, No German Escaping.

PARIS, Feb. 29.—The appalling magnitude of the German losses in the great Verdun offensive is becoming apparent from stories told in Paris by the wounded who have returned from the battlefield. Here are two instances of the slaughter inflicted upon the assailants on Wednesday and Thursday:

Among the wounded who have arrived in Paris is a Sergeant of a "seventy-five" battery in this section, near Regneville, who describes the German attack on Saturday morning against the Cote du Poivre.

"From dawn till 7 o'clock their howitzers had tried to demolish us," he says, "without hurting a man or a gun. We held our fire, waiting for their infantry. At 9:30 a.m. the message came that they were moving forward. We could not see them, because they were hidden by Talou Hill. As we tried to look out the Lieutenant ordered us under cover. Suddenly the telephone operator gave the signal, and we began firing, at 1,400 meters. We fired at full speed for twenty minutes. When 'cease fire' came there was a heap of shell cases fully man-high behind our guns. At the order I rushed to look out of the trench at the side of the battery.

"At the top of the ravine, on the edge of the plateau, was a great heap of Germans. They looked like a swarm of bees crawling over one another, not one was standing. Every minute shells threw bodies and debris into the air. The whole ravine slope was gray with corpses; one couldn't see the ground, they were so numerous, and the snow was no longer white. We calculated that there were fully 10,000 dead at that point alone, and the river ran past dappled with patches and streaks of blood. I had read of rivers running blood; now I have seen it. While the stream was not crimson, one could trace the reddish patches distinctly.

"We watched, fascinated; then came a German shell and a piece lodged in my shoulder. The Lieutenant said it served me right for not keeping covered. I would gladly have given both arms to be able to stay until the evening the enemy was beaten.

"The French had mined Caures Wood, outside the village of Beaumont, connecting the mines electrically with a station in the village. When the Germans had advanced, fully a division strong, to attack the wood the French regiment holding it ran, as if seized with panic, back toward the village. The Germans pursued them with shouts of victory. Soon the last Frenchman had emerged from the trees, but the commander waited until the Germans were all in the mined area. They were just beginning to debouch on the other side when he pressed the button. There was a tremendous roar, drowning for a moment even the boom of the cannon. The wood was covered with a cloud of smoke, and even on the French trenches in Beaumont there rained a ghastly dew.

"When the French re-entered the wood, unopposed, they found not a single German unwounded and hardly a score alive."

VERDUN LULL CONTINUED LAST NIGHT.

PARIS, March 2.—The lull on the Verdun front continued throughout last night, the War Office reported this morning.

Charlie Chaplin Gets $670,000 Year

Has Signed Contract With the Mutual Films For Big Amount

NEW YORK, March 2.—Charles Chaplin, film comedian, has signed a contract with the Mutual Film Corporation.

Next to the war in Europe Chaplin is the most expensive item in contemporaneous history. His salary for the first year under this contract will be $670,000. Every hour that goes by brings Chaplin $77.55. Oy, such a headache!

Mr. Chaplin will be 27 years old April 16. He is doing reasonably well for his age.

The Chaplin contract contains something more than 20,000 words. An element of "war risk" enters into the contract. Mr. Chaplin is a British subject. It is stipulated that he shall not leave the United States within the life of the contract without the permission of the corporation. Mr. Freuler has insured the costly comedian's life for $350,000.

He will pose in new studios built in Los Angeles and a two-reel comedy will be released every month.

Details of what Mr. Chaplin did after signing The Papers are lacking. It was rumoured that after spilling the rest of the ink in the bottle over President Freuler's head he turned two somersaults over the desk, skidded to the door on his right ear, fell down all flights of steps, paused in the lobby of the building only long enough to turn the faucet to which a roll of fire hose was attached, and then after kicking a policeman in the middle of the back he turned into Broadway on one foot that skidded and then ran up to his apartments with four of the funniest cops in town chasing him.

Mr. Chaplin will now call off the rounds of social gayeties in which he has been indulging and get a good long rest before he's crated, including his entire feet, and shipped to California.

Special Train From Hastings

On Tuesday Evening Next to Witness "The Birth of a Nation"

A special train will be run from Hastings on Tuesday evening next to Peterborough to see the "Birth of a Nation" at the Grand Opera House. One hundred and thirty-five people from Hastings alone are coming to see this wonderful film attraction. It is likely too that a large number of people of Campbellford will come to the city for this event.

"If the British Constitution Is Worth Living Under It Is Worth Fighting For"

(BISHOP O'BRIEN)

"A Man Cannot Expect to Enjoy the Rights and Liberties of a Free Country Unless He Participates in the Struggle to Maintain Them" Said Mr. D. O'Connell During the Course of a Recruiting Address Which He Gave Last Evening in St. Alphonsus Lyceum—The Sacrifice Must Extend to the Women.

A BETTER UNDERSTANDING

Unity was the keynote of a stirring address that was given last evening by Mr. D. O'Connell. The occasion was a recruiting meeting held in St. Alphonsus Lyceum for the benefit of the 93rd Battalion. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, who occupied the chair, expressed the hope that the women of Peterborough would do their part towards bringing to a successful culmination the great conflict that is now being waged in Europe. This meant giving up their loved ones as well as assisting in the work that must be consummated by those who are unable to go and fight. His Lordship regretted the absence in the audience of more eligible young men and expressed the hope that the meeting would constitute the scattering of the seed which would have its harvest in the completion of the 93rd Battalion, in addition to any other units that might be raised here. "If the British constitution is worth living under it is worth fighting for," said Bishop O'Brien. "Let us hope that the people will do their duty; Catholic people in particular."

Rights Would be Lost.

The speaker of the evening was Mr. D. O'Connell, who, in the course of an intensely patriotic address, reviewed the causes that contributed to the present catastrophe. The latter was based on a lust for world domination and a flagrant disregard for national liberty and justice on the part of the Germans. "If it is encumbent upon one class more than another to do their duty in this present crisis," said Mr. O'Connell, "it is the Catholics. They have lived under British rule for upwards of one hundred and fifty years, and have enjoyed full religious freedom, as well as many other advantages. In Ontario Catholics have that absolute right, which above all other rights they would hesitate to forfeit, and that is the right to send their children to separate schools, maintained by their own money. All these rights would be lost if we should fail to succeed in this war, and that is one special reason perhaps why Catholics, more than any other creed should be unfailing in their efforts to help the cause for which the British Empire is now fighting. Besides it would be a calamity, if, after this war, it could be said that Catholics were lacking in their efforts to render assistance at this very critical hour. There never was a time in history when Catholics have not stood for their rights which it was their duty to do. Their forefathers fought for constitutional rights and it is these rights that are in danger and to-day it is the duty of Catholics to demonstrate to their fellow citizens that they possess the qualities of free men and are not afraid to fight for the cause.

Must Respond.

"There is no excuse for any eligible young men," said the speaker "The crisis is terrible. Every ounce of strength must be put forth if the country is to be saved. Every single man of military age must respond to the call. The single men of military age have no ties that will justify them remaining behind. The most important thing in a man's life is the life of his country. You cannot enjoy the rights and liberties of a free country unless you participate in the struggle to maintain them. The sacrifice must also extend to the women. They must identify themselves with the Red Cross Society and other organizations of a practical and patriotic nature. The shadow of death hovers over many homes, but let us hope that this world will be better and brighter following the conclusion of the present gigantic struggle."

A Better Understanding.

Bishop O'Brien recorded his appreciation of the excellent address made by Mr. O'Connell. "If a better understanding is created between people who worship at different sanctuaries and who adhere to their own beliefs, the sacrifices we are making will not have been in vain," said His Lordship.

His Honour Judge Huyoke made a stirring appeal to the young men. He said that there were numbers of Protestant young men who should be in khaki as well as Catholics. He commended Mr. O'Connell for the very able and practical address which he had given.

Dean McColl followed with a few remarks relating to the number of young men that had gone from his particular parish. He said that enlistment in Peterborough, so far as Catholics are concerned, would compare favourably with any other city in Canada. Personally, he did not favour comparisons, as it was difficult to obtain data upon which to base any fair comparison. He believed that persons who made comparisons did not know what they were talking about.

The meeting was brought to a conclusion with a few remarks by Lieut.-Col. Johnston, officer commanding the 93rd Battalion. Col. Johnston assured his hearers that any man who joined the 93rd Battalion would "get a square deal" irrespective of race or creed.

Miss Gertrude Clancy, Mr. Joseph Minnicola, Mr. Edward Hanrahan, and several members of the 93rd Battalion band contributed several musical numbers.

PROFESSIONAL MEN MAY FIGURE IN "DOPE" CASE

Parents of Chatham Drug Fiend Considering Taking Action.

CHATHAM, March 2.—It is quite possible that the recent allegations made by Detroit customs officials that Chatham is a centre of a dope ring, will be substantiated. An investigation which for some time has been carried on in the city promises some startling developments within the next few weeks.

Following the allegations of the Detroit officials, Canadian inspectors conducted a thorough investigation in the city and county, and although they did not find proof that any Canadian citizen was involved it is understood that they had certain well-known professional men under surveillance.

An action is to be instituted, it is understood, at the request of the parents of a local boy, who for two years has been securing dope in the city, and who at the present time is in a serious condition as a result of the excessive use of drugs. The action, if gone on with, will involve some of the best known professional men in the city, and promises some very startling features.

TOO TERRIFIED TO MOVE OUT OF DANGER

NEW YORK, March 2.—Too terrified to move when she saw two automobiles crash together a dozen feet from where she was standing at Sixth avenue and Lincoln place, Brooklyn an unidentified woman about sixty-five years old was crushed to death by one of the automobiles as it skidded into the curbing and overturned. When no one appeared at the Bergen street police station to identify the ody, it was removed to the morgue of the Kings County Hospital.

Warren M. Wells, chauffeur, of No. 610 East Fifth street, Flatbush, who was driving the smaller of the two automobiles, was arrested on a charge of homicide at the direction of Coroner Ernest Wagner. The chauffeur of the second machine, Hugh Campbell, of No. 700 Fifty-second street, Bay Ridge, was paroled as a material witness and will appear before the Coroner.

Wells was operating a delivery automobile owned by the All Package Grocery Store company, having offices in the Bush Terminal Building, Forty-ninth street. Campbell's automobile, a heavy limousine, is owned by Frank Spencer, of No. 2,334 Amsterdam avenue, Manhattan. Mr. Campbell said Spencer had permission to rent it by the hour.

In the limousine at the time of the accident were Mrs. R. W. Kemp, of No. 426 Seventy-third street, Bay Ridge, and her daughter, Miss Vera, a student at Berkeley institute. Both suffered from shock.

Two Ribs Cracked When Board Broke

George Thompson, 475 Parnell street, an employee at the McDonald Estate box factory, met with an accident yesterday evening while operating a saw. It was reported that the board he was cutting broke in some way and struck him on the chest, fracturing several ribs. Dr. Gallivan was called and Mr. Thompson was removed to his home in the Dan Spence ambulance. It is not expected that there will eb an serious results from his injury.

6 Months' Hard Labour For Guard Who Slept

WINDSOR, March 2.—Two soldiers, members of the special guard were tried and sentenced here by a court-martial, the first ever held in Windsor.

Private G. Garvey, found sleeping in the basement of the Armoury when he should have been on guard between 1 and 2 a.m. on February 2, was sentenced to six months at hard labor in the County Jail, and at the termination of his term will be dishonorably discharged from the King's service.

Private H. Opie, who left his post on the same night, was sentenced to ninety days' confinement to barracks. Opie said he left his beat to search for Garvey.

Old Oil Soaked Papers Fuel of Italian Armies

ROME, March 1.—It's a dangerous thing for an absent minded reader to lay down his newspaper in Italy these days. Before he knows what has happened this very same daily will have been whisked off and boiled in oil. Not that the paper is prohibited literature, but just because everyone in Italy is working in a frenzy making "scalda rancio" for the soldiers.

Scalda rancio literally means "heat rations." All the countries make some provision whereby the soldiers at the front, have hot coffee and hot meals.

But in Italy it is the daily newspaper and any old sort of oil or grease that is saving the day up in the snow beaten mountains of the frontier.

Children Aid in Task.

Everybody is making scalda rancios. School children are taught how to cut newspapers into strips the right size, then wind them into tight rolls.

There are regular stations where these paper rolls are taken to be thrown into big vats of oil or paraffin to absorb all thereof that they can. When cooled they are ready for the front.

Private families are told to save every bit of old grease, and this is often used instead of paraffin, for the latter is expensive. Bits of meat scraps, of olive oil of anything that contains grease or oil is soaked up in these newspaper clippings.

Many an American newspaper has found its way to the Italian front to make a soldier's life a bit happier by helping him get a hot meal. At the hotels where Americans dwell newspapers are grabbed up almost before they have a chance to circulate.

Blind Soldiers Roll Papers.

Prince Aldobrandini, with true patriotism, has turned this residence over to the soldiers blinded in the war. Here all day they sit, these men who have given their eyes for their country, cutting newspapers into strips and making them into tight rolls so that they may be converted into scalda rancios to heat the rations for the others still fighting at the front to which they themselves cannot return.

There is a regular scalda rancio campaign on in Italy now because these bits of oil soaked newspapers are the cheapest fuel that can be gotten to the front.

Made in Special Sizes.

There is a special size for heating a cup of coffee, a special size for warming a whole meal. There are some that last for ten minutes, others for fifteen, others for a longer time.

The smaller ones cost 2 cents and 3 cents, and there are posts all over Italy where they may be purchased by friends desiring to send them to the front.

Housewives no longer can save "dripping" for home use nor can the old newspaper man make his usual living. Everything is going for the soldiers and every bit of old linen for dressing an evening journal provides a free ride for the boys at the front.

A COMPROMISE SUGGESTED

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, March 2.—If the Hydro-Electric and C.N.R. interests do not themselves effect a compromise within the next week, the Railway Committee of the House of Commons will vote on bills to extend the charters of Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto, and Niagara, St. Catharines and Western Lines, which have been the bone of contention before the committee for two sittings. These are C.N.R. roads. This was the decision after two hours of futile discussion to-day. The C.N.R. offered a compromise to-day by the announcement that the railway would be willing to drop the lines from St. Catharines to Hamilton, and thence to Toronto. This was not acceptable to the opposition interest. D. B. Hanna, vice-president of the C.N.R., said that the St. Catharines-Toronto line was the vital section of the transcontinental system. Finally Hon. K. D. Reid, acting Minister of Railways, suggested that the opposing interests be given a week to get together. It was agreed to and the bills will be finally dealt with with on Thursday next.

SERBIANS PRAISED BY AMERICAN NURSE

Miss Sybil C. Eden, who has just returned from the Balkans, where, as a member of the Serbian Sanitary and Red Cross Corps, she was with the Serbian troops when their country was invaded, paid a warm tribute to the soldiers who fought in the little kingdom's bitter struggle for a lost cause. According to her statement, the conduct of the Serbs, even in unparalleled misfortune, has hardly been equalled in the history of the war.

"I was present for six weeks in the long retreat which began soon after Bulgaria was added to the list of the enemies of Serbia," said Miss Eden, "when death and starvation followed close on the columns of men who were faced by the thoughts of the dissolution of their country. Yet through it all I never saw one case of drunkenness, and hardly an act of roughness, which could have been forgiven easily under the circumstances.

"The friendly attitude of the common trooper toward the English nurses with his command was always marked with the warmest sense of gratitude. This gratitude, when extended to an American, always was accompanied by a lively curiosity and openly expressed admiration for the United States.

"We got little general news of the action of Bulgaria," said Miss Eden, "but spies kept us pretty well informed of the current events around us, and so I was hardly surprised when the District Commander who had charge of our depot in Bosnia told us that the Bulgars had invaded Serbia and that the troops under his command had been ordered to be ready to move at a moment's notice. You see, there were German troops only a few miles away and the retreat would have to begin for us when they were in force enough to advance.

"The officer ordered me not to allow the motors to leave camp and to be prepared to start with the whole corps just after the main body left camp. He wanted me to burn the supplies, as he said that a company of old men and a battery of artillery were going to be left to hold what trenches had been held for the past months by more than 2,000 infantry and plenty of big guns.

"The retreat was made from this camp in good order, but I gave away the provisions to starving inhabitants and didn't have to waste any. The motors I took to Nish, but by the time we had got there, the Government had gone and I turned them over to an officer of the War Department. I had held rank as an officer in he Serbian army, and now I bade good-bye to the men who had worked with me in the march, and went into a military hospital in Nish.

"The steady advance of the Germans drove us out and then began a horrible retreat. I made the first part of it alone until I caught up with some officers, who gave me an ox cart. Before that time I had walked twenty and sometimes thirty miles a day. I was without food, and if it hadn't been for the generosity of the Serbian peasants and soldiers I never could have come through.

"The conduct of the Serbian troops was superb. In rags and half starved I saw them time and again cheerfully take their places to fight the oncoming enemy, obeying their officers just as if they were on parade. The saddest things on the line of march were the bodies of women and little children that fell by the roadside, overcome by hunger and cold. We finally reached the Adriatic and crossed in the steamship Brindisi."

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 14—Health of Body Affects Eyes

THERE are hundreds of cases where a person's system becomes run down, and weakened by sickness. When that is the condition, we do not wonder at finding the limbs tire easily, arms feel too heavy to lift, and almost refuse to do as we want them to. Then why wonder what is the matter with your eyes at such times. They tire quickly the same as any other part of the sick body.

Dr. Fowler does not pretend to prescribe for sickness of the body, but he can by a simple test determine, whether glasses will help the eyes, or you should be left entirely in the hands of your physician, and he will be very glad to give honest advice to any such who call at his optical parlors.

TOMMY AND HIS CIGARETTE

How Tommy loves his cigarettes is indicated by the following lines by Trooper H. C. Jones of the Royal Rocks, Nanaimo to his sister:—

In barracks or billets, in battle or bed,
Half clothed, half starved or even half dead,
In the thick of the fight, or the minutes of rest,
There's just one commodity Tommy loves best,
He'll lose all his money or hit, but you bet
He'll hang like grim death to his dear cigarette.
In the fight, day or night, he will keep it alight—
If it's "there" well he knows that the game's going right;
And should chance put it out, even then bullets rain,
He'll chuck down his rifle and light it again.
There's no harm or charm in Tommy's one balm,
For it steadies his nerves and keeps his head calm.
So when charity moves you to do gentle deeds,
And you think out a number of poor Tommy's needs,
Take care, in your haste to be kind, don't forget,
That Tommy's "dead nuts" on his dear cigarette.

Dutch Deny That Imports Find a Way to Germany

Says That Allies Frequently Detain Goods Needed for Bona Fide Domestic Consumption.

THE HAGUE, March 1.—A semi-official statement issued here to-day rebuts in detail the assertions of the London Daily Mail's commissioner who in a series of articles sought to prove that Great Britain's efforts to prevent goods imported into Holland from finding their way to Germany had failed; that Holland has imported more than she needed and that supervision by the controlling body, known as the Netherlands Overseas Trust, was useless.

The statement points out that the functions of the Overseas trust were gradually extended as the course of events dictated, and argues that the only fair way to judge of its achievements is to compare the first quarter of 1915, when only contraband goods had been consigned to the trust, with the last quarter in the same year, when the rationing system was in force.

A marked restriction of imports is shown by three figures, the restriction being declared to have resulted in serious complaints from various branches of Dutch industry, notably the lead, leather copper, glass and textile industries, which owing to their constantly recurring inability to procure raw material had been compelled to close down periodically and had incurred grave losses.

Regarding the matter of fats, oils and oil seeds, upon which the Daily Mail laid stress, the statement shows by comparing the quarterly periods referred to that imports of linseed had increased from 607,800 tons to 17,200; ground nuts from 6,026 tons to 1,364 tons; soybeans from 12,702 tons to 3,477 tons, grain oil from 1,201 tons to 135 tons, cottonseed oil from 21,602 tons to 5,136 tons, and linseed oil from 19,615 tons to nothing.

The statement emphatically denies the Daily Mail's accusations that the Overseas Trust was unable to prevent untraceable contraventions through retailers. On the contrary, it is asserted special controlling committees are doing most effective work in insuring that none but bonafide Inland consumers is supplied and the customs net on the frontiers is drawn so tight, it is said, that only the smallest quantities slip through its meshes.

Summing up, the statement declares that the Overseas Trust undoubtedly fills the purpose for which it was created. In the meanwhile regrets are expressed that the Entente Powers, "probably owing to the repeated appearance of misleading newspaper articles, have become suspicious to such a degree that they frequently detain goods badly needed for bonafide Dutch domestic consumption, thus causing a needless dislocation of trade."

FASHIONS SET BY SOLDIERS.

Alexander's Smooth Face Style to be Changed By Present War.

Alexander the Great is said to be responsible for men shaving their faces. When his phalanx swept into Asia, the beards of the soldiers were found to be a source of danger to themselves. In hand to hand encounters with the enemy the latter were found to possess too great an advantage in being able to grasp the beard. As a matter of military necessity Alexander ordered all his fighting men to shave. To-day in the trenches of Europe, soldiers are permitting their beards to grow as a protection against cold—again a necessity of war—and doubtless the wearing of beards will be very generally revived in consequence.

The German Attacks on Verdun Continue Unsuccessful

BRITISH HAVE RETAKEN TRENCHES LOST NEAR YPRES

Three Rumania Army Corps Concentrated Along Danube Opposite Bulgarian Fortress

Total Number of Survivors of French Cruiser La Provence Numbers Nine Hundred, According to Official Reprts

SALONIKA, March 3.—Three army corps have been concentrated by the Rumanian General Staff along the Danube opposite the Bulgarian fortress Cidinand in Western Rumania.

PARIS, March 3.—Official reports to the Ministry of Marine yesterday increased to nine hundred the number of total survivors of the French cruised La Provence sunk in the Mediterranean.

DOVER, March 3.—An inquest over the victims of the Maloja disaster proved that the vessel struck a mine in the Channel and was not torpedoed.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—President Wilson yesterday afternoon denied that any utterance he made might be interpreted as indicating he was unfavourable to a war with Germany.

ZURICH, Switzerland, March 3.—The German stock markets slumped heavily yesterday following pessimism over the Verdun situation.

PARIS, March 3.—German attacks in the neighbourhood of Verdun practically ceased, but artillery is very active in other parts of the line.

LINER MALOJA—The steamship Maloja, a 12,481-ton vessel, belonging to the Peninsula and Oriental Line, struck a mine and sank within half an hour, two miles off Dover. More than forty persons were drowned or killed as a result of the accident.

DO THIS FIRST—YOU!

You know, and every physician knows, that when any sickness has passed, whether it be throat trouble, organic disturbances, contagious diseases, or even a severe cold, a relapse is feared, because sickness robs the system of Nature's resistance and leaves it subject to lingering germs.

Drugs never build up a worn-out body—only food can do that, and the first thing to take after any sickness is the concentrated, blood-making oil-food in Scott's Emulsion, which feeds the tissues, benefits the blood and strengthens both lungs and throat.

Physicians prescribe Scott's Emulsion after sickness. Nurses everywhere advocate it. Scott's is pure medicinal food, without injurious drugs.

Only Preliminary To Operations On A Large Scale

Germans Believed to Be Resting Before Resuming Efforts to Take Verdun—French Prepared

PARIS, March 3. —The press and public of France are mystified at the continued pause in the German attacks around Verdun. Caution born of experience leads generally to the rejection of the view that the Germans have given up all hope of trying to capture the Lorraine fortress. It is thought more likely that they are merely resting before starting afresh with greater energy. It is believed in many quarters that the attack on Verdun was only a preliminary to operations on a much larger scale for the purpose of trying to crush the French once and for all. However that may be, it is affirmed that General Joffre is fully prepared for all eventualities. So far only the local French reserves have been called upon at Verdun, the great general reserve forces remaining intact for use in repelling other heavy onslaughts or for carrying out a great counter attack when the opportune moment comes.

May Shift Attack.

The question is raised as to whether the next German attack will again be at Verdun or along the front from the Somme to the Aisne, as it is known that the Germans have been making preparations along the latter lines, the southern limit of which is many miles nearer to Paris than is Verdun.

These preparations, however, are not so elaborate as those which had been made at Verdun, and, should the Germans attempt the latter plan the military observers say, they would be liable to a flank attack by the British in Artois and Flanders.

No Gun Support.

On the other hand, if the Germans continue their assaults against Verdun from the plain of the Woevre their infantry will have to attack virtually unsupported by the heaviest of the German guns, it is argued, as the water-soaked clay soil of the Lorraine plain makes the transport of such guns almost impossible. The plain is only crossed by four military roads and troops and light artillery would be obliged to deploy in the open under fire from the French positions on the heights of the Meuse.

Two valleys lead to Verdun from the plain. Both are blocked by forts—Des Tavannes and Rosellier—and everywhere else the infantry would face thickly wooded heights with a straight drop of 250 feet. The Germans would have here, however, all the resources of Metz within easy reach.

Renewal of the Fighting Southeast of Verdun Mackensen Is Directing French Positions on Pepper Heights and Westward Across the Meuse Are Under Terrific Bombardment---British Bombard German Positions Near Ypres.

LONDON, March 3.—According to one unconfirmed report from Stockholm to-day, Field Marshal Mackensen, hero of the German, Galician and Balkan campaigns, has joined the Kaiser and Crown Prince and is directing the Verdun operations. The Teutons are using shells lavishly in a fierce cannonade. The French positions on Pepper Heights and westward across the Meuse are under terrific bombardment. Infantry fighting has begun southeast of Verdun, indicating a renewal of the attempt to ring the fortress from the south. The latest official despatches from Berlin reported heavy bombardment of the German positions around Ypres by the British. It is thought possible the British attack on this sector marks the beginning of a counter offensive.

Berlin advices to-day admitted that soggy Woevre plain east and southeast of Verdun has proved a great hindrance in the movement of heavy guns, thus explaining the lull in the battle.

GREAT DEJECTION IN GERMANY WOMEN CRYING FOR PEACE

LONDON, March 3.—The British have retaken the trenches lost near Ypres, February 14th, together with a number of German prisoners.

LONDON, March 3.—There is great dejection in Germany. Ten thousand women marched through the streets of Berlin crying for peace.

PARIS, March 3.—German attacks on Verdun continue unsuccessful.

LONDON, March 3.—From many sources the German raider Moewe is reported captured.

LONDON, March 3.—Lord Derby says there are too many exemptions in the Conscription Bill.

PETROGRAD, March 3.—Russians have occupied two more big towns in Asia Minor with Turks in retreat.

TOO GOOD TO FIGHT.

Eligible Young Men File Affidavits Stating Conscientious Objections.

The fear of conscription apparently looms large in the eyes of half a dozen young men eligible for military service, judging from the affidavits which were received at the Military Headquarters. These young men in setting forth their claim for exemption state that they are averse to rendering military service under the conditions as subscribed by "An Act Respecting the Militia and Defence of Canada." Briefly stated, their contention is as follows: "I am a Christian, and the religious doctrines I believe preclude me from bearing arms. I am a member of the International Bible Students' Association and subscribe and am in harmony with its doctrines."

The association referred to has its headquarters at Brooklyn, N.Y., and is evidently looking forward to a harvest of members among the young men of Canada.

Some of the military authorities are inclined to believe that the movement emanate from pro-German quarters and is an exort to hamper recruiting. Whether this is a correct view or not, they think the International Bible Students' Association needs watching. The affidavit forms filled out by the young men are witnessed by a magistrate. They have been specially printed for the purpose.

Economy in Stockings.

Cut the feet from worn stockings; buy new feet (you can get them for five cents a pair), sew them to the legs you have cut from the feet, and, behold, you have new stockings. Of course they must be worn with shoes, not slippers or pumps. You will find that quite a saving, and when the shoe is laced up the seam cannot be seen. Make a flat seam, sidestitch it on both sides, using thread the colour of the stocking.

Here is a Certified Cure of Chronic Salt Rheum

By Use of Dr. Chase's Ointment—Also a Bad Case of Eczema Jus Reported Cured

Eczema and Salt Rheum are different names for practically the same disease. Small pimples of vesicles form in groups, break and run watery matter, a crust is formed, itching is intense and the disease shows a strong tendency to spread over the body.

Whatever may be the cause, Dr. Chase's Ointment will cure, for it heals and dries up the sores and leaves the skin soft and smooth.

Mr. Geo. P. Compton, Brooklyn, Lot 61, P.E.I., writes:—"I suffered for two years with Salt Rheum. Though I consulted three different doctors and tried many medicines, it was all to no effect. A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I am glad to say that when I finished the sixth box the Salt Rheum was all gone. There can be no doubt that the cure was entirely due to the use of this ointment, and I want other sufferers from Salt Rheum and Eczema to know about it."

Mr. Geo. Hume, J. P., Brooklyn, Lot 61, P.E.I., writes:—"This is to certify that I know Mr. Geo. E. Compton and believe his statement to be true and correct."

Mrs. Allan Weber, whose husband is proprietor of the Manitoulin Woollen Mills, Sheguiandah, Ont., writes: —"I have had a bad case of Eczema on my right leg below the knee. I tried all kinds of ointments and liniments, but to no avail, and was pretty well discouraged. Hearing of how Dr. Chase's Ointment is curing Eczema, I decided to give it a trial, and I am glad to say that it made a complete cure. The sore healed up completely and I have had no trace of the old trouble for over a year."

It takes a little patience to cure a severe case of Eczema or Salt Rheum, but you soon obtain relief by using Dr. Chase's Ointment, and you can see with your own eyes the benefits obtained once the healing process sets in. Get Acquainted With "Verboten"

Britishers Now Know Much More About The Way They Do Things in Germany.

The British who on the authority of one of their national anthems, 'Never, never, never shall be slaves' and before the war were wont to pity the subservience of the Germans to the official 'verboten,' may have to make a slight change in their tune," says the Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph. They are getting an unaccustomed taste of the meaning of martial law.

An Englishman returning to his home in London from a long stay in the interior of Africa without exact information concerning the new regulations would be likely to spend the first few months in jail. The first evening he might happen to raise the shade of the parlor window to take a look at the weather. If a policeman caught him at it that would mean a heavy fine or perhaps, without that option, a month's imprisonment. Or even with the shade down he might neglect to dim the lights in the house. That is another punishable offence.

After serving his sentence on his way home he might happen to meet a soldier or sailor in uniform and, grateful over his final release, invite the warrior to partake of a little alcohol refreshments in a nearby public house. The one invited need not accept. The mere offering is sufficient to land the hospitable one behind the bars for a couple of months more.

Out of jail again, he decides to go straight home. There is a bird flying across the lawn and, without thinking particularly what he is doing, he throws his stick at it and brings it to the ground. It turns out to be a carrier pigeon. There is a heavy penalty for killing or molesting a carrier pigeon or not promptly handing a dead or injured one over to the authorities. Back to the cell for him. Again released, the victim seeks the consolation of his home, and is unpacking his trunk, a duty he has not had an opportunity of performing before, when he brings to light a camera, for he is an amateur photographer. He takes it to the window to examine it and is spotted by the ever watchful policeman, who by this regards him as an old offender.

His house is within a mile of a munition factory. It is a serious offence to possess a camera within a specified area. Another thirty days and confiscation of the camera for him. By this time the poor victim concludes it would have been better just to remain in jail for the rest of his natural life. The offences mentioned are many others come under the latest addition to the British Defence of the Realm Act. But the act seems to bear about as heavily on the folk at home as on the enemies whom it is designed to hinder.

WHY FLOUR HAS DROPPED IN PRICE

Following the weakness and something like dullness which has been apparent in the flour market, chiefly on export accounts, prices on flour have decreased 30c., says the Canadian grocer. This is not unexpected inasmuch as the freight situation is now so seriously inconvenienced in the flour and grain trade that the export trade is being knocked on the head very severely. Domestic demand is about all the millers are catering to at present. This demand though good, is not enough to hold up fairly stiff levels, and prices have sunk. On the other hand, if the ocean freight should clear and bottoms are found for transportation use to England and Europe generally we should see recourse to former high levels. At that a drop of 30c is not very monumental, and the opinion of most millers is that it is only a temporary movement and that higher prices rather than lower are what loom on the horizon

CARE FOR FRENCH ARMY.

PARIS, March 2.—The Ministry of War announced that owing to present military needs and the suspension of navigation freight cars cannot be placed at the disposition of commerce except to a very limited extent. FOUR WEEKS IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Brown Finally Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cleveland, Ohio.—"For years I suffered so sometimes it seemed as though I could not stand it any longer. It was all in my lower organs. At times I could hardly walk, for if I stepped on a little stone I would almost faint. One day I did faint and my husband was sent for and the doctor came. I was taken to the hospital and stayed four weeks but when I came home I would faint just the same and had the same pains.

A friend who is a nurse said for me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it that very day for I was suffering a great deal. It has already done me more good than the hospital. To anyone who is suffering as I was my advice is to stop in the first drug-store and get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before you go home."—Mrs. W. C. OUR SERIAL STORY

BY LOUIS TRACY

All this, and more, Yvonne caught in one wide-eyed glance. She saw every touch of colour, every changeful flicker of light on the wet deck and glistening oilskins. Tollemache alone supplied a different note. The light brown squares of the cork jacket, and the dust-coloured canvas straps that clasped it to his body, stood out in marked relief. He, who had been overboard and submerged for a few seconds, looked bone dry. The others, wet as he no doubt, Ingersoll alone excepted, seemed to have come straight from the depths.

But Peridot, watching the sea with sidelong glance, suddenly bent in a very frenzy of exertion, and Yvonne, thrusting her right foot against the low gunwale, put the tiller to port and leaned against it until her left knee touched the deck. The men at the oars imitated her as best they might, while striving to keep the boat moving.

At the first mighty pull of the partly raised sail the Hirondelle flinched and fell back a little. Then she took hold, as sailors put it, and careened under the strain until the iron socket on the starboard sweep was wrenched off its pin, and Tollemache and the sailor were hard pressed to keep it from swinging inboard and dealing Yvonne a blow. Something black and sinister showed for a second in the yeasting froth beneath the boat's quarter; whether rock or patch of seaweed none could tell, though five pairs of eyes saw it.

Peridot's call came shrilly, "Keep her there, Ma'mselle!"

Back swung the tiller, and Yvonne "kept her there," though during a long minute the Hirondelle tore at the rudder as a startled horse snatches at the bit, and it seemed as if she must capsize without fail.

Again the Breton's cry rang out, "Ease her now, Ma'mselle!"

The boat fell away before the wind. Soon she was on an even keel, save for the unavoidable rolling and pitching that resulted from the furious seas. But, if stout canvas and trustworthy cordage held, they were safe as though tied to the quay in the land-locked harbour at Pont Aven. Already Les Verres were a furlong or more in the rear. It was impossible to see what had become of the Stella, because the spray was leaping high over the reef, until its irregular crests were bitten off by the gale. But a flashing smack which had gallantly put out from Brigneau was signalled back before it crossed the bar, and the signal station was hoisting a fresh set of flags which spelled in the lingua franca of the ocean, "Well done, Concarneau 413!" which was as near the Hirondelle's name as the watchers on shore could get on the spur of the moment.

Peridot paid Yvonne the greatest of all compliments by not coming aft to relieve her. But her father, who had betrayed no flurry even when death seemed unavoidable, drew near, and placed a hand on her shoulder.

"You're another Grace Darling, my dear!" was all he said.

But the look accompanying the words was enough, and the girl's eyes began to smart painfully, because the sudden moisture in them revealed how they had suffered from the spindrift.

And again, by sending her below on an errand of mercy, he only added subtly to Peridot's tribute.

"We can spare you now, Yvonne," he said. "Tell those men to come on deck, and you give an eye to the lady. You have some dry clothes down there. If she has no bones broken, she will recover more quickly in a warm bunk than under any other condition. Get her undressed, and give her a little cognac. Take some yourself,—don't spare it,— and pass the bottle up here."

He took her place at the tiller, and she made off at once, only pausing to pat Lorry's wet and shaggy head.

Six men came up the companion stairway; but two returned at her call to lift the injured man into a lower and an upper bunk on the same side. They had contrived already to bandage the broken arm with handkerchiefs. The sprained ankle they could not deal with. The man with a broken arm was making some outcry; but the other sufferer was patient and even smiling.

"Gawd bless yer, Miss!" he said to Yvonne when he discerned her identity in the dim light of the cabin. "If it 'adn't a been fer you an' yer shipmites, we on the Stella 'ad as much chawnce as a lump o' ice in hell's flames!"

The Cockney accent was new in Yvonne's ear, and its quaintness helped to soften the speaker's forible simile.

"You'll soon be all right," she assured him. "We'll reach Pont Aven within the hour, and the good folk there will look after you splendidly. Please lie still now, as I must pin a blanket across these two bunks."

When she was left alone with the insensible woman, who was alive, the sailors said, but completely unconscious. She had fainted, they believed, when the shaft snapped and the yacht was like to be lost forthwith. The immersion in the sea seemed to have revived her for a few seconds; but she swooned off again in the cabin, and, while the boat was lurching so heavily, they thought it wiser to pillow her head on a coat and not attempt to restore her senses.

On deck the captain of the Stella had picked out Ingersoll as the probable owner of the Hirondelle. He came and stood by the artist's side.

"Is this craft yours, Sir?" he inquired.

"Yes."

"And is that young lady your daughter, Sir?"

"Yes."

"Well, I need hardly say that we owe our lives to her, and you, and your two friends. I've seen some rum things durin' thirty years at sea, but I've never seen anything to equal your pluck in runnin' into that death trap. And that girl of yours—the way she behaved! Well, there! I never could talk much. This time I'm clean stumped!"

"We did what we could. The real credit for your rescue lies with that cool-headed Breton fisherman yonder. Is the poor fellow who was killed the owner of the Stella?"

"Yes, Sir."

"And the lady is his wife?"

"Yes, Sir. Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Garmack. Look out, Sir! You must have forgotten you were leaning against the tiller."

The sailor acted promptly in bringing the Hirondelle back on her course; but, owing to her quickness in answering the helm, she had swung round a couple of points when an involuntary movement, a sort of flinching on Ingersoll's part, caused her to change direction.

Peridot came aft, smiling and debonair. "We're all a bit shaken, Monsieur," he said, noting the increased pallor of Ingersoll's ordinarily rather delicate-looking face. "A tot of cognac, eh? That's what we want. What do you say, Monsieur?"

The bluff English skipper had caught the key word of the sentence, and the Breton's merry eye supplied a full translation.

"Good for you, my hearty!" said he. "Gimme one fair pull at a bottle of decent stuff now, an' I'll load you to the bung with the same once we're ashore."

CHAPTER IV
The Home-Coming

Peridot had stipulated that the Hirondelle should start on her homeward run "not a minute later than three o'clock." He had cast off from the wharf at Le Pouldu slightly before that hour, but the wreck of the Stella and its attendant circumstances—not least ebing the necessity enforced by the change of wind to take the deep-sea course after leaving the reef—cost a good deal of time. As a consequence daylight had almost failed before the bar of the Aven was crossed.

On Point d'ar Vechen, within thirty feet of the Port Manech Hotel, stands a tiny lighthouse which sheds a mild beam over the entrance to the estuary. It is essentially a harbour light. A broad white band covers the safe channel extending from Les Verres to l'Isle Verte, a red sector forbids the former, and a green one indicates the narrow inside passage between ree and mainland.

In crossing the bar, of course, each colour became visible in turn. Ingersoll had seen the light scores of times. Never a week passed in summer that he did not spend a day, or even three days, at sea with the fishermen. His studies of the sardine fleet, in particular, were greatly in request.

Yet on this night of nights, when the return to his beloved Pont Aven might well be reckoned the close of the most notable achievement of his whole life, he seemed to have collapsed physically and mentally. His eyes had a vacant look. Their wonted expression of somewhat sarcastic yet not intolerant outlook on life had fled for the hour, and he peered at the Breton and the sailor as though he had never before seen either. His slight but usually alert and wiry frame appeared to have shrunk. He remained deaf to Peridot's suggestion as to the brandy, and became curiously interested in the red gleam of the light house which came in sight just before the bar was reached.

The Breton imagined that his employer's bodily resources had been unduly taxed. Catching the eye of the yacht's skipper (whose name, by the way, was William Popple), he nodded toward the tiller, pointed straight ahead, and held up a finger. "Wan mineet," he said.

Captain Popple was not to be outdone in linguistic amenities. "Compreeny," he grinned, and took control.

TRAGEDIES OF FRANCE

Women Suffer But Work or For Victory

A fashions expert from a neutral country is moved to write from Paris as follows: "Outside a village near Rheims, which had been almost totally destroyed by shells, I saw a young peasant girl ploughing with two cows. Once the plough had been drawn by horses, but these the war had taken. Once the farm had been run by men. The war had taken these, too. Once she had had a father and a mother. The same shell which, entering through the window, had killed the father, had also torn the mother to pieces. Once she had a house and home. Not a single brick was left of her home now. Still, there she was ploughing with her two cows, to keep the farm, the home, the soil going, while above her head the shells were whistling.

"If you see a load of grain coming slowly across the rolling plain, you may be quite sure that the driver is a woman. If you see pepole working the fields between the ruined villages, you know that the workers are women. Sometimes they look up and follow with their eyes a motor car speeding by, full of men in uniform, or they pick up a bucket and go to the roadside, where an ambulance is approaching, and quench the thirst of the wounded. What do these women think of the war? Perhaps they do not think ver much. But work they certainly do. Let the men settle the question who is to blame, or who has brought on the war. It is useless to talk now. Now is the time not for wounding, but for the healing of wounds.

"KITCHENER LOVES ME"

Strange Songs and Moods of Britain's Stubborn Infantry

C. F. G. Masterman writes: They will, in one mood, sing mournful hymns with great relish. In another they will march into a burning city, with buildings crashing round them in fire and flame, to the cheerful lilt of "Here We Are Again." I have heard them finding satisfaction in the drone of a dolorous chant, the first line three repeated, in a crescendo of gloom. "Yes, Kitchener Loves Me, the Bible Tells Me So." I have heard them stepping out to the latest ragtime melody or the inspiring accents of "Who's Your Lady Friend?" Now grumbling, now applauding, with their own standards of excellence, in officers or leaders, one day determined to "chuck the whole thing up," the next dying to a man rather than surrender; peaceable in the main, but roused to dreadful wrath by the death of comrades or by "unfair fighting," they have been welded into that British infantry which has kept the line in France and Flanders, whose battles will read in the record of the future as the record of gigantic effort, of courage, endurance and pain. It is a "grand army" which will continue the work it has begun until that work is completed. It will never lack resolution of reinforcement. For it is an army of men who can encounter death with laughter, and go down singing into silence.

Why "Anuric" is an INSURANCE Against Sudden Death.

Before an Insurance Company will take a risk on your life the examining physician will test the urine and report whether you are a good risk. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you suffer from backache, sick-headache, dizzy spells, or the twinges and pains of lumbago, rheumatism and gout. The urine is often cloudy, full of sediment; channels often get sore and sleep is disturbed two or three times a night. This is the time you should consult some physician of wide experience—such as Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. Send him 10 cents for sample package of his new discovery, "Anuric." Write him your symptoms and send a sample of urine for test. Experience has taught Dr. Pierce that "Anuric" is the most powerful agent in dissolving uric acid, as hot water melts sugar; besides being absolutely harmless it is endowed with other properties, for it preserves the kidneys in its healthy condition by thoroughly cleansing them. Being so many times more active than lithia,—it clears the heart valves of any sandy substances which may clog them and checks the degeneration of the blood-vessels, as well as regulating blood pressure. "Anuric" is a regular insurance and life-saver for all big meat eaters and those who deposit lime-salts in their joints. Ask the druggist for "Anuric" put up by Dr. Pierce, in 50-cent packages.

STRENGTH AND BEAUTY

Come with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This is a blood cleanser and alterative that starts the liver and stomach into vigorous action. It then assists the body to manufacture rich red blood which feeds the heart, nerves, brain and organs of the body. The organs work smoothly like machinery running in oil. Russian Army Uses Century Old Route to Attack Erzerum

The advance of the Russian army in Armenia under Grand Duke Nicholas, military observers declare, is following the same general lines adhered to by the Russians in former campaigns. Russian forces penetrated into Armenia in 1829, 1855 and during the war of 1877-78. Erzerum was captured by the Russian General Paskiévitch on June 27, 1829. In this campaign the Russians under Paskievitch assembled in front of Kars and on June 13 Paskiévitch began his march on Erzerum at the head of an army numbering 14,000 men, with seventy pieces of artillery. This force was vastly outnumbered by the enemy, but the troops under Paskiévitch were highly trained and under splendid discipline.

The main Turkish army lay at Hassan Kolá, and an advanced corps of 20,000 men under Haghki Pacha held what was reported as a well-nigh impregnable position at Milli-dioux, on the northeast edge of the Saganloug Mountains, commanding the principal road leading from Kars to Hassan Kolá. Paskiévitch avoided this road, and hoped to turn the Turkish position through availing himself of an inferior road leading to Zevin. Owing to circumstances the events were reversed, but the results were the same in the end. Breaking camp on June 13 Paskiévitch, after sending a force under General Bourtseff along a main Kars-Hassan Kolá road to screen the movements of the main Russian force, advanced with the latter by night and covered a distance of twenty-six miles over rugged mountains. Snow was still on the slopes and the mountains for the most part were clothed in dense forest. Paskiévitch succeeded in reaching the rear of the Turkish position without the loss of a man. This feat of the Russians has been declared by General Monteith to be equal to that of Napoleon in crossing the Alps.

The Turks were dumfounded at finding the Russians in their rear, but, knowing that an additional Turkish army of 20,000 was coming up, Haghki held his ground. The Russians, owing to the strong defensive character of the place, were compelled to manoeuvre into position from the south and east, and in the meantime Paskiévitch, while holding the Turks in the fortifications, fought off the relieving Turkish army. The latter he practically annihilated in a night attack. Following this success the Turks' position held by Haghki Pacha was carried by storm on June 29, 1829. Haghki was made prisoner, his army of 20,000 men dispersed and a great quantity of spoils was taken. Owing to the blundering of one of the Russian generals, who was later relieved of his command, the great majority of the 20,000 Turks escaped capture. On June 21 Paskiévitch set forward for Erzerum, and, passing Hassan Kolá, which in spite of its strength offered no resistance, reached Erzerum on June 25 and on June 27 entered the latter place. Not in five centuries had the capital of Anatolia seen Christian soldiers within its gates.

In this fighting the native Mussulman horsemen who had been won over by Paskiévitch greatly distinguished themselves. Many of these people had a few months previously been in bitter revolt against the Russians, but the kind and liberal conduct of Paskiévitch attracted them to the Russian standard. The Mussulman cavalry dealt so severely with their coreligionists in the enemy ranks that the Russian officers had difficulty in saving the lives of any. It showed that the bond of the religion of Allah was not sufficient to unify its adherents against the Russians.

German Aviator Tells of Night Raid Over Italian City of Verona

Explosions from Earth Sound Like Rocks Falling on Tin Roof as Airmen Release Their Missiles and Flee Toward Their Austrian Base.

(Special Dispatch.)

BERLIN, Feb. 26.

A German lieutenant who recently flew over Italian cities and spread terror in Verona by dropping bombs on the city when its inhabitants were asleep, has written an article for the Neuen Wiener Journal in which he describes his exploit.

"Darkness had fallen on the streets of Taliedo," he writes, "as I emerged from the office house. The orchestra was playing some sentimental music which I hummed in accompaniment. The chauffeur was waiting for me in the automobile, and like a flash we were off racing like the wind for the hangar. When we arrived one of my men, with the usual German thoroughness, was examining every part of the aeroplane, screw, motor and rudder.

"'Is everything ready?' I asked.

"'Yes, Lieutenant; we can start in a quarter of an hour.'

"Another of the men was bringing my furs and motor glasses. I lighted a cigarette and waited.

"'Don't you think we will have wind?' I said to my assistant.

"'No, Lieutenant, not this time; I think it will be a very calm night.'

"It was quite moonlight, and the moon was almost at the full. We started. I love to fly, but I detest the constant spluttering of the motor, which prevents me from thinking. Despite the brightness of the moon everything about us was black. The higher we rose the darker and colder it got, suddenly we were in a cloud whose chill went through every bone in my body. I ordered my assistant to rise still higher so as to get away from this cloud. It is a peculiar sensation. One imagines one is in a vast ocean. We lose the sensation of moving through the air and have hallucinations, as if one were raging as when seized by a fever. I shouted to my assistant:—

"'Are you sure, Fritz, we have not lost our bearings?'

"I glanced at my watch, and from the time judged that we must be near Verona.

"'I believe that we can now slowly descend,' replied the assistant.

"Now began the delightful sensation of falling in the air. We were near the city which we were to terrorize by throwing down bombs. I looked through my glass. I saw nothing at first, but gradually my eyes showed me the environs of the city. The machine fell more and more and then the lights of the city became visible. It was Verona. Like tiny pearls the electric lights seemed to be strung out. It was a delightful sight. The steeples of the churches were in sharp contrast to the roofs of the houses.

"'Turn slowly to the right and go north,' I shouted to my assistant.

"It was in that direction where the arsenal and citadel of the city was located, and I had orders to throw bombs there. I saw people in the streets below that looked to me like a lot of ants.

"'Are you ready?' shouted Fritz.

"With trembling hands I reached for the first bomb, dropped it and quickly followed it by another. I called my glass to watch the result. We heard the explosions, sounding to us like rocks falling on a tin roof.

"Our machine quickly ascended as I dropped the remainder of the bombs.

"I looked down. The city showed no signs of life. Every light had been suddenly extinguished, and all was as quiet as death. Only to the left I noticed thick smoke rising, indicating that a fire had been started by our bombs. Several factory buildings were burning. I had the satisfaction of feeling that my mission had been crowned with success.

BRAVERY NOT CONFINED TO THOSE WHO HAVE NO FEAR, THE WAR SHOWS

(Special Dispatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 26.

A distribution of awards to the Russian army of the Caucasus which has operated successfully against Erzerum, shows the new estimate placed by Grand Duke Nicholas on deeds of military valor. Those who are not trained in methods of modern warfare may be surprised at what is to-day regarded as the best tests of courage and of service in the fighting force.

The old notion that still survives among laymen that the soldier who shows no symptoms of fear and who performs a spectacular feat of strength or courage in the enemy's presence is the hero to be admired. The ideal hero from the great Russian leader's viewpoint is different.

A few instances are given by Mr. Claude Anet, who has been making an investigation at the Russian front for the Petit Parisien. One of the men singled out for decoration was a man whose flesh could scarcely hide whose spirit dominated the flesh.

His name was Likatchoff, a tall young man with the simplicity of the Russian peasant. Being very near the enemy, Likatchoff was sent to the roof of a cabin in which the officers were eating their mid day meal. He was to act as observer.

There were two chimneys to the cabin and he hid behind one of them. He had not been long in position when a shell fell on the roof, passed through it and severed the officers below with debris. They were only slightly injured and went outside to see the result to the little building.

More than half the roof had been carried away. They called for Likatchoff, fearing that the poor fellow had been killed. He came forth from behind the only remaining chimney, his face pale and his body trembling with fear.

"Likatchoff," one of the officers said, "you are still alive? Why did you not come down?"

"How could I come down, sir?" replied the soldier. "I had not received the order to do so."

Another instance told an experience of a small patrol of Russians who had not seen the enemy all day and believed him far away. They were within a few hundred yards of a cemetery when a rifle volley from near at hand brought one-half of them to the ground. The rest of the patrol turned and fled.

When the main body of the regiment came up the colonel asked for volunteers to go out and bring in the wounded men. A sufficient number of volunteers went forward, but without much spirit, and each of them took hold of the wounded man nearest to him and came back as fast as possible.

Tikhone's Bravery.

One could still see, however, out on the snow the officer who had led the patrol. He had fallen wounded about a hundred yards from the cemetery.

A soldier named Tikhone decided to go out and bring him back. He crept forward on the snow, picking his ground as best he could. The others watched him anxiously. A few minutes had elapsed when Tikhone received a bullet would in the left arm.

He did not stop long. He was seen to make a sign of the cross and to go forward again. The colonel watched him through his glasses.

A fusillade was poured on him and a bullet struck him in the leg. He did not move and the watchers thought that he was dead; but after about ten minutes he made a new sign of the cross and dragged himself toward the officer.

He had almost reached the latter when another bullet struck him and he sprang into the air and fell flat. It was all over with him.

On the following day the cemetery was taken by torin and the officer was found dead from the cold and Tikhone near him with an arm and a leg broken and with his body torn by an explosive bullet. This deed was considered as especially heroic because it was performed, not in the heat of battle, when the soldier ceases to have conscious reflection regarding the danger of his movements, but in calm, cold blood, when death was faced slowly, step by step.

Cossack Colonel's Phrase.

Another instance brings with it a memorable phrase uttered by a Russian cavalry officer, which has made a considerable impression on French literary men, who describe it as of the kind which would have pleased the heart of a Murat or a Lasalle.

During a fight against strong adversary positions, the artillery having delivered its preparatory blow, the infantry had been sent out to a bayonet attack. To clinch the victory a charge by a regiment of Cossacks was decided upon.

The colonel of the regiment gave his orders and then, about twenty yards in front of his regiment, he started the gallop, brandishing his sabre in the air. As he galloped he turned round and saw that his regiment was following him exactly as it would on the parade ground, and full of pride he shouted back to his men: "Thanks, men, for keeping such splendid alignment."

The colonel remained on the field and with him a large part of the regiment, but the enemy's trenches were taken and the heroic phrase and gesture of the colonel remained to inspire courage in the hearts of those who fight for Russia.

It is interesting to note that in France also the deeds which are attracting most attention from military men, as instances of heroism, are not those which were generally regarded before the war as of the most heroic character. At this moment one of the heroes of the hour is Sergeant René Letur, of the 35th Infantry regiment, and his deed of heroism was an unafraid escape from the Germans

Cost of War Bears Heavily on German Families, Letters Relate

Extracts from Papers Found on Prisoners and Published in English Newspapers Show Lack of Meat, Milk, Eggs and Vegetables in Many Towns.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 26.

Much interesting light is shed on the discussion of the condition of the German people as a result of the war, by letters which have been found on Germans made captive by the allied forces. A number of the extracts which have to do with this question have been printed in the English newspapers of recent date. Tabulated with the town and date where they are given, a partial list of such comments follows:—

"Willingden, Dec. 12. The Red Cross has given up distributing milk to the women it was the only thing we had left, and now I must manage to buy it for I cannot deprive the children."

"Charlottenburg, Berlin, Dec. 14.—The servant's life is now terribly hard. She has to wait like girls three or four hours at the milk shop and in the end she will get only a quarter of a pound of butter."

"Cologne, Dec. 17.—Eggs are too dear and everything is beyond all reason in price. There are too many people waiting and not enough milk shops open so we have to wait for hours in the rain and snow."

"Hilauchen, Dec. 4.—We are now eating mainly potatoes and honey. There is very little butter. There are no vegetables."

"Undated.—I wanted to send you butter, lard and bacon, but it is impossible to get any."

"Kleinhausen, Oct. 2.—Rice costs one mark (24c.) a pound and oatmeal costs eighty pfennigs (19c.). Life is no longer possible. Things are getting worse."

"No Place, Dec. 15.—For eight weeks I have been unable to get any fat. It is terribly severe. If there is any in a shop you have literally to fight for it. The queues are so thick."

"Tangstedt, Dec. 5.—I am thinking of killing the pig before Christmas, for we are longing for meat and we cannot buy any."

"Tangstedt, Sept. 25.—Yesterday I went to the wife of the Prize Councilor and she gave me a sausage and milk tickets for three weeks."

"Undated.—Life is impossible. Pork costs one mark and seventy-five pfennigs (44c.) a pound and flour fifty pfennigs (12c.)."

"No place or date.—We cannot keep up our strength on dry bread and potatoes."

"Tangstedt, Oct. 29.—We have potatoes, and that is the principal thing. God grant that we do not die of starvation. Without the government allowance one has to go hungry and barefoot."

"Berlin, Dec. 5.—In Berlin there is nothing that money can buy—no more food, no more milk. Eggs cost thirty pfennigs (7c.) each."

"No Place, Oct. 18.—We can think ourselves lucky to have electric light. Every one else has to live in the dark, for there is no paraffine, and a candle costs twenty-five pfennigs (6c.)."

SOLDIERS OF TO-DAY REVIVE THE MACE

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 26.

English newspapers mention the fact that the mace, so popular with warriors in the days of knighthood, is not out of date in the present struggle. Both the German and the allied trench warriors are armed with a weapon which can be called nothing but a mace. It is a short, heavy club covered with spikes. The Belgians are credited as having used it to keep up on the enemy a fusillade under cover of darkness.

When an attacking party, small in number, enters an enemy's trench the success of their venture depends on their ability to avoid discovery by others in the same trench or an adjoining one. For this reason it is necessary to kill their opponents silently. The mace or spiked bludgeon makes this possible. By killing silently the few watchers in the trench attacked the enemy may gain a foothold for a larger attacking force.

WHY DRIVE IS DELAYED—So strong have the Allies made Salonika, or so little heart have the Bulgars left, that the long advertised Teuton drive has been delayed. Upper photo shows a column of soldiers advancing along a communication trench towards the front trenches, then under construction near Salonika. The lower picture shows Major-General Mackenzie Kennedy, Brigadier-General Hibbut and Brigadier-Major Cunningham, Staff Officers, on a tour of inspection.

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

HINTS WORTH TRYING.

Wash hair brushes and combs in warm water to which borax has been added. Borax removes the dirt, and acts as a disinfectant.

When food has been scorched, remove the kettle from the stove and put into a pan of cold water. In 15 minutes all suggestion of scorch will be gone.

To remove coffee stains pour water on the stain from a height, letting fall slowly on the stain.

To remove tea stains first soak the article in cold water, then pour on the boiling water slowly, from a height, as for a coffee stain.

To remove peach stains try alcohol, after rinsing with boiling water.

When doing your week's sweeping, if you will take down your lace curtains and portieres and lay them aside until through, and then place them up again, they will keep much cleaner.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S FOUR GORE SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

Fancy effects without much labor are always among the desired things, and in the model herewith shown we have such a design. This skirt has four gores. It is arranged so that a seam comes in the centre of the front. This front has the side edges sloped away at the top, leaving a long narrow V-shaped opening between the front and back. This is filled in with a gusset, while the edges of the back retain their normal form.

The front and sides of the skirt are fitted at the top, but the back is gathered straight across and the material forms a frill above the small strap belt. This frill may be omitted, when cutting, if desired, as it is merely an extension of the back. The lower edge of this skirt measures 2 yards in medium size.

By folding the material this skirt cuts exactly, without piecing, from 30 inch goods, but if cut on a straight layer of the fabric half that width will suffice and there will be no waste. The widths between 27 and 50 inches will leave pieces at the sides which will be useless.

Linen, piqué, washable corduroy and voile among cottons and serge, gabardine, cheviot and novelty woollens as well as certain types of silk can be employed in making this skirt.

The skirt pattern, No. 7,607, is cut in sizes 22 to 34 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 3¾ yards of 27 inch material or 2 yards of 50 inch.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

WILHELM II. AND SATAN ONE AND THE SAME THING

Remarkable Story in London Answers Proves That the German Emperor is Satan Incarnate

It has been argued that the Kaiser is insane. The ghastly line from which he has sprung—degenerate, diseased, homicidal—is adduced as proof that his mind, like his body, is twisted, misshapen, horrible. His childish peevishness, his bestial viciousness, his screaming, frothing fits of ungovernable temper, his fiendish love of wanton cruelty, his wild out bursts are brought forward as infallible signs that mentally and morally he is unbalanced. But he is not mad.

His mind is the cleverest, the most diabolically cunning, the wickedest, that the world has ever seen, or ever will see. Strip him of his mask; demand to know who it is that looks out through those cold, crafty, shifting eyes; bare his soul—his ego, his very self—and you would reel aghast. You would see Satan! For the Kaiser is Satan.

Satan—the proofs follow—has entered into him. He has sold himself, body and soul; he has parted with his human personality, bartered his present and his eternal future to Satan—God and mankind's common enemy. The bribe was that offered to Christ—the "kingdom of the world and the glory of them." World domination Deutschland uber Allies!

The Old Offer

"All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them, for that is delivered unto me and to whomsoever I will I give it. If thou, therefore, wilt worship me, all shall be thine."

He tried Christ, All Good, and failed; he tried one who was all bad and succeeded. In the Kaiser he found one mentally and morally debased yet of high position and unholy ambition. The Emperor as other men have done, might have fought against the inherited vileness that was in him. He chose to surrender to it.

And now, except that the shell of his earthly clay remains, there is no Kaiser. You doubt that Satan "can enter into a man?" Read, then, St. Luke xxii:3. "Then entered Satan into one Judas, surnamed Iscariot." That is proof enough. Just as God, to redeem the world, sent Christ into the world in human form, so now, Satan, following the same line, has launched a new incarnation and has inhabited a human body—the Kaiser's.

The War as Foretold

This war is not a war between the nations. It is the prophesied war between God and Satan. You may ask why has Satan waited so long. Forget not that it took God 6,000 years to find a Jewish maiden fit to mother the Babe of Bethlehem. What man but Satan in human form could have dreamed of much less perpetrated the awful barbarities of the War? What was their object? Why the ruin of God's creation.

This war is Satan's war and the Kaiser is Satan. It is Hell against Heaven, God versus Satan. The nations may recover financially, but not religiously for many generations. Satanic work? It was prophesied (2 Thess. ii.) that coincident with the fearful Armageddon of the nations there should be revealed the "Man of Sin," one that should claim to be as God. He should be visible on the earth in human form—Satan in the flesh. Remembering the Divine claims made by the Kaiser, his awful blasphemies, and his shattering of all laws, human and Divine, it is plain that he is the one to whom prophecy points. He is Satan incarnate. The piled-up logic of prophecy, facts, actions and deductions, prove it beyond doubt.

The Kaiser is Satan.

"MAHANISM" MUST WIN

Britain to-day does not stand alone; she is in alliance with three of the greatest sea powers of Europe, who are also among its greatest commercial powers, and then in the far Pacific there is Japan. These nations, drawn closer together during the storm and stress of these times, can by unanimous action shut out German merchant ships from their ports, incidentally checking a "dumping" campaign. Their right cannot be disputed. The might to suppo.. such action exists in the five great navies; the justification for such a policy of exclusion, even after peace is declared, and until such time as Germany has purchased her salvation, is to be found in the blood-stained story of the enemy's treachery, craftiness and barbarism. The massacre of Belgium and the submarine piracy demand the most determined, ruthless measures. The allies must adopt a Cromwellian policy, and prove that in a contest between "Mahanism and Mattheism," the former runs with—London Daily Telegraph.

HAD SALT RHEUM ON HANDS.

Could Not Do Her Work.

Eczema or salt rheum is one of the most common of all skin diseases. It may centre itself on any part of the body, but there are certain places where it most usually begins, such as the bends of the elbows, the backs of the knees, the groove behind the ears, the scalp, on the palms of the hands, between the fingers, or on the soles of the feet.

It is, as a rule, not dangerous, but is very irritating and annoying to the sufferer on account of the terrible itching and burning sensation it causes.

It is impossible to eradicate this trouble from the system by external applications, as it is caused by the blood being in an impure state. What you need is a good blood cleansing medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. A medicine that will drive out all the foulness from the blood and make it pure and rich.

Mrs. Adelard Theriault, Theriault, N.B., writes: "Some time ago I was troubled with salt rheum on my hands, and it was so bad I could not do my work. I tried several medicines, but they all failed to help me. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle, and before I had taken it my hands were better. I am not afraid to recommend B.B.B. to anyone."

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

IN RUSSIAN BOOKSHOPS

War Stimulates Reading—No More German Translations There

Writing of the present literary activities in Russia, Mr. Stephen Graham says that authors and publishers are experiencing a stimulus similar to that felt in England. There is "always a lively crowd picking and choosing new books in the booksellers' shops," the bulk of these new books having to do apparently with the war. There are five or six collections of war stories, contributed to by leading novelists, and these seem to be especially popular. Besides this type of current literature "almost every one who has given a lecture on the war seems to have printed it in pamphlet form, and the reader can choose from scores of little books," most of which are devoted to a discussion of "the essential Christianity embodied in the Russian idea" upheld in the great conflict. The old partiality for translations from the German has quite disappeared. Bernhardi, Treitschke, and Nietzsche have not aroused the same interest in Russia that they have in England—although Nietzsche is an old favorite in the former country.

STEERING TORPEDOES

New Device Enables Operator on Shore to Assist

A battleship can, when it has a fair warning, dodge an ordinary torpedo, for once it has started it keeps on in a straight line instead of following its intended victim. A new torpedo, however, can be steered from the shore, so that it follows the ship however much the latter dodges. Moreover, the weapon can be exploded from the shore at just the proper moment. This new weapon is driven and steered by electricity, which is supplied through a fine wire wound round a shaft in the middle of the torpedo. The wire is connected with the firing station and unwinds as the torpedo goes forward. By means of an ingenious little pump set in the stern of the torpedo a jet of water is thrown above the surface of the sea at regular intervals, so marking the course of the weapon to the operator on shore. At night its course is noted by the flashing of an electric light.

RECIPE TO CLEAR A PIMPLY SKIN

Pimples are Impurities Seeking an Outlet Through Skin Pores.

Pimples, sores and boils usually result from toxins, poisons and impurities which are generated in the bowels and then absorbed into the blood through the very ducts which should absorb only nourishment to sustain the body.

It is the function of the kidneys to filter impurities from the blood and cast them out in the form of urine, but in many instances the bowels create more toxins and impurities than the kidneys can eliminate, then the blood uses the skin pores as the next best means of getting rid of these impurities, which often break out all over the skin in the form of pimples.

The surest way to clear the skin of these eruptions, says a noted authority, is to get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts, and take a table-spoonful in a glass of hot water each morning before breakfast for one week. This will prevent the formation of toxins in the bowels. It also stimulates the kidneys to normal activity, thus coaxing them to filter the blood of impurities and clearing the skin of pimples.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes, and lemon juice, combined with lithia. Here you have a pleasant, effervescing drink which usually makes pimples disappear; cleanses the blood and is excellent for the kidneys as well.

BOARD OF CENSORS FOR MOVING PICTURES
for the Province of Quebec

MONTREAL, 7th December 1915

Managing Editor,
Montreal Daily Star, Montreal.

Dear Sir,—

I am pleased to inform you that after a close inspection of the series of War Pictures which you intend to give to the public, the Board of Censors of Moving Pictures for this Province has come to the conclusion that no better object lesson of the gigantic conflict now raging in Flanders and in the Vosges could be had.

There is a sense of reality in the battlefield, in the trenches, which is simply marvellous. The scene of the artillery duel, during the great Champagne drive, is unique. One can almost hear the famous "75" as it thunders. And it really looks as if the 21,000 Boches, gathered in the concentration camp, after the drive, were glad of being made prisoners.

The various personages, His Majesty King George, President Poincare, Lord Kitchener, General Joffre, the Prince of Wales, M. Millerand, Sir John French, cannot be seen to better advantage.

The people of this coutnry will realize, as they see Great Britain and France thus fraternizing on the battlefields, how sincere, how deep is the Entente Cordiale.

The perfect organization of the various army corps, which are seen as they march along, preceded by scouts on land and in the air, gives the vivid impression that the Allies will soon rid the world of the Berlin military caste.

Believe me,
Dear Sir,
Yours sincerely,

L. J. Lemieux

FIGHTING NEAR VERDUN CONTINUES WITH SEVERE LOSSES FOR ENEMY

Bombardments and Attacks on the Part of German Troops Continued All Yesterday Evening North of Verdun ---Germans Succeeded in Reaching Deuaumont Village Where Fighting Continues With Ferocity---Severa Fruitless Endeavours of the Enemy Were Repulsed ---Submarind Destroyed by a British Patrol Boat.

NEWS FROM THE VARIOUS FRONTS

PARIS, March 3.—(French official).—Bombardments and attacks on the part of German troops continued all yesterday evening north of Verdun, says a War Office report this afternoon.

Fighting was conducted with redoubled violence. Near Douaumont several fruitless endeavours of the enemy were repulsed with cruel losses for them. Nevertheless the Germans succeeded in reaching Douaumont village, where fighting continues with ferocity. The village of Vaux was also attacked by the Germans, but these advances were checked by the French fire, and the Germans compelled to retire, leaving a great number of dead.

The bombardment continued with great intensity yesterday evening in the Woevre district.

Severe Fighting is Renewed at Verdun

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, March 3.—The renewal of severe fighting around Verdun, reported in official despatches to-day, convinced the French military experts that the present German offensive is the "real thing." German dead are now strewn about the Verdun woods and hills until the fields, from a distance, seem to be covered with a strange, grey green growth. Not alone because the Teutons have suffered enormous losses, but for other reasons, Paris critics do not believe the Verdun attack a feint. The situation on the Verdun sector was described by a competent authority to-day as satisfactory, though no secret was made of the fact that it is still serious. It is considered certain the Germans have not launched such a vast undertaking with the intention of giving up after only a partial check. The French commanders are ready to receive the renewed German attacks in a way the enemy will never forget, it is stated to-day, but, despite heavy losses, the Kaiser must strike now with his maximum strength, it is held, or German prestige and the German army morale will suffer. In the presence of such an immense possibility, Paris waits, confident and calm.

TWO ZEPPELINS ARE WRECKED IN BELGIUM

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, March 3.—Two Zeppelins were wrecked in Belgium on Feb. 21, according to a despatch from Amsterdam to-day. "One of the Zeppelins, returning from the front, evidently was hit by enemy artillery," said the despatch. "It fell at Ezhezce, damaging a house and injuring 18 children." Another fell at Maisnault. The debris was loaded on a train, bound for Cologne.

More German Ships Seized By Portugal

Examiner Special:

BOMBAY, March 3.—The German ships interned at Mormugao, in the Portugeuse colony of Goa, have been seized by the Portugeuse authorities, decked out with Portugeuse flags, and their crews taken to an internment camp at Panjim.

UNITED STATES SENATE IS BEHIND WILSON

Special to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The Senate to-day formally gave notive to the world that it stands behind President Wilson. By a vote of sixty-eight to fourteen, the Senate voted down Senator Gore's resolution to warn Americans to keep off armed ships. Amid dramatic scenes, upparalleled since the United States declared war against Spain, the Senate tabled Gore's resolution. Gore's amendment, that the killing of any American citizen by German submarines, would be a cause of war, was, according to the blind Senator's explanation, made later an attempt to make the administration express itself on that issue, which he claims is the real one.

SUBMARINE REPORTED DESTROYED

LONDON, March 3.—Though they refused full confirmation, the Admiralty officials indicated that the reports that the submarine U 27, which sank the Arabic, was later destroyed by a British patrol boat.

LIFE AT FRONT AS SHOWN BY THE MOVIE CAMERA

BIG GUNS AT WORK

A large crowd gathered at the Grand Opera House last night to see the Examiner's presentation of the French Government's official war pictures, "Fighting in France," and it is safe to say that every one left the theatre with a clearer conception of the conditions at the front. Although the Ontario censors had deleted a portion of the films as being too pathetic to be shown to an audience, and as a result some of the thrilling action scenes were lost, yet enough was shown to give the audience an idea of what modern warfare is like. Last night's audience saw every variety of gun in action, from the French naval guns and the famous 75's, down to the trench mortor and the catapults for hurling grenades. They saw treheches and dug-outs, bomb-proof shelters for the artillerymen and barb wire entanglements. They saw the effects of the high explosives in the battered down trees and shattered ground of the Champagne district, and the procession of German prisoners to the rear, as well as the arrival of ambulances full of wounded from the Champagne battle. They saw such famous personages as King George, King Albert of Belgium, President Poincare of France, Lord Kitchener, General Joffre and other leaders at the battle front, and accompanied Kitchener and Joffre in a tour of the French trenches. They saw a review of some of the famous French battalions, including the Alpine Chasseurs, and watched the latter at work in the battle of Metreral, with German shells bursting only 100 feet away from the camera. They saw the famous Hartsmannsweilerkopf, where for over a year the French and Germans have been battling for possession of the hill. This portion of the film showed the French batteries at work on one side of the hill and the shells dropping among the German positions on the other slopes.

As an educational factor the pictures cannot be rated too high. Last night's audience realize what trench warfare is like, and are in a better position to realize what our gallant Allies, the French, are doing.

The pictures will be shown at the Grand to-night and to-morrow night, with a matinee to-morrow.

CHANGE OF PROGRAMME AT ROYAL THEATRE

The Royal Theatre has an entire change of pictures for to-day. Owing to the Canadian Express Company not delivering promptly the advertising posters on the front of the theatre, posters on the front o fthe theatre, but the film arrived and the change of programme will be made as usual to-day. The posters went through to Montreal by mistake of the Express Company.

Ontario's Machine Guns Are Being Manufactured

Answering a question in the Ontario Legislature yesterday with reference to the delivery of Ontario's share of machine guns, some 600, Hon T. W. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer, stated that after the Province had paid in October the first $130,000 of its contribution he received a letter from the Hon. A. E. Kemp, M. P., which stated it was expected the delivery of 2,500 guns would be completed by the end of February. "Since the end of February I have not had an opportunity of asking if all were delivered, but I understand delivery has been going on," said the Provincial Treasurer.

The Armouries will undoubtedly be crowded to-morrow night, when Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst will deliver an address in the interests of the 93rd Battalion. Commencing yesterday all the guards provided by the 93rd Battalion will be mounted at 5:30 p.m. daily with the exception of the Nassau guard. Hitherto the barrack guard has been mounted at 9 a.m. each day.

A UNITED STAND FOR A DRY ONTARIO

REQUEST OF M.O.H. FOR AN INCREASE WAS REFUSED

By a Vote of 5 to 4 Council Decided To Take No Action With Dr. Amys' Communication for Recompense for Extra Work

DETAILED HIS DUTIES

Dr. Amy's request to the Council for an increase in his salary as Medical Officer of Health from $800 to $1,000 a year was refused last night by the Committee of the Whole, in an amendment by Ald. Saunders, seconded by Ald. Evans, that no action be taken. Aldermen Stratton, Weir and Edgar voted for the amendment.

Ald. Duncan had proposed a motion seconded by Ald. Dobbin, that Dr. Amys be granted $100 as a bonus in recognition of the additional public duties it was stated he had been called on to perform during the past year. Ald. Langford was the only absentee. He had not returned from Ottawa.

Dr. Amys mentioned some of the details of his daily rounds as M. O. H. He incidentally asserted that it would not be long until Peterborough would have to engage a Medical Officer of Health to devote all his time to the public's welfare. In addition to the duties prescribed by the Health Act, Dr. Amys referred to his work as Superintendent of the Isolation Hospital, attending firemen injured while on duty, etc. The ordinary drugs which he had supplied free and had cost about 30 and 35 cents a pound had soared to $5, $7, $10 and $12 a pound, the supply being affected by the war. The numerous duties of quarantining were also mentioned. Dr. Amys remarked that he received from the city nine cents an hour. He was called out both day and night. The Board of Health had saved the city between $700 and $800 largely through the Doctor's close attention to indigent patients. He could not do the work of last year for $800. He could easily give the city $1,600 or $2,000 worth of service. He would have to resign it for $800 if he was expected to perform his duties as conscientiously as last year.

The attitude of the authorities, Dr. Amys stated, tended to parallel the steps by which school trustees were forced to raise salaries to their teachers.

After the Doctor had retired, Ald. Edgar, quoting Mayor Duffus' expressed determination to keep down expenses, said that he felt Dr. Amys had good grounds in asking for an increase, but that the present was an inopportune time.

Ald. Duncan—"Would it pay us to make a change for $100?"

Ald. Saunders—"I'm sure it would."

Ald Duncan said that as Chairman of the Board of Health he had been around a great real with Dr. Amys and knew of the additional work he was performing. The Council might offer him $100 as compensation for the time he had spent in performing these added duties. However no action was taken.

Practically No Divergence of Opinion in the Speeches of the Two Leaders in the Legislature Yesterday.

THE PREMIER'S ADDRESS

TORONTO, March 3.—On the principle of prohibition there was practically no divergence of opinion expressed in the speeches of the two leaders in the Legislature yesterday on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. "The Government has come to the conclusion that the time has arrived when further legislation might be enacted without introducing greater evils than those we are attempting to destroy," was the declaration of Premier Hearst, while Mr. Rowell assured the House: "I am prepared to cordially support the Government in carrying out the proposals they submit if these proposals are, as I understand they are to be, as outlined in the speech from the throne." The leader of the Opposition suggested as an alternative method—though failing that he would co-operate with the Government in their proposals as he understood them—of enacting legislation, to go into effect at the earliest practicable date, which would completely wipe out all hotel, shop and club licenses, and would continue in force during the period of the war and for a reasonable period thereafter, during the period of reconstruction, and that it should not be repealed except by the vote of the people, to be taken at a later date. Mr. Rowell also under took, if a bill as he understood the proposal in the Speech from the Throne was submitted to the people, to join the Premier and other members of the Government in going before the people and asking for endorsement and ratication of the measure.

A Call for Sacrifice.

Premier Hearst, who spoke from a written address, also reached a lofty plane. He emphasized the call now "a most earnest and special one for service and sacrifice by everyone in the Province," and declared that "every reasonable step should be taken at this time of stress and strain that would add to the strength of the country and would conserve our resources in every way possible for the great task." The steady advance in local option until there were now nearly two "dry municipalities for every "wet" municipality in Ontario had, in his judgment, helped in a marked degree to prepare the ground for any further advance in temperance legislation.

REID'S RE-OPENING

Formal Reception in Their Newly Remodelled Premises, March 10-11

The formal opening of Reid's newly remodelled store is announced for Friday and Saturday of next week, March 10th and 11th. Mr. Stewart, the buyer, is now in New York selecting the new Spring styles in ladies' gowns, suits, coats, waists, etc., and the promise is that the trend of fashion will be demonstrated by a display of the authorative modes of fashion designers.

The Reid Store, which has been undergoing new decorative effects and fittings for the past month, it is expected, will open with a dashing swing, as the aim has been to reproduce some of the interior features of Broadway's ladies' fashions parlours. The interior has been entirely transformed, of which more particulars will be given later. But on the 10th and 11th March the ladies are assured that Reid's will be ready with a full showing of the season's 1916 Spring styles, the first glimpse of which it is expected will reveal the very latest whims of Dame Fashion.

FRIDAY, MARCH 3, 1916

MRS. PANKHURST'S REPENTANCE

In these times we see reversal of conditions and attitudes and relations; and when the change is beneficent the individual concerned should be judged charitably at least. A news despatch states that the celebrated—or as her sterner judges would say—notorious Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the British suffragette leader, was a visitor to the House of Commons, Ottawa, where she was received with semi-royal honours, having been given a special mark of favour in the form of a seat "on the floor of the House." There does not seem to be any reasonable reason why Mrs. Pankhurst's position should be severely criticised now. There are those of her critics, and some of them in Peterborough, who do not agree with Isaac Watts, in a line of his famous hymn:

"While the lamp holds out to burn
The vilest sinner may return."

Mrs. Pankhurst has been violent in her methods on behalf of woman suffrage, a priestess of the Teuton cult of frightfulness. She may have been a society leper, but she has not been a leopard; she has changed her spots; she has repented; and in proof of the bona fides of her recantation, she has brought forth, and is bringing forth, "fruits meet for repentance." She has dropped her window-smashing propaganda and is now doing her share to smash the Kaiser. She is using her well known eloquence for the cause of Serbian relief; but to-morrow night she will try to reinforce the 93rd battalion by a recruiting speech in the armouries. While we may not entirely endorse Mrs. Pankhurst one should not do violence to the principle of British fair play and condemn her unheard. Therefore we should go and hear her at the armouries to-morrow night.

IRELAND'S FRIENDS AND FOES.

A despatch from New York, to be found on this page, telling of the action of two important Irish societies, shows that the Irish people worth considering have come to the proper understanding of where their true interests lie and form a proper estimation of their true friends. The meaning of the action of the societies mentioned, is condemnation of the long-time curse of Ireland, the agitator. The Irish are the most warm-hearted and unsuspicious and impulsive race on earth. Their virtues in this regard make them an easy prey to the designing. Ireland has had a hard history, but it is a question whether she has suffered more from her pretended and false friends, or from those she rightly regarded as enemies to her rights and interests. Irishmen of sense and principle have come to have a keener eye for shams, and the action of these in New York showed that the anti- British rallies, held in the United States, and associated with the name of Ireland, were engineered, not by their friends, but in the interests of the real enemies of Ireland and humanity; and did not represent the sentiments of the mass of the Irish, who in this war are in the ranks of those fighting for liberty and human right. At this time the important part of the protests made is the emphasis they give to the bitter disappointment of Germany over the action and attitude of the Irish in this war. Germany went into the fight with the full confidence that if Britain struck the Irish would strike — would revolt against British rule. We know what happened. The Irish have been the strongest element of success of the British cause. The German element in the United States are also authoritatively informed of the fact that the Irish wherever they are, at home or abroad, are heart and soul in sympathy with allied nations engaged in crushing Germany, and that they will not be allies in the work of German plotting and scheming in the United States. In this war for liberty Ireland and the Irish have been one of the bulwarks of the British cause, and have do practically and gallantly, and whole-heartedly, identified themselves with the rest of the United Kingdom, that to express the real condition of unity we might revise our geographical nomenclature, and instead of saying "Great Britain and Ireland," we should say and write "Greater Britain." Ireland has been struggling for freedom for centuries, and now that it has come, it was the hope of a fool that led Germany to expect for a moment that Ireland could have the slightest sympathy with the German cause; or would not fight as she has done, and is doing, for the preservation of the liberty she has gained, and will be confirmed to her, as will be a like liberty to the rest of the world, by the triumph of the couse of the allied nations.

JOURNALISTIC HYSTERIA.

Our evening contemporary shows a kind solicitude in the welfare of the Examiner— in putting us right or putting us in the wrong. It accuses us of forecasting the big blessing of the defeat of the British Columbia government, and with basing the opinion of the defeat on a cabinet minister's defeat. Well wasn't that good ground for a prediction that in the case of the Bowser government a general election might bring defeat? If Premier Hearst took into his cabinet one of the alphabetical Conservative contingent in Toronto and he was defeated on seeking re-election by nearly five thousand majority, he would be a rash gambler that would wager much on the government's chance at a general election.

We are also accused of prejudging the Saskatchewan situation and assuming that the Scott government will clear its skirts. The Examiner assumed nothing of the kind, but merely said that "so far as the investigation had gone there didn't seem to be much proof of the charges"—on the first day's evidence, which was all that was at the writing available for reference.

The Review seems inclined to "go the whole hog." The Examiner is also arraigned for advocating the basic principle upon which the "N.P." is founded, protection of home industries. We did not advocate any specific form of applying this principle, only the general principle of adopting a policy, not necessarily in war time, of the home manufacture of all our resources capable of being so treated. The Review grows indiggrant in this way:

> The Examiner would now place an embargo on pulp wood. That means, in effect, that the settler in New Ontario whose sole cash income during the winter is derived from the sale of spruce and poplar that grows on his farm, is to be deprived of what is now his best market. He can starve to death for all The Examiner cares, while he waits until Canadian capitalists erect paper plants and get ready to buy his timber.

This is nonsense. For years, and time after time, the Examiner has been advocating the principle of home manufacture of Canadian raw resources in the interests of employment of labour and capital, and of the most effective national development. We had no dark designs on the ready cash of the New Ontario farmer, nor wished to deprive him of his "best market" for pulp wood. Couldn't he just as well sell it to a home paper mill as ship it to the United States? He might get a shade less for it; but that's nothing; that would be in the spirit of a policy the Review in 1911 held up both hands for—that of depriving the Canadian farmer of "his best market." The Review must not think that it is the only journal that has an interest in the success of our share of the war. There are many other things that interfere with Canada doing her best in this war that the Review might better attack than a little abstract reference to the necessity of preparing to adopt a policy of Canada for the Canadians. It might, for one thing of many, back up Sir George Foster, and Lady Foster, too, in denunciation of the "patronage list" that has cost Canada many millions and weakened her war efficiency.

Folly and Tragedy of the Verdun Failure

If, as now appears, the German offensive at Verdun, has been brought to an end, it has done more than any other single battle in the whole history of the war to advertise the hopelessness of the German cause. Germany has been proclaiming its overwhelming military superiority and its power to carry out an unending succession of victories over the Allies. In order to place its claims beyond all doubt, it started the offensive at Verdun. The objective was perfectly plain to all the world. The Germans meant to take Verdun. For months they had been piling up cannons and ammunition and reserves in preparation for the assault; for months they had been building strategic railways all converging on the Verdun front. And then they launched their great attack. They smashed up the French first-line trenches with such an appalling hail of shells as has never before converged on one spot. They followed this up by launching men in vast herds to overwhelm the French by sheer numbers and weight.

And what happened? The French "stooped to conquer." They withdrew from the cannonswept front, and calmly waited for the Germans to come up. When the Germans came, the French opened up a cannonade from their famous "seventy-fives" that put the Germans' cannonade into the shade. They literally swept the ground with a pestilence of death. Against their fire the mighty German legions—the ill-spared hosts of a fast-thinning army—wavered, broke and melted away. To-day finds the result of the most furious, most desperate battle the Germans ever fought a defeat of colossal proportions for Germany. Verdun, the object of all their vast expenditure of men and munitions, stands unconquered, though the road to it be paved with the corpses, thick as autumn leaves, of the finest sons of the German race.

It is said to-day that the Kaiser and the Crown Prince have left the front. Well they may. Such a vast graveyard as they have filled with German corpses during the past ten days, all to no purpose, is enough to make the hearts of even these arch-murderers, these slayers of women and babies, sick with horror, and to fill their minds with ghastly forebodings. No pious congratulations to what he calls "our good old God" will go up from the Kaiser over Verdun.—Montreal Herald.

A Journalistic View of the Dominion Business Tax

We have shown how the new business tax disregards entirely the accumulated wealth of the country and puts a burden on business enterprise, thus allowing the non-producer to get off free, while the producer is taxed. We now come to the disturbance to business, manufacturing, wholesale and retail, due to the fact that the individual or corporation with less than $50,000 capital employed escapes the tax, yet a competition because he may have over $50,000 capital, has to pay. It will destroy business incentive and ambition, because it will not pay a small business man to develop and extend his business when he knows if he steps over the $50,000 capital mark he will have to pay the tax.

Mining is especially hurt by the legislation. Every pound of ore taken out of a precious metal mine is capital taken away, and when the mine is exhausted of its ore there is nothing left but a hole in the ground and a useless plant. And so it is that the annual returns from mines are properly looked upon as part dividends and part capital. Generally speaking, a mine that returns less than 25 p.c. per annum on its capital is not worth investing in. The Finance Minister, however says 7 1-2 p.c. interest return is sufficient limitation, and he proposes to take a quarter of anything over that.

Business will be discouraged by the new law. People with money to invest will naturally invest in mortgages, real estate, bonds, or other securities not affected by the tax, especially as the principle of the tax being once admitted, there is no telling how far the Government will go.

One of its effects may be that capital will be driven out of the country, and it certainly will have a strong tendency to retard, if not prevent, the much needed inflow of capital from the United States.

There is no incentive to United States business houses to start up in Canada, when they can distribute the goods from the United States and escape the tax on their profits.

It will be noted that professional men are not touched, although in many cases they earn handsome incomes.

If the tax is collected with fairness and uniformity an army of officials will be necessary.

The most dangerous feature is the tremendous power it places in the hands of the Government. Under the act the Finance Minister has power to settle all questions in regard to the proper amounts for depreciation, reserve, contingencies and salaries, before any profits are determined. This means absolute inquisitorial power over every business in Canada, and exceedingly dangerous powers of decision. In the hands of unscrupulous politicians such powers would be a positive menace of the worst kind.

Quite the most absurd feature of the taxation is that it is made retroactive from August 1st, 1914. Think for a moment what that means! Dividends have been paid to all sorts and conditions of people since 1914, most of which have no doubt been legitimately expended by the recipients, and now the Government comes down under them for a share of it. Could anything be more unfair?—Montreal Herald.

Saxon Troops Said to Demand Early End to the Struggle

PARIS, March 3.—With their Verdun offensive the Germans are taking up their campaign against France just where they left off at the battle of the Marne.

Verdun is the apex of those eastern citadels which have always shackled the German oqensive through Belgium, and until that apex is smashed any attack towards the interior of France is exposed to being bitten off by our eastern jaws. Any attack on Paris is taken in the rear by our armies about those fortresses.

I do not know whether it is true that General von Deimling told the Fifteenth Corps that this was to be the last anti-French offensive, but, true or untrue, the assertion expresses an exact verity.

Saxons Are Balking.

Germany has arrived at that point where she is bound to make up her mind to use her remaining resources. I learn from the most reliable source that during the last visit of the King of Saxony to his troops the officers surrounded him and told him the war must be quickly finished and that the soldiers would be unable to undertake a new campaign.

The King of Saxony reported to the Kaiser the pressure which his own troops were bringing to bear upon him. The confederate States were beginning to get restless. Therefore the Kaiser ordered an offensive on the French front.

It is noteworthy that the troops who made the greatest sacrifices at Verdun were Prussians, Pomeranian, Silesian and Rhenish soldiers fell by thousands. The Prussians are naturally the supreme champions of Prussian militarism. Verdun has capital importance when regarded from the viewpoint of the whole situation.

"Let Them Attack."

Every hour, every minute, decides the result of this last, desperate gambler's throw. The Kaiser stands involved, not only before history, but before his own people. He continues to lead his people to butchery. To save himself he orders a supreme massacre.

But the hour has struck. Verdun brings no luck to the Prussian dynasty.

To von Deimling's alleged assertion that this is the last offensive I will add the statement recently made to me by one of our greatest leaders: "It is better so. Let them attack. We are ready for them."

PRIVATE ROY SPEERS GIVEN A WRIST WATCH

The First Recruit From The Milkmen's Association Handsomely Honoured

The Milkmen's Association of Peterborough has contributed its first recruit to the cause, and approved of him in a special way. Mr. Roy Speers, has enlisted in the 93rd battalion, and at Coleman's restaurant, his fellow members on Wednesday evening honoured him with a banquet and presented him with a beautiful wrist watch, besides saying a good many nice things about the young warrior, he well deserves.

A large gathering of the members of the association was present. After the banquet Mr. Walter Hooper, a veteran milk purveyor, and honourary member of the Association, took the chair. He called upon Mr. W. L. White to read the following address:

Mr. Roy Speers—

While we are sorry to lose your presence amongst us, we are glad and proud that you have taken the manly and patriotic step of enlisting in the 93rd to help fight the battles of the Empire. While Canada is sending to the firing line the cream of our young manhood, we feel sure that you will be among the best and do credit, by your soldierly conduct, not only to our home battalion, but also to the splendid army of Canadians now doing battle for our rights.

We have nearly all, seen you grow to manhood, and we are sure that you will take into your new sphere of activity the same high principles of duty you have shown in your every day civilian life.

Kindly accept, on behalf of the Milkman's Association of Peterborough, this wrist watch, as a token of our esteem and a reminder, whenever you consult it, of your friends in Peterborough, whose prayers and good wishes go with you across the seas. Good luck and a safe return.

The presentation of the watch was made by Mr. Albert Hunter president of the Association, and Private Speers made a neat reply of thanks and appreciation. Then followed a capital impromptu programme of congratulatory speeches, complimentary of the high character and robust manhood of the guest of the evening, together with songs and recitations. A delightful evening was brought to a close with "God Save the King," a prayer which one gallant member of the Peterborough Milkman's Association will do his bit to have answered.

NEW YORK IRISHMEN DENOUNCE AGITATORS

NEW YORK, March 1 — Denouncing as a "violent attack on American neutrality" a proposed anti-British demonstration of Irishmen to be held here March 4 and 5, the Executive Committee of the American Irish Societies, which includes the Ancient Order of Hiberniana and the United Irish League of America, adopted resolutions for the purpose of "setting the race right with the people of the United States."

The resolutions assert that the Irish in Ireland are better judges of their rights, policies and duties than "any number of professional Irishmen in America, or descendants of exiled Irishmen in America, whose sole idea on the Irish question is the legacy of hate inherited from the days of oppression, and who are ignorant of or shut their minds to the happy change that has come over the Green Isle since the rule of democracy has been substituted for that of feudalism."

"The Irishmen in Ireland are not contract breakers," the resolutions continue. "Now that home rule is granted them, they are keeping their part of the contract. They have sent 142,000 of their sons voluntarily to the front, and are adding to that force at the rate of 1,000 a week.

"The Irish in Ireland will not soon forget the fate of Belgium, nor their centuries-old friendship for that distracted country of France, even if some of our long-distance Irish patriots on this side of the Atlantic choose to ignore them."

Thirty-six Irish societies of New York were represented.

As a preventive against fire Austrian laws require dwellings and business houses to be built throughout of solid materials.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Girl From the West

She Tamed the Haughty Youth From the East.

By OTHO S. SENGA.

Paul Alger looked firmly into Mrs. Elliott's face.

"You don't realize what you're asking, Aunt Ruth," irritatedly.

"I'm not asking," calmly. "I'm simply telling you what I expect of you. The girl will be here tomorrow. My will is made with these plans in view. If you don't fall in with them you're disinherited absolutely; that's all."

Alger rose.

"Aunt Ruth, you've been more than a mother to me, and I'd like to do everything I can to please you, but this is expecting too much. I must reserve the right to select my own wife."

Mrs. Elliott was stubbornly silent, and after a moment the young fellow said earnestly, "Aunt Ruth, give the money to the girl if you want to, but don't let her come between you and me!"

"Don't talk to me, Paul," impatiently. "I shall give it to you two—together or not at all!"

"Who is this girl," Alger demanded with heat, "that she should be thrust upon me in this style?"

"She is the daughter of my husband's brother. When this girl and my Frederick were little children the brothers promised each other that the children should marry when they were old enough. Frederick died, and after your mother's death I adopted you. You have taken Frederick's place in everything else. You must in this. Promise, Paul!"

"It is utterly impossible!" firmly.

"Paul," temptingly, "she is very pretty."

Alger smiled and shook his head.

Music was Alger's passion.

"Yes?" indifferently.

"Yes," emphatically. "She plays the violin."

"What insuperable presumption!" impatiently. "A girl from the wild west, brought up on a cattle ranch, you said. Doubtless she can ride a broncho or lasso a steer, but she shouldn't meddle with the violin. She probably never heard of Bach or Mendelssohn and wouldn't know a sonata from a sandwich. Aunt, I can fancy her bringing her violin in her arms and playing for the delectation of the other passengers in the Pullman. Ugh!"

"You refuse, then?"

"Most decidedly."

"Very well," icily. "I accept your decision as final."

The next day Alger from his desk in the library saw the girl as she entered the adjoining room, where Mrs. Elliott waited to greet her. She was tall and graceful, with a high bred air of ease that surprised him. Her voice was clear and well modulated.

"Upon my word," he muttered, "I expected her manner of speech to be a cross between a cowboy's yell and an Indian warwhoop."

He saw the servant come in with a violin case.

"Will madam have this in the music room or"—

"Oh, no; here." And Vera held out her hands.

"You brought this yourself, Vera?" Mrs. Elliott's tone held the slightest suggestion of annoyance.

"In my arms literally," laughed Vera.

Alger in his dim corner smiled.

Vera gently placed the case on the floor and lifted out the instrument as tenderly as a mother lifts her babe.

"Oh, Aunt Ruth," fervently, "when you see it you will understand—my beautiful violin!"

She clasped it to her bosom with a gesture of tenderness. The beauty of the girl, the unaffected grace of her pose and her evident artistic appreciation stirred Alger to instant admiration.

He met the girl at dinner. She gave him one long, earnest look that he felt at once an inquiry and a challenge, and then she directed her conversation to Mrs. Elliott.

Alger was piqued. He was accustomed to more attention from young women. She related some of the incidents of her trip.

"We had a concert each evening. There were three girls in our Pullman coming to Boston to study music. They sang well."

"And you played, I suppose, Miss Elliott?" Alger could not forbear the question.

She turned her glance upon him briefly. "Oh, I scraped my little best," coolly.

Alger felt the rebuff, but he shot a triumphant glance at his aunt.

As the evening progressed Alger began to wish that he could win some pleasant look or word from the girl and to deeply resent his inability to do so.

"Will you play for us, Miss Elliott?" he asked, more humbly than was his habit.

She was about to decline, but Mrs. Elliott added quickly: "For me, Vera, dear. I am so anxious to hear you."

The instrument with which Vera returned to the room caught Alger's discriminating eye at once.

"Where did you get this, Miss Elliott?" almost abruptly as he recognized its rarity and value.

"It is a gift from my master. He had owned it for many years. He had also a Guarnerius and an Amati. But this was his 'sweetheart.' He always called it so."

"A master of the violin does not present the instrument he loves best—a Stradivarius almost beyond price—to a pupil who merely 'scrapes,'" thought Alger.

"Did he have many pupils, Miss Elliott?" experimentally.

"No one but myself. He is old and can no longer play. Age has stiffened his fingers. But he played once. Oh, how he could play! He taught me from a little child, and when I could play—to please him—he gave me this."

"Your teacher was a German?" tentatively.

"A Belgian," quietly. "Now you shall hear the voice of the Stradivarius."

She tuned the strings and played. There was certainty of chord fingering, a strength, an almost manliness, combined with emotional warmth, about her interpretation of the difficult Bach sonata that amazed Alger.

"Bach's D Minor Sonata is not for amateurs," he said gravely to his aunt. "Miss Elliott's gift is beyond question. She would rank with the great violinists of the present day."

"I think John possessed some musical ability," replied Mrs. Elliott serenely.

The girl raised her bow with an indescribable gesture of reverence. "My mother," proudly, "was a De Beriot. My master is my grandfather. I did not wish to seem to boast. He is Francis Auguste de Beriot."

As the days went by he found himself desperately in love with the girl and unable to win from her anything more than the most chilling courtesy. He had not even the satisfaction of confiding in Mrs. Elliott. Once when he tried to speak of Vera, meaning to confess his love for the girl, his aunt interrupted him coldly. "Say no more, Paul. I accepted your decision as final, you will remember, and a later will leaves all I possess to the Home For Aged Men."

She swept angrily from the room. Alger stood for a moment as if stunned; then he laughed aloud. "That's good news! Now there's no money in the way, and I'll move heaven and earth to win the loveliest girl that ever"—

"'Came out of the west,'" quoted a merry voice, and the portiers parted and Vera stepped from the window seat into the room.

Alger sprang forward hastily.

"Vera," eagerly, "you've known all the while that I love you"—

"A girl from the west, brought up on a cattle ranch?" she questioned, holding him back with her hand on his breast.

"I don't care where you're from, or anything else, if you'll only say you love me, Vera," pleadingly.

"A girl who doesn't know a sonata from a sandwich?" mischievously.

"Vera, forgive me for that and say you love me."

"Paul," seriously, "I've loved you ever since I was a little girl. See!" She drew a locket from her bosom and pressed back the cover.

Alger gazed in bewilderment. It was his own face that looked up at him.

"Aunt Ruth sent that to my father. I claimed it as mine and have worn it always."

"Vera," with his arms about her, "why have you been so cruel to me when I've tried so hard"—

"I feared you might propose to me to please Aunt Ruth and—and became of the money."

"Here, here! What's all this about?" Aunt Ruth's voice sounded harshly at the door.

They turned toward her together.

"Vera has promised to marry me, Aunt Ruth."

"And my latest will"— She fairly hurled the words at them.

"We don't mind!" they cried together rapturously.

—"was never signed," added Aunt Ruth in a changed voice, and they heard her laughing as she softly closed the door and left them to their happiness.

Nova Scotia Has Enrolled 1200 Men in 2 Days

HALIFAX, N.S., March 3. — The greatest recruiting campaign in Nova Scotia since the war began is now in full swing, under the leadership of Col. Addison H. Borden, of the 85th Nova Scotia Battalion, C.E.F., now being mobilized at Halifax.

This Province had recently conferred upon it the distinction of being appointed to raise a Highland brigade for overseas service to be commanded by one of her own native born sons, Col. Borden.

The present 85th is to form one battalion, and the campaign to raise the four thousand men required for the remaining three battalions was launched on Monday. The whole Province is behind the movement and in the first two days twelve hundred men were enrolled. This beats all recruiting records in this Province.

Touring Province.

Col. Borden has started a tour of the Province with his military band, commencing with a rousing meeting at Lunenberg Tuesday evening. Many Nova Scotians abroad are sending messages asking that places be held for them until they can fix up their business affairs and hurry home to enlist.

One battalion is being raised in Cape Breton, the second in Pictou, Antigonish, Colchester and Cumberland Counties and the third in Halifax and western counties. It is believed now that the Nova Scotia Kilties Brigade will be fully recruited in ten days.

SURGICAL CASE WAS STOLEN

Lindsay, March 3. — On Tuesday evening while Dr. Blanchard was called to attend a man who had taken ill on Kent Street, some sneak thief carried off his surgical case. On Wednesday the case was found in the Separate School yard by one of the pupils, but the bottles were missing. The police believe that the thief is addicted to the drug habit, and lifted the case in order to satisfy his craving.

Last week Dr. Nesbitt's dental parlor was broken into and a quantity of chloroform, cement, etc., stolen.

Establish Rule For Council Chamber Use

The use of the Council Chamber for various public meetings was turned over to the Property Committee last night. Mayor Duffus had this topic on his slate and, after a brief discussion, it was decided to ask the Committee to establish some rule for the letting of the Chamber.

Ald. Duncan stated that the chamber had to be scrubbed and cleaned after every meeting, including Agricultural exhibition directorate, Horticultural Society, etc. This extra work had to be provided for in the Property Committee's estimate, a woman being engaged to do the scrubbing the cost of which amounts to an appreciable sum during the year.

Ald. Stratton regarded this as part of the caretaker's duty and was provided for in the by-law.

ABSENT 23 YEARS, RETURNS, SEEKING WIFE'S TOMBSTONE

STAMFORD, Conn., March 3.—Having been absent from his home for twenty-three years without explanation and not being certain that his wife was living, when he wished to return a few days ago Frederick C. Prange, formerly a prominent resident of this city, went to a cemetery and searched for her tombstone. Not finding any bearing her name, he ventured to address a letter to her here, and today this resulted in a reunion with his wife, his daughter and his son. He also was surprised to be introduced to a pretty girl, nineteen years old, who is his grand daughter.

When Prange left Stamford in 1893, he was one of the most prominent men here. He had a prosperous business, was a charter member of Puritan Lodge of Odd Fellows and was a political power and the daily associate of Edward J. Tupper, formerly Mayor.

He told his wife he was going West to select a city for their future home, in which he could make more money than he was making here. That was the last heard of him. He never wrote to his family. Two years later his daughter, Miss Alita Prange, became the wife of Henry J. Flick, ow a leading photographer here. Hinson studied dentistry, and now has one of the largest practices in Connecticut. The young lady granddaughter who surprised Prange to-day is the daughter of Mrs. Flick.

Mrs. Flick received a letter from her husband from New York yesterday, the first she had heard of him, stating he had made a fortune and wished to return home. She and her daughter, Mrs. Flick met him at the Grand Central Terminal in New York this morning, and later returned to the Flick home here with him.

He is now sixty-nine years old and not in the best of health, therefore his relatives would not permit him to be interviewed. They said he told them that soon after leaving Stamford he fell from a horse and after that remember d nothing of his family or previous life until a short time ago. He went to California and, with officers in Los Angeles, accumulated a considerable fortune in the mining business.

The desire to see his family, memory of whom had returned, caused him to come East recently. Not knowing his wife was still living, he went to Hackensack, N.J., where her family lived, and searched the cemetery there for her tombstone. When he did not find it he addressed a letter to her, and that resulted in the meeting.

Interesting Figures On Earnings of Railwaymen

MONTREAL, P.Q., March 3.—An interesting statement has been issued by the Western Association of Railways as to the rates of wages paid in 1915. For typical months the authenticated pay-rolls of Western Roads show that all the engineers, 29,446, earned $4,255,686, or $149.-61 per month each, while all firemen averaged $84.84. The average engineer worked 22.2 days of 10 1-2 hours, per month, for 64 cents per hour. The average fireman worked 19.6 days of 10 1-2 hours, per month, for 41 cents an hour.

Passenger engineers, excluding those not available for duty and extra men, earned an average of $7.66 per day of 7.1 hours and $1.80.75 per month for 23 1-2 days. Engineers in through or irregular freight service averaged $7.37 per day of 11.1 hours, and $164.93 per month for 22.4 days. Those in local or way-freight service averaged $7.37 per day of 11.1 hours, and $168.11 per month for 23 1-2 days. Engineers in yard service averaged $4.93 a day of 11.4 hours, and $131.64 per month for 26.7 hours. Passenger firemen averaged $4.88 a day of 7 1-2 hours, and $113.66 a month for 23.3 days. Firemen in through or irregular freight service made $4.80 a day of 11 hours, and $105.50 a month for 22 days, in local or way freight service, $4.55 a day of 11.7 hours, and $108.77 a month of 23 1-2 days, in yard service, $3.01 a day of 11 1-2 hours, and $81.43 a month for 27.1 days. Averages per engineer and firemen would have been higher if many had not voluntarily laid off when they could have worked.

Dear Sir,—In spite of the repeated warnings in the press, information is almost daily being received of inmates of placarded houses ignoring the quarantine regulations, and I have also personally within the past few days discovered cases of measles that had not been reported to the Medical Officer of Health. We have been loath to prosecute on account of the heavy penalty attached to this offence, but when people from purely selfish motives display such a deliberate contempt for the law, we cannot condone such action without ourselves becoming accessories after the fact. Had all cases of measles been reported and the quarantine regulations been closely observed, the present epidemic might not have assumed the proportions it has, and the suffering and sorrow it has entailed might have been avoided, at least to some extent.

Putting all sentiment aside and viewed only from the point of social economy, human life has more than trebled in value within the last eighteen months, and it behooves us to aid in every possible way every effort to conserve our national resources in this direction.

If a child dies of disease contracted through some one's wilful disregard of the laws and regulations devised for the control or suppression of such diseases that child is as surely murdered as were the victims of Lucrezia Borgia and Catharine de Medici, one of whose favourite methods of disposing of those whom they considered it politic to remove from their paths was to inoculate them with disease germs.

I feel strongly on this matter, not so much because of my vocation as because I have been brought into close contact with the suffering and misery caused by the after effects of this insidious disease, and have seen many promising careers ruined as a result thereof, and it is for this reason I wish to make an earnest personal appeal to those to whom these remarks may apply to act "white." There is a great deal of truth in Marie Corelli's remark that "from man's culpable carelessness and neglect of the laws of health has come every disease, as from man's egotism, unbelief and selfishness have sprung all the crimes in the calendar."

Yours truly,
C. A. G. Spence.

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I believe your paper has the largest circulation in the northern part of the county of Peterborough, and it is to eb regretted that in your issue of the 24th inst. that you, Sir Wm. Mulock and the Grand Jury have most unfairly foisted the scene of the horrible Lindsay crimes on this northern country. When, as a matter of fact, it took place in one of the oldest townships in the southern part of the county. And the criminal was not an agriculturist, but earned his living mostly by cutting wood for one of your townsmen and lived within two miles of a church. I pray that the time will soon arrive when sermons, prohibition agitation, and deputations to the government asking for laws to send people to heaven will be done away with, and the time of our clergy given to seek and save the lost sheep. Perhaps those poor wretched lost sheep might have been found. They were only two miles from a so-called house of God.

I do not for one moment think that you, Sir William or the Grand Jury intentionally cast reflection on the morality of the people of this section, but made a geographical error. It would be well done, if the Grand Jury would visit this northern country and inspect a company of 50 men drilling at Apsley, sons of these northern farmers, and they will agree with me that morally and physically they are equal to any in the Dominion. I am well acquainted with the settlers in this northern section and only know of two cases calling for attention and they are old people, lately residents of your city.

A few months ago a most infamous and untruthful report was published in one of the Toronto papers on the subject of the life and morals of my fellow residents, under the signature of Prof. Garnow; but he was a German, and lying is the essence of German kultur to-day.

Yours truly,
A Resident.

Burleigh, Feb. 28th.

So far as the Examiner's share is concerned the most we did was to comment upon Sir William Mulock's suggestion, that the occupants of certain parts of the north country should be removed to some better district. The Examiner did not specify any part of the county, but referred generally to those sections of the northern part of Ontario where successful farming conditions were impossible. A suggestion was made that such lands might be exchanged under fair conditions for poovincial lands in some part of the province, where it was possible to make a living without a struggle that involved a tendency to degrading conditions.

HOW TO GET STRONG

A SIMPLE REMEDY.

Whatever the cause, we want to say to every person who needs strength, you need Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, as it is the most efficient strength creator we have in our store. ere is proof from Dorchester Mass.:

"I dont know what we would do without Vinol in our family. I was weak, nervous and run-down as the result of an operation, and Vinol restored my strength. Then Grandmother had a nervous breakdown, and Vinol built her up and restored her health and strength after everything else had failed. We have used Vinol for 13 years in our family, and would not be without it in the house." Myrtle L. Healy, Dorchester, Mass.

We believe in Vinol because we know it is a great strength creator,—due to the extractive medicinal elements of fresh cod livers, without oil, combined with peptonate of iron and beef peptone, all dissolved in a pure medicinal wine, so we always return the purchase money if Vinol fails to benefit those who buy it.

France Calls on Eastern Asia To Help In The European Munition Plants

An order typical of the French way of handling the munition problem is that just issued by Mr. Albert Thomas, Under Secretary of State for Munitions in France, who by circular letter instructs all the private manufacturers to prepare lists of their workers and detailed accounts of their special aptitudes. Military experts then will examine the qualifications of the workmen in the factory and rearrange them according to their capacity where this may seem desirable.

When a study of the efficiency of individual workmen was made, it was found that many men who were specialists in certain branches, particularly in the large cities such as Paris and Lyons, were employed at work which could be accomplished equally well by less skilled or by unskilled workmen. The purpose of the new order is to obtain the very highest pitch of successful production for each factory that is working for the government.

"I have decided," says Mr. Thomas, "that the workmen will be sent to places where there is need of their services. The officers in charge of the 'forge service,' aided by the government employees who have kept records of the workmen and by special technical experts whom we have selected for this purpose, will decide in what place all machinists are to be employed. It is not at a time when we have such pressing necessities, as for instance that of the aviation service, that we can tolerate a moment's hesitation in this matter.

Accept No Protests.

"This department has caused an examination to be made of all the cases of unqualified men and will accept no protest, but will require that the men be employed according to the genius needs of the national defence. The law of 17th August, 1915, was specially designed to allow the Minister of War to have the right to place men where they are most useful."

Orders have been issued to workmen themselves, so that if they believe they are capable of work of a kind superior to that on which they are employed they may communicate with the military authorities for the purpose of having their services utilized in a more efficient manner. All kinds of expert workmen and professional men have been directly circularized for this purpose and are to report directly to the army.

The list includes indiscriminately such trades as blacksmiths, tinsmiths, colour mixers, electricians, puddlers, moulders, riveters, draughtsmen, etc. By this arrangement, not only the forces of the nation as a whole will be employed to the utmost energy, but the forces of the individual will be exploited in the most adequate manner.

It is believed that both Great Britain and Italy gradually will feel compelled to adopt similar methods, as the assuming of such a burden by one of the Allies will manifestly seem an unfair arrangement. The task of placing the British workmen directly under government control and, thus violating the now time-honoured position of the British trades unions, will not be a light one, it is believed, but Mr. Lloyd-George, to whom it will be entrusted, has shown a disposition to achieve results which have been considered almost impossible of attainment.

Mobilization of Women.

With regard to the mobilization of women in France, a first step is being taken in the hospital service. An order was issued by General Galliemi, Minister of War, and addressed to all the Under-Secretaries of State and to the generals in command of districts requesting immediate information regarding all positions now filled by men who might be employed in active military service and which could be filled by women. Reports on this subject have been pouring in to the War Office and an organization has been created to handle the substitution of men by women.

A beginning has been made in the hospitals and ambulance services. The physicians and surgeons in charge of the hospital, ambulance, and sanitary services have been consulted, and as a result of their judgment, it has been decided that the service in the hospitals in the interior of the country and behind the lines will be entrusted almost in its entirety to the women.

Women also will to some extent be employed in ambulance service near the Front, but the actual medical service at the Front will continue to be carried out by men, as the French Government has shown a determination to prevent women rom taking any part in the service that will bring trem actually into the fighting line. A certain percentage of men also will be allowed to remain in the hospitals, as there is special work in connection with the handling of patients for which women are not fitted.

Thus some stretcher bearers will be necessary and most of the drivers of ambulances also will be retained, but in both cases men who for various reasons are unfit for service in the fighting lines will, when possible, be substituted for men who can take their places in the trenches.

The French reports on the other departments where men are to be replaced by women are not yet available, but it is expected that the results will be highly in the interest of France's fighting efficiency.

GOODS CAME IN FREE OF DUTY

According to Evidence Revealed This Morning Before Public Accountants Committee

Special Cable to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, March 3.—Before the Public Accounts Committee this morning A. G. F. Drury, customs collector at Morrisburg, gave evidence concerning the importation of large quantities of military supplies during the early days of the war, by Col. J. Wesley Allison, and his associates.

The witness stated that in August, 1914, he had been handed a letter from John McDougald, commissioner of customs, by his son, R. B. McDougald, instructing him to allow all goods consigned to Mr. Allison "and other parties" to come in free of duty. As a consequence very large quantities of goods in boxes and packages had come across from Waddington, N.Y. So far as he knew they might still be coming in, as the order had not been countermanded.

UTILITIES COMMISSION WILL NEGOTIATE WITH OTONABEE COMPANY

For the Purchase of System Required by the City and Report to the Council—Scrap Copper So Valuable Otonabee Co. Dismantling Part of Its System.

The sharp advance of the copper market under the pressure of war demands, is making scrap copper worth more than what it cost. To the Otonabee Power Co. this must come as a welcome reinforcement in their prospective withdrawal from operations in Peterborough. Already they have taken down and sold the wire from dam No. 5 to Auburn, Mr. T. F. Matthews remarked to the Council last night in discussing the final steps in the extension of the Hydro system to the sections of the Otonabee line desired by the city.

The Utilities Commission was authorized to negotiate with the Otonabee Power Co. for the purchase of their transmission lines in the city, or those not paralleled by the Hydro lines, and if an amount is arrived at satisfactory to the Commission they report to the Council. Alderman Stratton moved to this effect, and the whole matter was closed up in a few minutes

It was in this discussion that the value of scrap copper was mentioned. Mr. Matthews stated that copper had increased from 18 to 34 cents, and that scrap material would now yield more than its original cost. This would enable the Otonabee Power Co. to dispose of their wire at a decidedly advantageous price. Mr. Matthews was hopeful of bringing about a satisfactory arrangement with the Otonabee Power Co. in the near future.

HER SLIPPER IS DIAMOND MINE

Gems Fall Into Cobbler's Apron and When He Withholds Them Woman Causes Arrest.

NEW YORK, March 3.—While Leo Fredo was tinkering at a woman's dainty slipper, in his cobbling shop, at No. 2,800 Eighth avenue, yesterday diamond jewels began to clatter out of the pointed toe, falling in his apron. Before he had finished on this horn of plenty, Mrs. Mary Hecht, of Pocatello, Idaho, entered, much excited. She was accompanied by Karl Molinais, in whose home, at No. 253 West 124th street, she is a guest.

Mrs. Hecht demanded the return of her jewels, which she said were worth $1,700. She said Fredo refused, whereupon she caused his arrest on a charge of larceny, and in the Washington Heights Court he was held for examination today. Fredo gave the diamonds to Detective Wilkie, saying he had refused to give them to Mrs. Hecht as he did not know the jewels belonged to her.

CONVICT LAWYER TO ARGUE HIS APPEAL

ALBANY, March 3.—Burton K. Gibson, a New York lawyer, serving a sentence at Sing Sing for grand larceny, committed in connection with the settlement of the estate of Rose M. Seabo, who was drowned in Greenwood lake, Orange County, in 1912, will argue his appeal from the judgment of conviction before the Court of appeals to-day. He came to Albany from Sing Sing for this purpose, but his case was not reached up to the time of adjournment. Under an order secured from Justice Rudd, Gibson was remanded to the Albany county jail until to-day. His Sing Sing attendant went to jail with him.

Robber's Victim To Aid Family

Managing Director of Hotel to Care for Wife and Child of Convict Whom He Prosecuted.

NEW YORK, March 3.—While Walter Farley, recently sentenced to ten years in Sing Sing Prison by Judge Wadhams in Special Session Court, for robberies committed at the Majestic Hotel, is serving his sentence Townsend Copeland, managing director of the hotel, will care for the prisoner's wife and infant child.

Farley was captured by John W. Heath, staying in the hotel, after he had robbed Mr. Heath's apartment and caused an affray of commotion by rushing through the corridors. When he was sentenced Farley's young wife with a two-weeks-old baby was in the court room, and when Mr. Townsend heard that she was penniless, he decided to look after both of them.

PERISCOPES ON MINES.

Cast Adrift in Hope of Inducing Allied Ships to Ram.

BALTIMORE, March 3.—Floating mines, equipped with periscopes, is said to be the latest device now being used by the Germans in bringing about the destruction of enemy ships, according to Capt. B. J. Keelty, of the British steamship Hartfield. The Hartfield arrived here Sunday from London.

Capt. Keelty tells of having sighted one of the new destructive agents in the English Channel. The periscope gave it the appearance of a submarine. He did not attempt to win the Admiralty's regard of $2,500 for ramming a submarine, but reported it to a patrol boat. According to masters of British vessels the placing of a periscope on a mine was devised for the express purpose of inducing some of the ships of the allied nations to ram which would have resulted in the blowing up of the ship and possibly the loss of life.

It is understood that a number of periscoped mines have been cast adrift around Britain and a fleet of patrols are engaged in removing them from the track of navigation.

FEARING THE DISGRACE TWICE TRIES SUICIDE

Herbert Winters Makes Desperate Efforts To End His Life.

WINDSOR, March 1.—Fearing his arrest would bring disgrace to his people, Herbert Winters, aged 26, held at police headquarters here for alleged fraud, made two determined attempts at suicide in his cell this afternoon.

The first time he was discovered in a state of collapse on the floor, after he had nearly strangled himself with his necktie. Medical aid was required to resuscitate him. The second attempt was made two hours later. Winters tied his belt around the bars of the cell door and tried to hang himself. He was found in time, however.

The man says he is well connected in Detroit, and prefers to die rather than go to prison.

MAY EAT AFTER AN OPERATION

Food and New Anaesthetic Are Said to be Friends.

Anaesthetics that permit the subject of an operation to sit up on the operating table and ask what time dinner will be served, and who won the game, within two or three minutes after physicians have ceased administering the stuff, are the latest wrinkles on the parchment of science, says the Detroit News. Ether is all right, but everybody knows that if food is mentioned to anyone coming out of an etheral trance, the patient will stand a good chance of losing his soul because of the language that will issue from his lips. The best thing is nitrous oxide and oxygen, according to a paper by Dr. C. D. Brooks in the latest bulletin of the Wayne County Medical Association.

This matter of taking ether is serious, putting the road to a man's heart, his stomach, in very bad shape, generally speaking. The second day of an attack of sea sickness has little, if anything, on the experiences of many people recovering from anaesthesia by ether. And the idea of food is relished about as much as the idea of sitting on a red-hot stove. Very low in his mind, indeed is the patient whose stomach is giving an imitation of a ship in a storm due to the effects of ether fumes.

INTENDED FOR GERMANS.

British Prize Court Condemns Cargo of Aluminum.

LONDON, March 3.—The British Prize Court condemned fifty tons of aluminum shipped by Lisa Berger & Co., in America, on the Swedish ship Augusta to a Swedish port, but destined, according to the judge, for German owners. The consignment was seized in the Orkney Islands.

Replying to a question in the House of Commons today concerning the supply of glycerine and to a suggestion that importation of American soap should be stopped during the war, David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, ignored the latter suggestion and stated that no glycerine whatever was being purchased in America by the British Government.

GIRLS FACE MURDER CHARGE

OTTAWA, March 3.—Mildred Brohart, Pauline Brohart and May Bradda, were charged in the police court with the murder of an infant child several weeks old, of which Mildred Brohart was the mother. The body was found yesterday under the floor of a shed at a house where her cousin, Pauline Brohart, was employed. They were remanded for a week.

French Aviation Service Works in Perfect Order

"If France is suffering from a crisis in aviation," says Mr. Regis Gignoux in a recent issue of the Figaro, "it is a crisis of increase." In company with a party of other French newspapermen, he made a tour of inspection of aeroplane factories and proving grounds, at the request of the War Department.

"It is unnecessary to say," he goes on, "that every one in the factories is working at top speed. Having lost a little time, they are now rapidly making up for it. We were really ashamed to stop before the busy workmen, with our hands in our pockets, or to pass too quickly before a marvel of mechanism. From the factories of the Gnome and Rhone motors we went to Clerget's. Then to the de Dion-Bouton factory, at all these places obtaining an agreeable impression of our offensive and defensive force. This was augmented at the Renault works. Afterward we saw the Farman factory, the Voisin, the Nieuport, and last, but not least, the Caudron, where they have gone back to the principles laid down by the Wrights—with two propellers, which are driven here by two separate motors.
